Zelda and Emmett in Winter

by Bill Felker

Every winter, the two koi in our small pond stop feeding when the water temperature reaches the low 40s. Both fish are about a foot long. Zelda is a golden orange, Emmett is white with black markings. They lie together in the deepest water near the pump, slowly moving their fins but not responding when I walk close to them or when I put a rake near them to remove leaves. They will remain almost motionless until April when the high, warm sun and singing toads arouse them.

Zelda and Emmett seem to have no worries. This is their eighth winter in the pond. They know that there is nothing they can do to change the course of the season. They do not challenge the narrow boundaries of their habitat. There is nothing they can do to alter their future. There is nothing they can do if the pump stops working or if the pond freezes solid in a long cold wave or if I simply forget about them. Day after day, they remain motionless facing south waiting for spring as though they really do know that April will bring the mild winds that will eventually quicken them.

I often wonder if they have reached enlightenment and if they have transcended passion and desire. Do they instinctively count their breaths or the cold fronts or the sunsets? Do they remember spring and the warmth of the water? Do they have dreams of finding food among the lizard's tail and the water willow and the wild iris?

I find myself jealous of their apparent indifference to danger, of their ability to use the cold to their advantage. I am jealous of their single-mindedness, of their resignation, of their deep patience, endurance and trust. I am jealous of their bodies that simply tell them to look south, to expect without questioning or analysis of precedent. I am jealous of their enduring faith, and often when I wait with them for spring, I pretend that all manner of things really will be well.

Vermonters

These are the people living in this land;
Proud and narrow, with their eyes on the hills.
They ask no favors. Their lips defend
With speech close-rationed their hoarded souls.

You cannot love them or know them at all
Unless you know how a hardwood tree
Can pour blond sugar in a pegged-up pail
In the grudging thaw of a February day.

Annual Harris Hill Ski Jump Set for February 16th & 17th

Some of the world's best up-and-coming ski jumpers are set to fly at New England's only Olympic-size venue February 16th and 17th during the Annual Harris Hill tournament in Brattleboro, VT.

The nearly century-old competition will feature athletes from North America and Europe leaping off a 90-meter hill that's one of just six of its size in the country.

Since its start in 1922, the annual event attracts several thousand spectators who watch jumpers shoot at speeds of 60 mph before soaring more than 300 feet.

This year's competition will feature the annual Pepsi Challenge on Saturday and Fred Harris Memorial Tournament on Sunday, and the weekend will also be a stop on the US Cup circuit.

Harris Hill boasts a snowmaking system, so the program will take place regardless of ground cover in surrounding areas.

Gates will open February 16th and 17th at 10 a.m., with trial rounds at 11 a.m., opening ceremonies at noon and competition at 12:45 p.m.

The family event offers food and beverage vendors, a bonfire, music, tailgating and appearances by Jumper the Cow mascot.

Harris Hill Ski Jump is presented by hundreds of community volunteers and paid for by ticket sales, donations and sponsors including Pepsi, Mount Snow and The Richards Group.

Tickets are $20 for adults, $15 for students ages 6 to 12, and free for children 5 and younger and can be purchased at the gate or online at www.HarrisHillSkiJump.com. Advance discount admission of $15 for adults and $12 for students ages 6 to 12 is available starting in February at www.HarrisHillSkiJump.com.

Location

Harris Hill Ski Jump is located on Cedar Street in Brattleboro, VT. Take VT Exit 2 off I-91 and turn left (east) at the end of the ramp. Drive one mile and turn left onto Cedar Street.

If you are coming from the north on Route 30, Cedar Street will be one-way during the event and not accessible for entry off of Route 30. Follow signs into town (Main Street to High Street to Western Ave) to enter from the south.

Parking

Free parking is on-site at the hill in the field. Note: the field may be muddy and/or very bumpy. If you have a small or a "low to the ground" vehicle, please keep this in mind. There is additional parking at both the Brattleboro Retreat and The Retreat Farm on Route 30. A free shuttle bus will transport to and from the venue.

For additional details and ticket sales, visit www.harrishillskijump.com or the event's Facebook and Twitter pages.

LEGO Contest March 16, Pre-Register by March 8

Here is some mid-winter fun for kids and their families and interested adults alike.

The 2019 LEGO Contest is taking place on Saturday March 16 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the NewsBank Conference Center, 352 Main St., Chester, VT.

