Paul Winter Consort To Perform in Brattleboro, VT

A benefit concert by the Paul Winter Consort will be held at the Latchis Theatre in Brattleboro, VT, on October 25 at 7:30 p.m.

The performance, a fundraiser for the Guilford Community Church's green-up efforts, will highlight soloists Paul Winter, Eugene Friesen, and Theresa Thomason, three Grammy Award-winning and internationally recognized performers.

The Greater Brattleboro Choir of the Community, under the direction of Peter Amidon, will join the Consort on stage to perform several songs.

Soprano saxophonist Paul Winter is one of the pioneers of world music, combining elements of African, Asian, Latin, and Russian music with American jazz. Winter was one of the first to incorporate the sounds of nature and wildlife into his acoustical compositions, including the complex and poignant vocalizations of the humpback whale, wolves and birds.

Cellist Eugene Friesen is active internationally as a concert artist, composer, conductor and teacher. A graduate of Yale School of Music, he has been featured on recordings and in concerts utilizing his love for improvisation and rhythm in contemporary, jazz, and world fiddle styles.

American Gospel music singer Theresa Thomason has enthralled audiences in over 150 European cities, in addition to performing live at the United Nations for the Dalai Lama. She is a featured artist with the Paul Winter Consort at the annual performances at St. John the Divine, the world's largest cathedral, in New York City.

"We are thrilled to bring the Paul Winter Consort to Brattleboro, to share their powerful body of work which celebrates the cultures and creatures of the whole Earth," said Lise Sparrow, pastor of the Guilford Community Church, UCC which is known in the region for its musical ministry, its commitment to the environment, and its global and community outreach. Tickets are $75 in advance for front orchestra seats (includes a post-concert reception with the performers); $40 all other downstairs seats; $20 balcony seats, available online at www.BrattleboroTix.com and at the door.

For more information, contact the Guilford Community Church at (802) 257-0994 or visit www.guilfordchurch.org/PaulWinter.

The Balance of Winter

by Bill Felker

As frost time comes closer, I bring in the tomato plants I seeded in July, and I set up the greenhouse for winter.

The bugs and I will fight there until the new year. It will be a fair fight up until then, but they will begin to win as January ends, their ability to breed outlasting my ability to keep up with them, or my hope of overcoming them.

I could, I suppose, eliminate the insects with strong and efficient poisons, but they are part of a psychological system as well as an ecological system I set in place each year.

Throughout the fall and early winter, I can pretend I am lost in a seasonal wilderness, suspended in time. I have escaped the lush expectations of summer. I can hide and rest. I don't need to produce. I can build energy. I can wait and plan.

In this hermetic endeavor, or, the tomatoes, the white flies, mites and aphids are my allies and my guides. I don't need the tomatoes for my survival. Their fruit is a gratuitous response to my awareness. And so the bugs are not so much a threat. In fact, they keep me on my toes. They are a gauge of my interest and the quality of my hibernation. As long as I keep them in check, I know the trajectory of winter is on the rise.

Once the insects get the upper hand, however, I know my resolve is weakening. I know I am getting restless for spring. And the tomatoes, of course, know too. By the first of March, bugs or no bugs, they will become tired and pale. The season will fall apart, the balance of winter will be tipped, and I will grope to find a new purpose. I will be less dependable and caring. I will be looking elsewhere.

12th Annual Gilfeather Turnip Festival

It's "Turnip Time" again in Wardsboro, VT on Saturday, October 25 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., when hundreds will gather to celebrate the town's own heirloom vegetable at the 12th Annual Gilfeather Turnip Festival. Bushels and bushels of turnips along with craft and farmers' market vendors arrive early on festival day to "take over" the small village, inside and outside of Town Hall and under big and small tents on Main Street. The free event takes place rain or shine, and is the largest community fundraising event supporting the town's public library.

Farmer John Gilfeather could never have imagined that one day his town would celebrate the humble tuber that he first propagated in the early 1900s, with an all-day festival. Gilfeather Farm still exists, right in the heart of Wardsboro, and the current owners carry on the tradition of Farmer John by planting a large crop of the heirloom turnip that originated on their farm at the turn of the century.

Organizers expect this 12th year to be the biggest and best yet. More and more people are discovering the culinary possibilities of the now-famous heirloom vegetable, and the menu at the Turnip Café provides evidence that turnips are adaptable to sweet as well as savory offerings. It's exciting that a humble root vegetable—which some say is actually more of a rutabaga—has attracted much attention to the small town even after leaf-season has peaked, and all for a good cause as well.

More than one hundred pounds of Gilfeathers are cooked for the event's signature Gilfeather turnip soup. Bushels more go to volunteer cooks to prepare the savory tastings for entrees and sweet dessert tastings on the menu. A new feature this year is a "chef's station" where diners can sample turnip latkes cooked to order and served with real maple syrup from a local sugar house. The Turnip Café, located in the Wardsboro Town Hall, serves homemade cider donuts and coffee beginning at 10 a.m., followed by lunch featuring à la carte servings of turnip tastings plus the delicious, creamy Gilfeather turnip soup from 11 a.m. until the food runs out. Hot soup is also served at an outdoor kiosk. Tastings as well as soup are available for "take out" or to enjoy at a sit-down lunch. All tasting recipes are found in the 2nd edition of the Gilfeather Turnip Cookbook on sale in the Turnip Shoppe.

The large turnip cart outside Town Hall is always loaded with hundreds of pounds of Gilfeathers, all shapes and sizes, many grown on neighboring farms such as Dutton's in Newfane or in local gardens. Turnips are sold by the pound and "they go fast" according to the Friends' top turnip sales person, Cris Tarnay, who has "manned" the outdoor turnip cart from the beginning of the festival, selling organic and non-organic turnips and Gilfeather seed packets. Growers agree they are hardy and easy to cultivate from seed, but shouldn't be harvested before a bite of hard frost. They acquire a notable sweetness after a frost and that sweetness is what makes the Gilfeather so special.

The most exciting part of the Turnip Festival is the annual Turnip Contest, free for all to enter. Contestants may register Gilfeathers in one or more categories from 10 a.m. to 12 noon upstairs in the Town Hall. Contest categories are: largest grown in Wardsboro; largest grown outside Wardsboro; best turnip name; and wicked-weirdest turnip. The largest turnip, total weight with greens, will be awarded "Grand Champion" of the festival. Winners are announced and ribbons awarded immediately after the judging. All children 12 and under who enter a turnip will receive a personalized, honorable mention award ribbon. Margaret Roach, noted author and former garden editor for Martha Stewart "Living" will judge this year's contest. Roach's third and most recent book, The Backyard Parable, will be on sale, and she will be on hand to discuss her love of gardening and to sign her book.

Emma Hoos and her dad, Bill Hoos, proudly display their Turnip Contest entry grown in their Wardsboro garden, one of many outstanding Gilfeather® turnips at the 2013 Gilfeather® Turnip Festival. This year's festival is October 25. Growers can enter the free contest by registering their Gilfeathers® at the Wardsboro Town Hall from 10 a.m. until noon.

More than 30 craft and farmers' market vendors will be set up inside Town Hall as well as outdoors under the big tent. A complete vendor list is available at www.friendsofwardsborolibrary.org. One of the most popular booths is the Turnip Shoppe featuring shirts, hats, aprons, market bags, cook books, DVDs, children's books, and mugs—all about the Gilfeather turnip—as well as many other gift items of local interest. The Turnip Shoppe is located in a separate room on the first floor of the Town Hall along with the "Christmas in Vermont" shop featuring holiday ornaments designed and handmade by local crafters.

Live music is always a big draw at the Turnip Festival. Wardsboro's own troubadour, Jimmy Knapp, loves to serenade visitors throughout the festival with his original Gilfeather turnip ballads and many more of his guitar compositions. Other local musicians and entertainers are scheduled to perform in the Town Hall and the big tent throughout the event.

The festival is a fundraiser for the Friends of the Wardsboro Library for the support of the Gloria Danforth Memorial Building, the home of the Wardsboro Public Library.

Wardsboro is in the middle of southern Vermont on Rt. 100, south of Rt. 30. For more information call (802) 896-3416 or see www.friendsofwardsborolibrary.org.

Seasons of Middle Fall

by Bill Felker

The Week of the First Junco

This last week of early fall is the week the first slate-gray junco arrives for winter. Goldenrod is seeding now, pods of the eastern burning bush are open, hawthorn berries redden, wild grapes are purple, and the tree line that seemed so deep in summer just days ago is suddenly poised to break into its final color of the year.

When juncos arrive, streaks of scarlet appear on the oaks, shades of pink on the dogwoods. The catalpas and the cottonwoods blanch. Shagbark hickories, tulip trees, sassafras, elms, locusts and sweet gums change to full yellow, merge with the swelling orange of the maples to create a variegated archway into middle fall.

When the first junco appears, the terns and meadowlarks, yellow-rumped warblers and purple martins migrate. Turkey vultures gather from the north. Hawks move south, resting on fences and high wires to look for prey. Titmice chirp, and sometimes cardinals sing. Robins give their short migration clucks.

As the canopy thins, hemlock, ragwort, yarrow, waterleaf, violets, wild ginger and sweet Cicely grow back. Mums are at their best, and the slowest raspberries ripen. Sometimes crabapple trees, forsythia and lilacs come into bloom again. Pussy willows that have lost their foliage to leaf miners sometimes make new leaves. But the tall sedums begin to relinquish their petals, and autumn crocuses die back. Asters are winding down; August's jumpseeds are jumping, touch-me-nots popping, thimble plants unraveling. The toothed leaves of beggarticks darken overnight. Buckeye fruits have fallen, and three-seeded mercury has lost its seeds.

Cabbage butterflies become more reckless in their search for nectar. Aphids disappear in the chilly nights. Cicadas die. Japanese beetles complete their season. Daddy longlegs disappear from the undergrowth, and spiders of all kinds move indoors. Damselflies are rare along the rivers now, and darners have left their suburban ponds.

The Week of the Final Monarchs

The last monarchs depart for Mexico as the high canopy thins and the burning bush turns scarlet. The redbuds and hickories shed quickly, and the land enters full maple-turn and middle fall. Many catalpas are down, beans left swinging in the wind. Ginkgo fruits, which will be on the ground by late November, are turning pink. Box elders, poplars, elms, red mulberries and sycamores are mottled.

Chimney swifts, wood thrushes, barn swallows and red-eyed vireos move out of the county this first week of middle fall. Flocks of blackbirds and robins migrate across the countryside. Yellow-bellied sapsuckers move through the woods. There are newborn grasshoppers in the field, but many of the adults are exhausted and dying. Woolly bear caterpillars suddenly multiply. Cobwebs are rare.

Half the goldenrod has rusted, and many of the varieties of asters deteriorate all at once. The brown seeds of the beggartick plants stick to your pants. Scattered watercress plants bloom one more time. New hepatica leaves are dark and strong along the rocky paths. Henbit that sprouted a month ago is two inches tall. The tips of spruce trees are putting on pale fresh growth. The low October sun brings a golden, second-spring glow to the grass.

The Center of Middle Fall

The chemical changes in the foliage that became noticeable six weeks ago accelerate until the fragile landscape turns all at once. Shagbark hickories, maples, sweet gums, oaks, sassafras, and sycamores reach peak color. Black walnuts, locusts, buckeyes, box elders, hackberries, pussy willows, ashes and cottonwoods are almost bare. Blueberry bushes are completely red. Vineyards are yellow and brown, only a few grapes left. Some ginkgoes are pale golden green, some just a little faded. Large patches of sky shine through the tattered canopy.

In the cooler, wetter nights, crickets and katydids are weakening. Only a few swallowtails and fritillaries visit the garden, and just a few fireflies glow in the grass. Out in the fields, almost all the wildflowers have gone to seed. Wild cucumber fruits are dry and empty. Hosta pods are splitting, black seeds ready to fall. Wild asparagus yellows by the roadsides. The final sedum blossoms are closing for the year. Quickweed still provides a deep green border to the paths, and a few lance-leaf and zigzag goldenrod still hold. Asters are still common, along with chicory and Queen Anne's lace. Pink smartweed keeps blossoming, and catchweed flowers again. Impatiens, petunias and geraniums that have escaped the frost still bloom with the hardier mums and pansies.

The Week Katydids Fall Silent

In the last week of middle fall, the oaks and the osage, white mulberries, magnolias, ginkgoes and the late black and sugar maples move towards full color. The second tier of leaves, consisting mostly of the early maples, is coming down (in the first tier were the ashes and box elders, locusts and buckeyes).

As foliage thins, eastern phoebes, catbirds and house wrens depart. The last turkey vultures circle the northern states. Vast flocks of robins are fluttering, chattering, whinnying, and moving south through the high trees along the river valleys.

Starlings cackle and whistle in the osage. The last cabbage moths look for cabbages. The last daddy longlegs hunt in the flowerbeds. At night, crickets fill in for the silent katydids. Cattails begin to break apart. The final asters of the year go to seed. The final giant jimson weed opens in the cornfields. The last raspberries of the year redden in the sun.

A Walk in the Woods: 40 Years Of Tree Farming in Chester, VT

Meet at Jim and Ellie Gustafson's tree farm in Chester, VT on October 4, 2014 for a walk in the woods and a celebration of tree farming. The program runs 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., will take place rain or shine, and will require some walking. All are welcome.

When a young minister and his wife—living in a church-owned parsonage on minimal salary (think $3600/year)—start to consider purchasing real property, tree farming comes to mind. In the 1960s, the Gustafsons began their long journey as land stewards and Tree Farmers. With the help of multiple county foresters and consulting foresters, Don and Nina Huffer, they pruned and thinned and logged and made syrup and firewood and had lots of fun in the doing. Fifty years later, they are still at it, having recently completed the largest logging job, harvesting roughly 208,000 board feet.

Please come and help celebrate the Gustafson's long commitment as good stewards of the land. Bring a bag lunch. No cost but pre-registration is appreciated.

September 24: Hickory Nutting Moon is new at 1:14 a.m.
October 1: The moon enters its second quarter at 2:33 p.m.
October 6: Lunar Perigee. October 8: The moon is full at 5:51 a.m. October 8: Total eclipse of the moon visible before sunrise. October 15: The moon enters its final phase at 2:12 p.m. October 18: Lunar Apogee. October 23: The Frog and Toad Migration Moon is new at 4:57 p.m. October 30: The moon enters its second quarter at 9:48 p.m.

The Sun

October 23 is Cross Quarter Day, the halfway mark between autumn equinox and winter solstice. The sun enters Scorpio at the same time. Also on October 23: A partial eclipse of the sun visible during the late afternoon. Of course, don't let your animals stare directly at the sun!

The Planets

Venus remains out of sight throughout October. Jupiter rises well before dawn in Cancer, then in Leo, and remains the morning star. Mars is an evening star, visible in the southwest throughout the month in Ophiucus. Saturn in Libra will be too close to the sun for easy observation in middle autumn.

The Stars

The Pleiades, and the Hyades of Taurus, lie on the eastern horizon after dark, announcing middle autumn in the Northern Hemisphere. Summer's Milky Way, however, is still directly overhead, and June's Corona Borealis has still not set by 10:00 p.m. Cygnus the swan is still high above you, along with August's Aquila, and Lyra. The pointers of the

Lil's maple is golden now,
And the Danielsons' bright orange
Across the street.

Every fall, I watch the passage
Of those trees through October
Even though Lil died
And the Danielsons moved
To a nursing home years ago.

Each tree is a guide
That shows a different time in place.
Lil's maple is later than all the others on High Street,
Often waiting to turn until the first day
Of November. Lil's maple is the far anchor
Of middle autumn. When Lil's comes down,
I know the ginkgoes have fallen
Near my old office window,
And the white mulberry behind our house
Will be bare within a week.

The Danielsons' tree never varies,
Always marks the leafturn center,
And I could stay here at my window
And attend to nothing else, knowing that the whole world
Was really spinning by design,
And I could never lose my way again.

The Shooting Stars

The Draconid meteors arrive in the late evenings of October 7 and 8. The Draconids usually appear before midnight, unlike the Orionids, which will peak in and around Orion near and after midnight of October 4 and November 14.

Meteorology

Weather history suggests that cold waves usually reach Vermont on or about the following dates: October 2, 7, 13, 17, 23, and 30. Storms can occur prior to the passage of each major front. Fish, game, livestock and people tend to feed more and are more active (and often more troublesome) as the barometer is falling one to three days before these weather systems.

Fall Festivities At Billings Farm & Museum

Billings Farm & Museum is celebrating its 31st anniversary this year. Over one million visitors—hailing from every state in the U.S. and over 40 foreign countries—have made the farm and museum an important part of their visit to Vermont. Billings Farm is an operating Jersey dairy farm that continues a 143-year tradition of agricultural excellence and offers farm programs and historical exhibits that explore Vermont's rural heritage and values. The Farm & Museum has served as a gateway to Vermont's rural heritage.

Whether you are a visitor or make Vermont your home, plan a trip to Billings Farm this fall. You'll have a great time!

Pumpkin & Apple Celebration

Come to our annual Pumpkin & Apple Celebration on Saturday and Sunday, October 4 & 5, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Voted by the Vermont Chamber of Commerce a Top 10 Fall Event for 2014, the weekend features hands-on activities and programs, plus pumpkin and apple displays highlighting these two important fall crops, their historical importance, and many uses. Horse-drawn wagon rides are included with admission.

Take the apple taste test and vote for your favorite! Lend a hand pressing cider, making pumpkin or apple ice cream, and peeling apples for drying. Join in the "pumpkin and apple fun" with apple races, pumpkin bowling, apples-on-a-string, sampling pumpkin bread and pumpkin Legos®. See apple butter being made in the farmhouse kitchen and take home a recipe for "Pumpkin Pie."

30th Annual Harvest Weekend

Harvest Weekend takes place on October 11 & 12, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Come for 19th century harvest activities and programs for the entire family.

Each day, a traditional husking bee will begin at noon, followed by a barn dance from 1-4 p.m. Lend a hand pressing cider, preserving apples, threshing grain, and making butter and ice cream. Harvesting the heirloom vegetable garden will be nearing completion and children can help dig potatoes and other root crops and learn how crops are "put up" for the winter.

Other activities include shelling beans, fence building, apples-on-a-string, and 19th century games. Hot-spiced cider and homemade doughnuts will be on hand for all!

Autumn Wagon Ride Weekend

Enjoy late fall foliage at the Autumn Wagon Ride Weekend on Saturday and Sunday, October 18 & 19, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Capture the brilliant colors of a Vermont autumn on a scenic narrated horse-drawn wagon ride around the farm fields. Billings Farm's beautiful Percheron draft horses will pull the wagon.

Explore the dairy farm, see farm life exhibits and restored and furnished farmhouse, and enjoy programs and activities including cider pressing.

21st Annual Family Halloween

You're invited to Family Halloween on Sunday, October 26, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Children in costume receive free admission when accompanied by an adult (adults pay regular admission fee).

Try pumpkin carving and doughnuts-on-a-string and cranking pumpkin ice cream. Enjoy horse-drawn wagon rides plus "not-too-scary" Halloween stories. Pumpkin games and animal programs will be featured. Costume parades at 12 & 2 p.m., will be led by the Billings Farm's friendly steers-in-training, George & Marsh, and all children will receive a ribbon.

The Billings Farm & Museum is owned and operated by The Woodstock Foundation, Inc., a charitable non-profit institution founded by Mary French and Laurance Spelman Rockefeller.

Admission to the special events includes all programs and activities, plus the working dairy farm, farm life exhibits, and farm house. Admission: adults $14, 62 & over $13, children 5-15 $8, 3-4: $4, 2 & under free.

Billings Farm & Museum is open daily May 1 through October 31, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., weekends Nov. - Feb., and Christmas & Presidents' weeks, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Farm & Museum is located one-half mile north of the Woodstock village green on Rt. 12. For information call (802) 457-2355. Visit www.billingsfarm.org.

23rd Annual Manchester Fall Art & Craft Festival

October 3-5, 2014

When autumn approaches, the craft festival season begins in earnest. The 23rd Annual Manchester Fall Art and Craft Festival kicks off American Craft Week in Vermont. The Festival will be held October 3-5 at the Practice Tee at Hunter Park on Rt. 7A, just north of town in Manchester Center, VT.

The Manchester show features 150 artists and artisans displaying and selling traditional and contemporary crafts and original art as well as a specialty food tent. Exhibitors are housed in large Camelot tents.

While craft shopping, customers are delighted with culinary choices served by local restaurants and food trucks. Vermont craft beers are served to accompany the luncheon plates. Live music will be played here too. Besides savoring Vermont food and drink, there are many craft demos and a Vermont Cheese Tent.

Dennis Sparling brings Leonardo da Vinci

In a once in a lifetime experience, two famous "people" will attend this year's Festival. The eight-ft. tall Leonardo Da Vinci will appear as a sculpture inside an 18-ft. trailer. This piece has been created by one of Vermont's most respected sculptors, Dennis Sparling of New Haven, VT. Sparling says, "I arrived in Vermont in 1970, borrowed $60 from the new Vermont Craft Council run by D'Ann Fago—went dump diving for metals and arrived at the First Bennington Craft Show to sell nothing until two people came looking for me and helped me stay and get through the next 10 years in Vermont. Since then I have mainly sold my work out of state." His Vermont sculptures include the leapfrogging kids on Church Street in Burlington, a catamount on the UVM campus and the marquee for the Vergennes Opera House.

"Before Vermont I studied Architecture at Arizona State and University of Washington—built a gallery in Pioneer Square, Seattle, and collaborated with Tom Robins on 'The Vincent Van Gough Donut Festival'—then fled to Vermont looking for what life was all about. Now I know a little more of what life is about, and it is time to pack up the wagon with some above average stories and sell my pots and pans to Act III of the American Dream." Sparling will exhibit at the Festival with Leonardo Da Vinci and many other of his works.

Don Quixote sculpture created by Chad Heise

Joining Da Vinci at the Festival will be Don Quixote in the form of a metal sculpture created by Chad Heise. Heise says, "Carrying the proverbial (and literal) 'torch' for my uncle, Bill Heise (who launched Heise Metal Sculpture in 1966), I remain true to his original vision of repurposing what he called "found" metal—discarded old agricultural equipment and tools collected from the fields and farms of Vermont. Tinkering around in my uncle's shop since about the time I could walk, he taught me how to discover the delicate lines which exist within the component parts of this salvaged equipment (often defying their rugged nature), and how each sculpture could be given unique personality by something as simple as the size and type of nut, bolt, or washer chosen for eyes.

"It is with great pride that I continue on with what some have referred to as his unusual twist on the concept of 'swords into ploughshares.' Not only do I feel I'm paying homage to my uncle and his unique artistic vision, but also to the farm equipment which faithfully turned soil for years, now given new life."

In addition to Sparling and Heise, artist/sculptor Piper Strong of Hardwick, VT, brings a new creation, "Renewed Spirit", along with her interpretations of many classic paintings. Lastly among the sculptors is Aaron Brown, of Lyndeborough, NH, with his colorful "exterior" three-section landscape metal sculpture.

Hours are 10-5 daily, Friday through Sunday. Adult admission is $10, children are free. Rain or shine-under tents. Plenty of free parking. No pets, please.

The Manchester Fall Art and Craft Festival will be held at the Practice Tee, Hunter Park, Rt. 7A, just north of town, in Manchester Center, VT. For more information call (802) 362-2100. Visit craftproducers.com.sparlingstudio.com.

Sometimes

Sometimes when day after day we have cloudless blue skies, warm temperatures, colorful trees and brilliant sun, when it seems like all this will go on forever, when I harvest vegetables from the garden all day, then drink tea and doze in the late afternoon sun, and in the evening one night make pickled beets and green tomato chutney, the next red tomato chutney, and the day after that pick the fruits of my arbor and make grape jam, when we walk in the woods every evening over fallen leaves, through yellow light, when nights are cool, and days warm, when I am so happy I am afraid I might explode or disappear or somehow be taken away from all this,

at those times when I feel so happy, so good, so alive, so in love with the world, with my own sensuous, beautiful life, suddenly

I think about all the suffering and pain in the world, the agony and dying. I think about all those people being tortured, right now, in my name. But I still feel happy and good, alive and in love with the world and with my lucky, guilty, sensuous, beautiful life because,

I know in the next minute or tomorrow all this may be taken from me, and therefore I've got to say, right now, what I feel and know and see, I've got to say, right now, how beautiful and sweet this world can be.

Chess and the World Stage

by Charles Sutton

People who are chess-players are at an advantage figuring out the moves by the super-powers on the world-wide chess board.

Instead of knights and castles and other chess pieces the super-powers play pieces representing armed forces and weaponry, big oil and gas, cash and credits, boycotts, blockades, embargoes and sanctions among others. After World War II a key piece was lend-lease. Future pieces one suspects will include dwindling resources like water and food.

A less subtle power play but indicative of world power status was the famous chess game between defending world champion Boris Spassky of the then Soviet Union and challenger Bobby Fischer for the United States. The Soviets had dominated the world championship for 24 years, perhaps because chess was the national game much as baseball is in this country. The match was held in neutral Iceland beginning on July 11, 1972 and adjourned after 40 moves on August 31 with Spassky resigning before resuming play the next day. Fischer won the match 1 1/2 to 8 1/2, becoming the undisputed World Champion. This was at the height of the Cold War so the victory was very significant psychologically. The games were well covered in the American media, and that's where I followed them and reported the results in a small daily newspaper in Maine where I was the city editor.

As the games progressed it became known that copy editor Gary had been playing in chess clubs for many years and that I also played chess. My father had taught my brother Fred and I chess when we were about 10 years old, and we got good enough to once in awhile beat him. Our parents also taught us how to play bridge and we could take the place of a player when they were missing a fourth at one of their card games. We did well there, too. Now back to chess.

It was decided that Gary and I would play a chess match as important as the one being played by Spassky and Fischer. Because I was older and had studied Russian in college I was to represent Spassky; Gary for his part would represent the

"I figured I probably would never play that well ever again, and as it turned out that was my last game."

29 year-old eccentric Fischer, an outspoken and vocal critic of the Soviet domination of chess. The newspaper offices were in a string of rooms—railroad car style—connected by a long corridor. We set the chessboard up halfway done the hall. Once the game started Gary and I would make frequent trips on the pretense of going to the room where the proofing was done only to pause along the way long enough to make a chess play.

The newspaper's publisher who didn't play or know much about chess was worried that the game might interfere with getting the paper out on time each day. We told him that would not happen, and it never did. As the game progressed he became more interested as did the rest of the newspaper staff. They wanted to know what each piece could do and its limits. They were particularly intrigued by the knight, whom one of them described as moving in all those directions like a crab, an apt description. They were also concerned that the king could only move around one square at a time, although in all directions. We said that was okay because all the other pieces were there to defend him and prevent a checkmate—the ultimate defeat.

As the days went by Gary and I were able to pick off a piece or two and we defended our kings very well. The game from start to finish took seven days. It looked as if we would end in a stalemate with no one winning. However, Gary had one last chance to put me away with scant pieces remaining on the board. Suddenly it was checkmate by Gary using a lowly pawn to block the escape for the king. A lowly pawn won the day!

Gary was ecstatic with the victory and received the compliments of the newsroom. I for my part didn't feel badly about the loss because I never believed that I could play that well, that long and was happy with my play. I figured I probably would never play that well ever again, and as it turned out that was my last game.

Champion chess players Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer, once held in high respect as representatives of their homelands, nevertheless became men without a country while they experienced personal long-lasting times of troubles.

Spassky is still alive and living in his native Russia. After his defeat by Fischer he continued playing chess at the higher levels for a great many years. However, he left Russia for France and became a French citizen after the Soviet Chess Committee began to restrict him from playing in certain countries. Some of his family wrote him off and caused trouble. He finally returned to Russia after a major left side stroke incapacitated him, and he felt he was a prisoner and ill-treated in the French rehab facility. Today he still plays and teaches some chess, but he is no longer a competitor.

Fischer's story is even grimmer. He lost his U.S. citizenship for tax troubles and for playing chess (after a 20 year lapse) with Spassky in a banned war torn Yugoslavia. He won that match but there was no fanfare like his earlier win. Fischer had become an increasingly vocal critic of American policies and was also anti-Semitic. He spent nine months in a Japanese jail, held as a fugitive from justice and was facing deportation until rescued by Iceland and given citizenship there. He died there at the age of 64 from renal failure.

The chess game and its pieces in their own way reflect what's going on all over the world today. Consider for a moment that the king and queen represent the leaders or more accurately those in power. The chess castles (rooks) represent real estate and its resources of their nation-states. The bishops who flank the king and queen represent religions or ideologies (for better but too often for worse), and the knight pieces—the warriors—represent the armed forces or in today's terms, the military-industrial complex. The front row of pawns are the worker bees, the first line of defense. They get sacrificed early on as the power pieces make their moves. After all they are just pawns...

Halloween Wildlife Festival at Kehoe Conservation Camp

Looking for a "wild" family-based adventure for Halloween this year?

The Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department is inviting families to attend the Second Annual Halloween Wildlife Festival and Jack-o'-Lantern Hike on Friday, October 24, 5-8 p.m. at the Edward F. Kehoe Education Center of the Green Mountain Conservation Camp on Point of Pine Rd. in Castleton, VT.

The festival features a fun and educational Halloween campfire show led by students from Green Mountain College's environmental education and interpretation program. Kids will learn about the creepy, crawly critters that reside in Vermont and have a chance to get decked out in their costumes before the traditional trick-or-treat night. The 20-minute campfire program will run at 5, 6, and 7 p.m.

Other activities include a nature hike along a trail that's lit by carved pumpkins, wildlife-related activities, face painting, and a photo booth. Snacks will include apple cider, caramel apples and other seasonal treats.

"The Education Center at Kehoe does a natural resources related event every month, and October is a perfect time to highlight the fun of Halloween while focusing on the critters that make it so special" says Alison Thomas, education coordinator.

Admission and activities are free and open to the general public, and all ages are welcome. No registration is required. Costumes are encouraged, but not required.

A Vagabond Song

There is something in the autumn that is native to my blood—
Touch of manner, hint of mood;
And my heart is like a rhyme,
With the yellow and the purple and the crimson keeping time.
The scarlet of the maples can shake me like a cry
Of bugles going by.
And my lonely spirit thrills
To see the frosty asters like a smoke upon the hills.
There is something in October sets the gypsy blood astir;
We must rise and follow her,
When from every hill of flame
She calls each vagabond by name.

This is My Halloween

by Pamela Hayes Rehlen

"Oh traveler that passes by, as you are now so once was I. As I am now you soon will be, prepare for death and follow me."

This well-known gravestone inscription is one that I think of often in October. Halloween for me isn't a commercial scare fest, but a darkening, cooling, day-shortening, brooding time.

This is when I most miss and remember the people that I loved and lived beside who are now gone, and when I feel brought up against the hidden parts of life.

Castleton, VT was chartered in 1761 with thirty families living here by 1775. During the Revolutionary War, Ethan Allen mustered his Green Mountain Boys at the local Fort Warren before marching to Ticonderoga. There are houses along Main Street built in 1809, 1811, 1823 and 1832. The cobbler shop at the end of town was built in 1790. This is an old village, full of the past.

I search for a certain atmosphere in October when, according to the Celts, "the crops should be in and the fruit collected, the cattle brought down from their summer pasture."

"Light a bonfire," exhort the Celts. For October 31st, they warn, "mischief is abroad this night."

On Halloween—religiously, the Eve, or Vigil of Halloween—I've always gone for a walk along Main Street kicking through piled-up leaves. By the time I go out, the young trick-or-treaters are finished with their house-to-house rounds. The town is dark and quiet, the moon often thin and misty.

At Middlebury College, I remember leaving my dorm Halloween nights and walking around the campus. The school was smaller then, like a little gray stone village, and it seemed that I was the only one interested in being outside.

Years ago, there were bonfires. Some clean-air-regulation got rid of this atmospheric part of fall. Nothing equals the smell and the power of night bonfires in late October.

On the highlands outside of town and in the folds of autumn-bright hills are the oldest Castleton houses, older than the 1823 and 1832 village places. These include the blackened, tumble-down Barker house, the Parsons' sisters', and Virgie McKean's, buildings lived in, and died in, long ago by old women in terribly straightened circumstances.

During October, my husband and I go for drives in the fading warmth of long golden afternoons, and I look for the unchanged spots, certain stretches of land, old pastures, old stone walls, places where, when I was a child, an ancient house held on, just down a turning woodland tract, a ruin now lost to view among new saplings.

Atmosphere isn't only outside in a glimpse of abandoned railroad tracks or a view of sunlight coming through golden-leaved maples. Atmosphere stays on in old buildings and old spaces which are seldom used and have been long left behind. I've never modernized our kitchen pantry, but kept it as it was a hundred and seventy years ago when our house was built so I can open the door and smell its ghostly scents of old wood, kerosene, and coal.

October evenings, I reread M. R. James's collected ghost stories. James, a medievalist, antiquarian, and provost of Eton, lived from 1862 to 1936 and wrote gentle period classics.

Afternoons, I walk in Castleton's Hillside cemetery and out across the corn field beyond the cemetery. On a day of rising winds, dead leaves whirl and there's an up rush of crows. Against a sullen sky, a flaming maple stands half its leaves torn away by the night's rainstorm.

In the mornings as the month goes on, I see ice frosting the dead grass and hear the distant honk of geese.

"We are always seeking something profound that eludes us. We sense mystery around us, and we know it's true. Although we have to put this aside to live, we come up against it at life's events."

I don't know who wrote this and where I found it, but I've had it pinned above my desk for years.

We come up against the mystery around us, particularly in the fall, particularly, for me, at Halloween.

Pamela Hayes Rehlen has written all of her life and lived most of that life in Castleton, VT. She is the author of many stories, article, essays and magazine features and of two books, The Blue Cat and the River's Song, and The Vanished Landmarks Game—Vermont Stories from West of Birdseye, available at the Castleton Village Store and a number of Vermont bookstores.

When the Year Grows Old

I cannot but remember
When the year grows old—
October—November—
How she disliked the cold!

She used to watch the swallows
Go down across the sky,
And turn from the window
With a little sharp sigh.

And often when the brown leaves
Were brittle on the ground,
And the wind in the chimney
Made a melancholy sound,

She had a look about her
That I wish I could forget—
The look of a scared thing
Sitting in a net!

Harvest Time at the Vermont Farmers Market

The Wheel of the Year turns once again. The Harvest Fires are lit, the crop is collected and the bounty of the land is brought in to feed the people. And the people are pleased. They gather by ones and twos on Saturdays from 9 a.m. till 2 p.m. at the Vermont Farmers Market at Depot Park in downtown Rutland for the final harvests as the summer season draws to a close. They share stories of the year's toil and ideas for the future and in the abundance of the Earth.

It is the time of root vegetables and winter squashes and potatoes growing down in the dirt. Beets and broccoli and Brussels sprouts. Carrots, parsnips and cabbage. Swiss chard and turnips, shallots and leeks. You can smell them all cooking, can't you? Feel the steam rising from the pot and the faint scent of the farm rising with it. When you know your farmers you're more connected to your food.

The apples shine a little brighter and the pumpkins glow with a light of their own. If the day is a bit nippy look for the handmade scarves and neck warmers or a hot beverage while you peruse the stands full of handcrafted gifts and accessories. Wooden bowls and cutting boards, beaded jewelry and hand thrown pottery are nestled in among artisan cheese, bread and wine makers—and don't miss the wild mushroom foragers.

The lunch and dinner to go items are an international smorgasbord of culinary delights from Pakistan to Thailand to the Mediterranean and beyond. Leave room for dessert by one of many fabulous bakers who offer their wares. Cookies, pies, cupcakes, brownies, sweet breads and more are waiting to tantalize your palate. Did you need a refill of maple syrup or honey or those delicious relishes? Eggs and bacon for Sunday brunch and a roasting chicken or some grass fed beef or pork for dinner and myriad incarnations through the week. Grab some dried beans for hearty soups and chilis as the days shorten and a bag of popcorn for sittin' by the fire.

Soon we'll be back at the Vermont Farmers Food Center on West St. for the winter season, where the community gardens have been thriving and folks are breaking in the new bocce court. More gatherings of more folks who love the land and what it provides.

As we move into the dark time with full bellies and satisfied hearts take a moment to give thanks to all those whose hands played a part in your meal, your gift, or your treasured keepsake. Hand to hand and heart to heart is how community gathers with nourishment and reverence for all. See you at the Farmers Market!

The Summer Vermont Farmers Market is in downtown Rutland's Depot Park and runs Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., May 10th to October 25, 2014. The Tuesday Summer Market runs Tuesdays, 3-6 p.m., May 13 to September 30, 2014.

The Winter Vermont Farmers Market is at the Vermont Farmers Food Center at 251 West St., in downtown Rutland. It runs Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., November 1st, 2014 through May 2, 2015. The market manager is Doug Patac, (802) 753-7269. dpatac@gmail.com. For more information visit www.vtfarmersmarket.org.

Green Tomato Pickle

Slice 1 peck small green tomatoes and 12 onions. Sprinkle 1 cup salt over tomatoes and onions. Let stand over night. Drain. Take 1 pint vinegar, 1 quart water, boil tomatoes and onions in that 5 minutes. Drain again. Put 3 pounds brown sugar in 3 quarts of vinegar. Put the following spices in a bag.

¼ lb. dry mustard	1 tablespoon ginger
1 tablespoon ground cloves	1 tablespoon whole cloves
1 tablespoon cinnamon	1 tablespoon stick cinnamon

Boil in vinegar and sugar 15 minutes. Remove and put tomatoes, 6 chopped green peppers, 1 tablespoon white mustard seed, 1 tablespoon celery seed in vinegar. Let boil not more than 5 minutes. Put in glass jars with enough juice to cover.

October In Vermont

The clump of maples on the hill,
And this one near the door,
Seem redder, quite a lot, this year
Than last, or year before;
I wonder if it's jest because I love the Old State more!

If there was any poppies left,
I guess they'd jst be vexed
To see the hillsides all on fire
Without the least pretext;
Sometimes I think I'm in this world,
And sometimes in the next.

Jest look! the woods are made of trees,
Instead of wholesale green;
Jest see the "wine glass elms" stand out,

With hemlocks in between;
Jest see the birch flags on their staffs
So long and white and clean!

From Killington and Sterling peaks
The flames are pouring down;
The ferns below the pasture woods
Are scorched and dead and brown;
The shoemake fire-bugs set the blaze
I heard last night in town.

It's kinder more than folks can stand,
This beauty, every year;
The eye that's full can see no more
Until it drops a tear;
It's hard to tell jest where you are,
In paradise or here.

Muskie Restoration Efforts Continue into Historic Range

The Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department continued its Lake Champlain muskellunge restoration efforts by stocking more than 7,000 fingerling muskies into the Missisquoi River and Missisquoi Bay.

This year, for the second time, muskellunge, or 'muskie,' were stocked above Swanton Dam up to the Highgate Falls Dam. This section of the Missisquoi River is the last location in Vermont that supported a naturally-reproducing native muskie population, before they disappeared in the 1970s following a chemical spill.

Since 2008, the Fish & Wildlife Department has stocked more than 38,000 muskies into the Missisquoi River and Missisquoi Bay in an attempt to restore a viable population to Lake Champlain.

Lake Champlain is the only lake in New England to which muskies are native.

"The muskie has a unique role as Lake Champlain's apex aquatic predator," said Shawn Good, the state fisheries biologist leading the muskie restoration effort. "On the Missisquoi River, muskies were historically important as a large mythical fish that was present but very difficult to catch."

The six-inch fish stocked in the river were donated by the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, which also stocks the Great Chazy River on the New York side of the lake with the same strain.

Good said, "We now know through the genetic assessment that some of the muskie stocked in New York's Great Chazy river make their way out into Lake Champlain and into Missisquoi Bay and Missisquoi River."

Vermont regulations allow fishing for muskies on a catch-and-release basis only with artificial lures or flies. All muskies caught must be immediately released where they are caught.

"I have high hopes for these little guys," said Good.

"With so much habitat and food available to them in Lake Champlain, I expect these fish to grow fast and to get big."

Season of Mists and Mellow Fruitfulness

Bidding adieu to the garden past and sowing the seeds for the garden yet to come

by Judith Irven

By October the last asters are slowly fading and the golden Black-eyed Susans have become knobby black seedheads. Whether we are gathering the remaining harvest, cooking wild apples and blackberries into a tasty sauce, or cutting back spent perennials, autumn is when we bid adieu to this year's garden.

But, even as the old garden fades into memory, slowly next year's garden comes into focus. With beds to weed and compost to spread, autumn is also when we make plans and prepare the garden of the future. With memories of the season just ending still fresh in our minds, it is fall, rather than spring, when it is most opportune to rejuvenate the garden with an eye to the seasons yet to come. And, since every gardener is a born optimist, it is also the perfect opportunity to correct omissions, look for better vegetables, or try new flowers. Thus, in so many ways, autumn is indeed the gardener's new year!

So let's take look at some of the activities that are best accomplished in October and into November, both those associated with the old year just ending, as well as those that lay the groundwork for the one that is now beginning.

In the vegetable garden:

My last 'old year' activity in the vegetable garden is to harvest every last remaining edible vegetable.

First I collect all the winter squash and store them in the basement on wire mesh trays to promote good air circulation and prevent rot. I like to grow lots of butternut and acorn squash. Both are good keepers and between now and next April will become the base of many soups and roasted dishes. Next year I plan on growing some of the huge blue Hubbard squash as well, also reputed to be an excellent keeping variety.

I also roast all excess tomatoes with a little olive oil, chopped garlic and herbs. Stored in the freezer they become a ready-to-go pasta sauce that tastes absolutely delicious at dead of winter!

Next I turn my attention to the chard and kale, both excellent vegetables for growing in Vermont's cooler summers. My harvest results in huge mountains of crisp green leaves in the kitchen. After stripping the stems, I wash and rough chop the leaves, before dropping them by the handful into boiling water for a quick blanch. After dunking everything in iced water, I squeeze out the excess liquid and freeze four ounce portions as easy additions to stir-frys or soup.

Now I can turn my attention to the season yet to come. First I weed the entire vegetable garden, carefully chasing down the roots of perennial weeds like witch grass and dandelions.

And then comes my big fall ritual of spreading compost across the beds and digging it into the top few inches of soil.

In the world of gardening compost is a truly magical substance and a wonderful investment for the years to come. It adds organic matter and nutrients to the soil, which becomes softer and easier for the plant roots to penetrate. It also permits a sandy soil to retain water more effectively and, conversely, helps a clay soil drain better. If you do not have enough compost of your own, consider adding an organic commercial product, such as the composted cow manure mixture called Moo-Doo from The Vermont Natural Ag Company in Middlebury (you can get it in bulk with a pick-up truck)

My final activity in the vegetable garden is to cover the soil for the winter, thus preventing the weeds from sprouting the moment spring arrives. My tried and true method was to make a sandwich of about six layers of newspaper topped with hay.

Last year however I experimented using light-weight tarps, held down by tent pegs, as a winter soil cover. In springtime, the tarps helped the soil warm up more quickly, while still smothering the weeds. When I was ready to plant a particular section, I just rolled back the tarp, planted my seedlings, and then mulched around them with my usual newspaper and hay sandwich. My experiment was a success so this fall I will be using the tarp method again.

And in the flower beds:

Each fall I like to tackle my flower beds one at a time. I start by cutting back most perennials, leaving just those that will provide seeds for the birds and winter interest for me. The cuttings become the basis of a new compost pile. Then, after raking aside any remaining bark mulch, I carefully weed around all the plants, digging in some compost as I go.

Next I carefully analyze the current plant mix, often consulting pictures of the garden as it was at different dates last summer, and consider what needs changing, expanding or even removing.

Contrary to popular belief, the best time to lift and divide perennials is in the late fall, after the tops have died back. If you do this in springtime you risk damaging the new green growth.

I find the best way to do divide a large perennial root mass is to shove two garden forks, back-to-back, down into it. Wiggle the forks back and forth against each other, and soon the root mass will split into two or three parts, while still leaving the individual roots intact. Each part can be replanted, either in this bed or elsewhere.

If you are not ready to replant some of the root sections quite yet, they can easily be stored in a plastic bag for a couple of weeks to prevent them from drying out. And, if the roots have grass or other weeds running through them, just soak everything in water for an hour, after which you can usually pull the weeds right out.

As I contemplate a bed I often see the need for additional plants and a quick trip to the nursery. However at this late stage in the season be sure to check the quality of any plants before you buy. It may be preferable to wait for the new season's stock to arrive in spring before filling the gaps in your reworked beds.

Of course, fall is also the time when we think about planting bulbs to make our gardens beautiful in spring. I already have hosts of daffodils, both in my beds and in the rough grass at the edge of the garden. But this fall I will be planting plenty of tulips, fritillary and alliums. I have grown them in the past but gradually many have died out. So 2015 will be the spring for a renewal of bright colors.

Autumn is the gardener's new year...

But for gardeners, the transition from the old to new year does not come at a specific time and date when we congregate to sing 'Auld Lang Syne'. Instead, somewhere around the middle of October, we gradually transition from gathering the harvest and reflecting on the gardening season just ending, to actively planning and preparing for the season ahead.

Whether tackling a big project like making a new bed or just dividing a few perennials, this is also a wonderful time be outdoors. The air is cool and crisp yet the soil is still warm and soft. This when my optimism for the garden yet to come knows no bounds.

Judith Irven and Dick Conrad live in Goshen where together they nurture a large garden. Judith is a landscape designer and Vermont Certified Horticulturist who also teaches Sustainable Home Landscaping for the Vermont Master Gardener program. Old-Time Autumn Harvest Recipes

by Ella Shannon Bowles and Dorothy S. Towle

These recipes, gathered in the mid-1900s, were popular in the 1800s. They made good use of seasonal ingredients.

FLO'S PUMPKIN PIE

Peel the pumpkin and cut in cubes, rejecting the seeds and soft fibers. Put in a kettle, preferably cast iron, with very little water. Simmer until tender, pressing down into the water occasionally. Mash, press through a sieve, and cook until dark and dry, scraping up from bottom as it reduces. With one cup cooked pumpkin, mix one-half cup brown sugar, one-half cup molasses, one-half teaspoon each cinnamon and ginger, a pinch of salt, one beaten egg if desired, and two cups milk. Mix, bring to a boil, and partly cool. Fill an unbaked pie shell. Put in a hot oven, 400 degrees F., for fifteen minutes, then lower the heat to 325 degrees and bake thirty minutes longer or until the custard is firm and the crust brown.

CURRIED GREEN TOMATOES

6 green tomatoes 1 teaspoon curry powder
3 tablespoons butter Flour, salt, pepper
3 tablespoons minced onion

Slice the tomatoes half an inch thick. Melt the butter and sauté the onion until light brown. Add the curry powder and mix well. Dredge the tomatoes in flour and brown on both sides. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour the fat and onion over the tomatoes before serving. Serves six.

OSBOW INDIAN PUDDING

Only a three-hour baking is required for this Indian pudding. It comes from and is named for the section of Vermont where the Connecticut River winds back and forth through the meadows in a great bow.

1 quart milk ¼ cup sugar
1 cup corn meal 1 tablespoon butter
Salt Cold milk
½ cup molasses

Heat the quart of milk and stir in slowly the Indian meal. Add salt to taste and the molasses and sugar. Turn into a two-quart baking dish. Add the butter and pour in enough cold milk to fill the dish. Do not stir the milk. Bake slowly about three hours in a very slow oven, 275 to 300 degrees F. Serve with maple syrup. Serves six.

To Autumn

Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness!

Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun;
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the vines that round the thatch-eaves run;
To bend with apples the moss'd cottage-trees,
And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;
To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells
With a sweet kernel; to set budding more,
And still more, later flowers for the bees,
Until they think warm days will never cease,
For Summer has o'er-brimm'd their clammy cells.

Who hath not seen thee oft amid thy store?

Sometimes whoever seeks abroad may find
Thee sitting careless on a granary floor,
Thy hair soft-lifted by the winnowing wind;
Or on a half-reap'd furrow sound asleep,
Drows'd with the fume of poppies, while thy hook
Spares the next swath and all its twin'd flowers;
And sometimes like a gleaner thou dost keep
Steady thy laden head across a brook;
Or by a cider-press, with patient look,
Thou watchest the last oozings hours by hours.

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?

Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While barr'd clouds bloom the soft-dying day,
And touch the stubble-plains with rosy hue;
Then in a wailful choir the small gnats mourn
Among the river shallows, borne aloft
Or sinking as the light wind lives or dies;
And full-grown lambs loud bleat from hilly bourn;
Hedge-crickets sing; and now with treble soft
The redbreast whistles from a garden-croft;
And gathering swallows twitter in the skies.

SQUASH MUFFINS

2 cups flour 1 egg
2 teaspoons baking powder ½ cup milk
2 tablespoons sugar 1 tsp. melted shortening
¾ teaspoon salt 1 cup sieved cooked squash

Mix and sift the dry ingredients. Beat the egg and mix with the milk, shortening, and squash. Pour the second mixture into the dry ingredients and mix just enough to blend. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees F., for twenty to twenty-five minutes. Makes one and a half dozen medium-sized muffins.

BOILED CIDER PIE

½ cup cider ½ cup seeded raisins
½ cup maple sugar 1 tablespoon butter
2 egg yolks, beaten 2 egg whites
4 tbsp. powdered sugar ¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Boil the cider and maple sugar. Add the beaten egg yolks and stir until thick. Add the nutmeg, raisins, and butter. Turn into an unbaked pie shell, cover with top crust, and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven at 350 degrees F. The top crust may be omitted, and a meringue may be made of the beaten egg whites and powdered sugar. Brown in a moderate oven.

DEEP-DISH BAKED SQUASH

Cut a Hubbard squash in pieces and steam for thirty to forty minutes, or until tender. Drain and remove the pulp from the shell. Mash the pulp and put it through a strainer. For every two cups of pulp, add the following ingredients:

2 tablespoons butter 1 egg yolk, beaten
1 tablespoon cream Salt and pepper to taste
1 teaspoon maple sugar ½ cup buttered cracker crumbs

Mix the first five ingredients with the pulp, and turn it into a buttered baking dish. Cover with the cracker crumbs. Bake thirty minutes in a hot oven, 400 degrees F. Serves four to six.

Limbo Season

by Burr Morse

Even though I've lived through over sixty years of foliage seasons, each one gets better than the one before! The other evening I was watching TV in our living room when suddenly a patch of foliage in our view out front became downright ethereal. I sprang to the window and in an otherwise drab scene, the last remnants of sun directed a "spotlight" right on this one section of our woods! I grabbed my camera and shot away—yes, here I live in the epicenter of Autumn splendor but I'd never seen it like this before. Being in the tourism business, I have to be righteous about Vermont foliage, our crème de la crème of marketing opportunities. It's not just "business as usual" though; I love foliage season in every spectacular respect!

Foliage coincides with another season though, much less glamorous but never-the-less real—I'll call it "limbo" season. It has to do with human comfort or more to the point, discomfort. I'm talkin' about the time of year when we've had a pleasant summer respite from thoughts of expensive fuel oil or plugged chimneys when WHAM!—all of a sudden the first cold night strikes. Like the proverbial "water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink" Betsy and I sit in a stone cold house with a full tank of fuel oil and a woodshed brimming over. You see, we're too Scotch to start up the oil burner and burning wood doesn't work well until winter temperatures set in.

I recently suffered through one such night. Betsy had gone to her night job and I had prepared for bed my usual obsessive-compulsive way—au naturale except for skivvies, one medium weight blanket, no top sheet, and a very thin pillow, thank you very much—but I was cold! I got up, shivering, and started searching for Betsy's cache of blankets. "It's a small house—they gotta be here", I thought, starting with the most obvious places and ending up in the darkest closet recesses. Spare blankets, however, like drinking water in the ocean, were not meant to be, that night.

Approaching the panic stage, I grabbed all the towels from the linen closet and got in bed, pulling the one blanket over me and then strategically placing towels, in total defiance of physics, I might add, in patchwork fashion over the blanket and myself. All of a sudden it hit me that my numerous nocturnal trips to the bathroom would declare the "towel" caper null and void!

Next I went to the two black Labs. "C'mere Averill, c'mon Fern" I pleaded, trying to coax the two large dogs to burrow into the blanket with me. They however, much wiser and more climatologically fit, just sat saying "No way—this is our season to enjoy!"

My thoughts went to another dog, Tessa. Tessa the beagle was one of my best friends until passing from old age six years ago. More appropriately to this story, however, Tessa was a burrower. We first met her while she was still with her mother. The man who sold her to us said "That pup's a burrower—you'll find her way down in that blanket." Sure enough, I leaned into the pen and reached deep into a worn quilted comforter to find the warm ball of fur that would be my Tessa. She never outgrew her compulsion. My thirteen-year tenure with Tessa was spent, besides packed with love, never lacking for a bed warmer on a cold night. Thinking of Tessa, I looked at those two black Labs and said "ungrateful bitches!"

Yes, we Vermonters never lack for variety in our seasons. As I end this writing, we're approaching our beloved foliage's dénouement. Limbo season, however, will remain for a while as the tree line declines to a drab, grey "curtain". One of these days, that curtain will open to winter's grand show and I'll be in the audience. By that time, the wood fire'll be burnin' fast and, best of all, our house'll be warm!

Country Woman

Have you picked up a quince to smell it
And thought of grape jam on cellar shelves,
Of honey, brown eggs in water glass,
Of the braided bulbs of garlic and onion
Hung from the rafter?

There is sage and bay in the autumn wind,
There are apples that have not dropped from the bough,
Red withering brown in the smoke and the haze.
The cows are slow to pull at the frost-grey grass;
There was ice on the pond last night.

The city is miles away.
The quince in your hand
Is warm as a grandmother's cheek.

12th Annual Pumpkin Festival at Cedar Circle Farm

Sunday, Oct 12, 2014, 10-3 pm

You're invited to come to Cedar Circle Farm's 12th Annual Pumpkin Festival on Sunday, October 12, 2014 in East Thetford, VT. The annual harvest festival offers pumpkin picking, free horse-drawn wagon rides, and a variety of family activities and entertainment from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Every year more than 1200 people attend each of Cedar Circle Farm's harvest festivals, in June and in October. "We love to celebrate organic agriculture and share our beautiful farm with the public," says Kate Duesterberg, the farm's co-manager. "Families like to come to the farm to see firsthand how their food is grown. There is an increasing interest in where food comes from and why it's important to grow it in a way that protects our precious resources."

Great organic food

The concession opens at 11 a.m. serving delicious food grown and prepared on the farm, as well as wood-fired pizza from NOFA-VT's mobile oven, and authentic fare from Vermont Crepe & Waffle. The farmstand and Hello Café will be open all day long and features an abundance of fresh organic produce, a wide variety of other grocery and specialty items, small-batch fruit preserves, pickles, pestos, and traditional cultured krauts made in the farm kitchen.

Free family fun, storytelling, arts & crafts!

Stroll around the beautiful grounds at the height of fall foliage, take a guided tour on one of the horse-drawn wagons, or get your face painted, and have a taste of apple cider – you can even spin the cider press yourself! Learn about food, farm equipment, and alternative energy by visiting the community educational displays. Among the featured educators will be Catamount Solar, Sun Common with their solar-powered generator and bubble-making machine, and Karl Kemnitzer of Hartland, VT with his amazing solar bike inventions.

Award-winning British storyteller Simon Brooks will tell his wonderful tales throughout the day beginning in the pumpkin patch at 10:30 a.m. and later on in the enchanted forest where the farm's namesake, the circle of cedar trees, grows. In the forest you'll find shady picnic tables, free arts and crafts, educational games, and some very special visitors: owls from the Vermont Institute of Natural Science (VINS).

Enjoy lots of live music

Throughout the day enjoy live musical performances on three stages from talented Upper Valley bands: Stovepipe Mountain Band out of Corinth, VT plays lively Americana roots rock; The Cold River Ranters from across the river in New Hampshire perform what they call "hot gonzo primitive folk jive which has an American-rootsy feel with dashes of third world seasonings"; Haywire, a string quartet from Tunbridge, VT, will finish the day with homegrown stomp grass under the big tent.

Share the Harvest raffle

The Share the Harvest raffle will feature an array of prizes donated from local businesses to raise money for subsidized CSA shares for limited-income families at Cedar Circle Farm through the Northeast Organic Farming Association of Vermont (NOFA-VT) Farm Share program. With the generous help of the community and the Farm Share program, every year more local families are provided a subsidy for a season of wholesome and organic fruits and veggies at Cedar Circle Farm. Tickets for the raffle can be purchased at the raffle booth outside the farmstand. The drawing is at 2:30 p.m.

There is a $10 per vehicle parking fee for the festival; carpooling is strongly encouraged. Walk or ride your bike to the event and get in free. Please leave your pets at home; the farm does not have a shady parking area.

"We simply couldn't host these events without more than 50 volunteers every time," says Cat Buxton, the farm's Education Coordinator. "Some families like to ride their bikes to the farm and volunteer for a shift or for the entire day. It's a really fun event and we treat our volunteers right!" To register to be a volunteer or to see the full schedule of performance times, visit the farms' website at www.cedarcirclefarm.org. See you at the farm!

Cedar Circle Farm is located off U.S. Route 5 on Pavilion Rd., along the Connecticut River in East Thetford, VT. The farmstand is open Tuesday-Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Sunday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. through October 31, for certified organic produce, fall flowers & pumpkins. The Hello Coffee is open daily 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through October 31 with espresso drinks, bakery treats, and free wifi. This year the farmstand will open Saturdays and Sundays, November 1 to December 14. For more information and directions to the farm, call (802) 785-4737. Visit www.CedarCircleFarm.org.

Children's Book Reviews by Charles Sutton

Autumn Leaves, Pumpkins & Halloween Adventures

Halloween may be a special 'trick or treat' time for our children, but it can be quite an adventure, too, for our friends in the animal kingdom. See what happens to the legendary Bramble the horse and the shy black cat Jenny.

In the third book in the Bramble and Maggie series—Bramble and Maggie: Spooky Season by Vermont author Jessie Haas and illustrated by Alison Friend (Candlewick Press, $14.99, www.candlewick.com), Bramble, the horse, who loves the fall weather, decides to frolic and act up on their walk, much to the dismay of her young owner, Maggie. Horse play leads to a fall, serious enough that Maggie becomes almost too scared to climb back into the saddle. Bramble feels badly and decides to be good, but Maggie is still worried how her horse will behave when they go out trick-or-treating on Halloween. Enjoy the suspense and see what happens as horse and girl make their way on the scariest night of the year. Who do you think gets candy corn and real corn for the treat?

In Jenny's Moonlight Adventure by Esther Averill (New York Review Children's Collection, $12.95, www.nyrb.com), Halloween becomes a time when the cats must rally around to comfort the injured and house-bound cat, Madame Butterfly and return to her a crystal nose flute which only she can play. We learn that a pack of dogs stand in the way of any volunteer cat trying the reach Madam Butterfly. Shy kitty Jenny will make the run, but she still has to outwit the dogs led by the bully Rob the Robber. Jenny will earn your praises for her mission accomplished, the bravest cat of all the nine in the Cat Club.

The author wrote her first book about the red-scarfed, mild mannered cat, Jenny Linsky, in 1944, the first of 12 more tales including The Fire Cat. She founded her own publishing company, the Domino Press, introducing American readers to artists from all over the world.

These and other children's classics are being reprinted thanks to The New York Review of Books. For other titles see www.nyrb.com.

Even very young children enjoy the colors of fall and visiting a pick-your-own apple orchard and farm stand to select pumpkins to get ready for Halloween. In this board book, Apples and Pumpkins by Anne Rockwell and illustrated by Lizzy Rockwell (Little Simon, $7.99, www.simonandschuster.com/kids), a family visits Mr. Comstock's farm where they pick their own apples and harvest an ideal pumpkin to make a jack-o'-lantern. Instead of candies the family gives away their own hand-picked red apples, an ideal treat for the trick or treaters.

Author Anne Rockwell says, "This book has become a classic, enjoyed in homes, schoolrooms and library story hours as soon as there's a nip of fall in the air." For more about her many children's books and art, visit www.annerockwell.com.

Illustrator Lizzy Rockwell, Anne's daughter, has done 14 children's books with her since Apples and Pumpkins was first published in 1988. For more of her art, visit www.lizzyrockwell.com.

Colder weather will be with us soon enough, but that doesn't bother one aspiring artist as she takes to the woods with her notebook to sketch wildlife this time of year. In Winter Is Coming by Tony Johnston and illustrated by Jim LaMarche (A Paula Wiseman Book, Simon and Schuster Books for Young Readers, $17.99, www.simonandschuster.com/kids), a young girl is able to capture in her drawings the many animals searching for the last foods available before winter comes. Having a platform up in the trees and binoculars helps her spot a red fox eating an apple, chipmunks storing seeds, deer and two fawns nibbling spruce needles and other animals including a lynx, wild turkeys, and Canada geese. We follow the girl as she writes and draws in her journal through the autumn months, illustrating what she sees.

Author Tony Johnston was inspired by trips to her cabin in the California countryside. Artist Jim LaMarche has illustrated the story with beautiful full-page paintings providing the perfect settings for the young artist.

One will have a new appreciation for autumn and its magnificent colors in Fall Leaves by Loretta Holland and illustrated by Elly MacKay (Houghton Mifflin Harcourt Books for Young Readers, $16.99, www.hmhbooks.com). Under the watchful eyes of a young boy and girl the last days of summer fade away, the fall rains come, leaves drop, and finally snow's arrival will tell us winter is here. Readers will marvel how well the illustrations fit those moments in time. MacKay, a paper artist whose illustrations are created piece by piece, has drawn these remarkable sights from her memory of growing up in Big Bay, Ontario.

Saving Container Plants Overwintering Techniques for Keeping Tender Plants Alive Year after Year

by Alice and Brian McGowan
(Storey Publishing, $9.95, www.storey.com)

When we put our flower gardens to bed this fall we can't help but worry about how they will survive the winter's icy temperatures to reappear next spring.

This handy 125-page book gives instructions on how you can help keep alive more than 100 'tender' perennials—ones that can't survive outdoors all winter in this climate. The authors show you how to replant and store a large variety of perennials in containers inside the home.

Depending on the plant and its needs for surviving the winter they may be placed on a sunny windowsill, in a bright, but cool spot, or in a dark basement of closet.

Advice is given on taking cuttings, storing tubers, dormant woodies, dry corms and bulbs, or storing the plants outdoors. Some flowers need to be trimmed first, then dug up and sprayed (usually a horticultural oil).

Gardeners will be surprised at some of the storage ideas. An example is given where a fig tree is wrapped with leaf-filled paper bags. Italian-American emigres of the last century would actually dig a trench and transplant the tree there for the winter.

The authors have advice on the right temperatures and watering needs to safely see the plants through the winter. For geraniums they say the plant will remain hardy to at least 45 degrees. Store in a cool and bright place and water sparingly.

As a bonus this plant-by-plant guide will introduce you to some plants with intriguing names and how they can be winter-overed: firecracker vine, peanut butter plant, parrot's beak, moonflower, red hot poke, elephant's ear, angel's trumpet, and many others.

For 18 years, authors Alice and Brian McGowan owned Blue Meadow Farm. Brian is now the Assistant Director of Horticulture at Wave Hill, and Alice is a freelance garden writer. The couple lives in upstate New York.

America's Great Hiking Trails

by Karen Berger and Illustrated by Bart Smith (Rizzoli International Publications)

Ever wonder what it's like to be one of those thru-hikers we've seen tackling the Appalachian Trail alone or sometimes even with a dog for companionship?

In the foreword to this 325-page fact-filled invitation to eleven of America's great national scenic hiking trails, Vermont environmentalist Bill McKibben writes that this will guide you to "Beautiful places...few people will come back from these long hikes unchanged. These paths head north and south, east and west—but they also head, unavoidably, in."

"You're headed up the hills for the joy of the effort. And the sights you see are more beautiful than the sights that come effortlessly through the windshield. You earn each joy...Effort and joy intertwine—the exact opposites of ease and pleasure that are the hallmarks of the consumer society down in the valley."

If there's a possibility you will never hike or visit any of these long-distance trails, you can still marvel at the outstanding beauty they portray as seen in the hundreds of natural scenery and wildlife photographs. Photographer Bart Smith invites you to imagine you are on the very walkways

he has pictured for you to see—paths through forests and woods, along rocky cliffs, through fields of flowers, crossing waterways, using footbridges or ladders over barriers, and through desert crossings and mountain passes.

Smith was the first person to walk all 11 of America's national scenic trails. He did this carrying 15 pounds of camera equipment in addition to camping gear and food. (To see more of his work, visit www.walkingdownadream.com.)

Author Karen Berger has hiked more than 17,000 miles worldwide including thru-walks on the Appalachian, Pacific Crest, and the Arizona Trails. She is the author of 15 other books including Where the Waters Divide, about her 3,000-mile hike on the Continental Divide Trail. (Visit her travel website at www.buckettrippier.com.)

The book opens with a description of the Appalachian Trail, which the author notes is the one trail many choose as the 'trip of a lifetime' if they are to venture on a long distance hike. And she writes: "A modest green tunnel, the Appalachian Trail is overwhelmingly a forested path with only occasional jaunts above the tree line."

Berger has high praise for all the volunteers that have made these trails possible, and she recalls the dreamers who gave willingly of their time and resources to create the trails from the start. Read about Boston architect Benton MacKaye who spearheaded the efforts to create the Appalachian Trail... he was "part Renaissance man, part social idealist, and part impractical dreamer."

Here are thumbnail sketches of the other national trails described with date of origin and their approximate lengths.

Arizona Trail (2009) 800 miles

Day hikers can experience "Mexican plains or Colorado peaks only a few miles from the trailhead...thru-hikers can trek across a continent's worth of diversity in a single state."

"Heat and sun and a nagging concern about water. These are the constant companions of the Arizona Trail, a trek of stark and startling beauty, of fierce and merciless nature, where water and heat are the only things that matter, one the giver of life, the other its destroyer." Observant hikers may see mountain lions, bighorn sheep, coyotes, javelinas, elk and antelope.

Continental Divide (1978) 3,100 miles

The trail begins at the Canadian border in Montana, goes through Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico, ending at the Mexican border.

The author reminds us that "the Continental Divide has been a barrier to every movement west, from earliest Native American traders to the fur trappers and mountain explorers to emigrant trains to the gold miners to the railroads... Miners, settlers, cattlemen, criminals, all tried to cross. This wild place, the most untamed of all the national scenic trails, is also a 3,100-mile long museum of American history."

Florida Trail (1983) 1,400 miles

"Forget dry feet. This trail has cypress swamps. Alligators. Hurricanes. Humidity. Subtropics. Manatees. Airboats. Water moccasins. Pelicans. Flamingoes. Gum tree swamps. Salt marshes and crystal-blue freshwater springs." This trail is defined by water, and unlike all the other national hiking trails, there's little or no climbing. It winds its way through and among development and diversity. There is a 109-mile loop around Lake Okeechobee, the second-largest U.S. lake contained entirely within the borders of a state.

Ice Age Trail (1980) 1,200 miles

This trail in Wisconsin is "dedicated to a geological event, in this case telling the story of the sheer power of ice, water, and erosion...This landscape was created by a cold, icy fury: a force on the surface that carried and piled stones and rocks as part of a gravity-fueled process of movement and scouring." Savvy hikers have a chance to meet up with weirdly sculpted glacial forms with unfamiliar names like eskers (long, narrow ridges), kames (cones that look like child-size volcanoes) and kettles (small-size lakes). The state has 15,000 lakes!

Natchez Trace Trail (1983) 444 miles

Unlike the other trails featured in this book, this one's backbone is not a footpath, but a scenic parkway. "The trail segments designed for walkers, cyclists, and horseback riders are occasional offshoots and spurs... The Natchez Trace Trail was never envisioned to be a long, continuous footpath; currently, only about 60 miles of trail, out of the parkway's 444 miles, have been developed for hiking and horseback riding." It still qualifies as a national scenic trail because of its history as a millennia-old footpath and its recreational resources.

New England Trail (2009) 215 miles

If the 2,200-mile Appalachian Trail seems an impossible dream, one might warm up on the New England Trail's much shorter route from the New Hampshire-Massachusetts border to Guilford, CT where the trip ends on the Long Island Sound. "The trail runs on a twisting course that is roughly parallel to the Connecticut River, New England's largest and longest." We learn the trail existed as a marked hiking footway for more than 50 years, and some segments date back hundreds of years as Native American travel routes.

North Country Trail (1980) 4,600 miles

Vermonters don't have far to go to start on this, the longest hike—it begins at New York's Crown Point State Historic site. Ahead lies a trek though New York, part of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota! "Hikers walk through a settled landscape, perhaps more akin to the national parks of Europe, where back-country and nature exist in tandem with towns and villages, grazing lands and farms...What the trail lacks in high mountains, it makes up for in lakes, literally thousands of them, many formed by glaciers, found along the trail, not to mention the Great Lakes themselves."

Pacific Crest Trail (1968) 2,700 miles

An estimated 500-800 thru-hikers tackle this trail each year with about 60 percent finishing. The trail runs from Canada to Mexico through the states of Washington, Oregon, and California.

"Challenges include everything from the Mojave Desert to arctic-alpine tundra to ice-covered passes to miles of snow fields to dangerous river crossings to rain forests to the possibility of early autumn snowstorms." The PCT isn't about community in the wilderness, or conquering the wilderness. It is about melding with the wilderness and sometimes submitting to it. To walk for two weeks without seeing a road, a power line, a structure, a cell tower is an experience modern humans much seek. They find it here."

Pacific Northwest Trail (2009) 1,200 miles

This trail runs close to the Canadian border from Montana across Idaho through Washington State, ending on the shores of the Pacific Ocean—"a land dominated by mountains, water (in the form of snow, ice, thundering rapids, fog, rain, sea spray, and puddles) and above all, the great old trees. And a few legends, to boot...What is exceptional here are the ancient forests that surround the mountains like an apron: thousand-year-old red cedars whose trunks can be up to 13 feet in diameter, sometimes more, and towering Douglas firs.

Potomac Heritage Trail (1983) 800 miles

The trail is "quintessentially Washingtonian in another way. It does not follow a straight line from here to there, but rather splinters into a network of competing and sometimes contradictory interests: history, military, nature, recreation... Trail users also may be hikers, horseback riders, and much of the Potomac River is navigable for kayakers and canoers.

* * *

Although the book introduces us to these designated national scenic trails, readers still have hundreds of other opportunities in every state to 'find their legs' and experience beautiful scenery, too, by exploring shorter length recreational and historical trails, many of which have become part of or are feeder trails to the national system.

Enjoy Dead Creek Wildlife Day on Saturday, October 4

If you enjoy wildlife be sure to make plans to attend the annual Dead Creek Wildlife Day in Addison, VT on Saturday, October 4.

Dead Creek Wildlife Day has been listed as one of Vermont's "Top 10 Fall Events," and with good reason. Activities at Dead Creek Wildlife Day are especially for people who enjoy hunting, fishing, birdwatching, or learning about Vermont's diverse wildlife. The event will be held at the Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department's Dead Creek Wildlife Management Area (WMA) on Route 17 west of Route 22A.

"Dead Creek Day is always a fun time for kids and adults alike," said Amy Alfieri, Vermont Fish & Wildlife's Dead Creek coordinator. "It is a great opportunity for Vermonters to learn more about our state's incredible wildlife through activities like nature walks, wildlife photography, and hunting dog demonstrations, along with fun things for the kids like face-painting, duck decoy carving and live animal demonstrations."

Early risers can begin the day with bird banding demonstrations at 7 a.m. Two large tents at the Dead Creek WMA headquarters will feature wildlife-related exhibits and kids' craft activities such as building bluebird boxes.

The day's main activities run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and include illustrated talks, live wildlife presentations, fishing and hunting tips, and much more. All events are free, and a free shuttle bus will provide regular access to nearby field events throughout the day.

The festival is hosted by the Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department, Vermont Department of Forests, Parks and Recreation, Otter Creek Audubon Society, and Vermont Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs.

For more information and a schedule of events, visit Vermont Fish and Wildlife's website at www.tinyurl.com/DeadCreekDay14.