Come and see what creative kids and families in Chester have built with LEGOS, the building block of choice. From tall and wide buildings, fantasy lands, and motorized entries, you will be amazed at what the kids have done.

The contest is open to LEGOmaniacs Pre-K through Grade 8 and their families. The public is invited to come and observe.

Participants should construct their original creations (no kits allowed), with a maximum size of 24" x 36", and bring them on March 16 between 9 & 10 a.m. to the Conference Center, generously donated by NewsBank for the event.

Entries will be judged in different grade categories from 10 a.m. to noon for their originality, imagination, and presentation. If a structure is a team entry, the age of the oldest member will determine the grade category.

There is also a separate family team class for collaborating children and parents. Unique motorized LEGOs will be considered in a separate section.

At 12:30 p.m. LEGO prizes will be awarded to winners and runners-up in the different classes, with special awards for the Judges' choice for Best in Show and Most Vermont creations. The Creators' Choice Award will be given to the entry that the contestants themselves vote as the most outstanding creation.

Refreshments will be on sale to encourage everyone to stay and view the different entries, as well as to share ideas and techniques during the judging. Again this year young people may create an additional construction at a special LEGO station. They will not be able to remove their creation from the special area and won't be able to enter them in the contest, but this is a good opportunity for students to construct something different, perhaps with a friend, for some additional fun.

The Registration Form may be downloaded from Special Events at www.stlukesepiscopalvt.org, www.ourchester.org, and www.chestertelegraph.org.

Printed forms are available at the Whiting Library on Main Street in Chester, at Chester-Andover Elementary School, and at the Library and the Elementary School in Grafton.

Entries by Friday March 8 are $15. After that date and on the day of the contest, entries will be $20. A check for the registration fee should be made out to "St. Luke's Church" and mailed, along with the registration form, to the Registrar, Lillian Willis, PO Box 318, Chester, VT 05143.

Sponsored for the eighth year by St. Luke's Episcopal Church, the event will benefit both the church and the Children's Section of Chester's Whiting Library.

For additional information, please contact Lillian Willis at (802) 875-1340 or lbwillisct@comcast.net. www.stlukesepiscopalvt.org.

Colton Gaudette, age 10, from Springfield stands beside his 6'4" clock Tower that won first prize in the 2018 LEGO Contest for Grade 5 and also first in the Motorized category because of the clock in the building. Colton had been inspired by his trip to New York City and seeing the Empire State Building.

Kindred Spirits Family Nature Program: Finding Clues of Animals in Winter Through Tracking. At The Whiting Library, 117 Main St., Chester, VT. Saturday, February 2, 10-11:30 a.m. When you look out into the winter landscape in northern New England, it's often hard to believe that there's much of anything happening in the forests and fields. But life continues almost secretly. Together, we'll discover a winter world and the sneaky, smart animals who thrive during this season. Feel real animals pelts, learn the basics of animal tracking, and then caravan to nearby Chester Pinnacle to head out on snowshoes to test out your winter animal detective skills! All ages welcome- this is a great program for parents and kids to enjoy together. Admission is by donation, RSVP is appreciated, and drop-ins are always welcome. Let us know if you need to borrow snow shoes!

The Nature Museum is located at 186 Townshend Rd. in Grafton, VT. For more information call (802) 843-2111. E-mail info@nature-museum.org. Visit nature-museum.org.

Glare Ice

I have assumed the dignity of years. I wear it well, walking the waxen shine of ice-clad ways with careful steps. No one suspects the presence of a girl, galoshe buckles jingling as she runs, joyously sliding down the glare ice of remembered winters.

Poor Will's Natural Calendar

by Bill Felker

February 1 – The foliage of the oak-leaf hydrangea has fallen in the past weeks. The Osage fruits have turned deep red-brown. The berries of the euonymus are falling from their decaying, once protective sepals. Black walnut hulls are dark and collapsing, fall away at the touch of your heel

February 2 – In northern Mexico, monarch butterflies are moving toward the Texas border. They will reach the Gulf coast in small groups during mid to late March, and their offspring will find the Northeast in early summer.

February 3 – The first major waves of robins and bluebirds now move up the Atlantic coast toward Vermont. Along the back roads, road kills attest to the increasing night-time activities of opossums

February 4 – Almost every year, skunk mating season begins by the end of the Groundhog Day Thaw. Salamander breeding time opens in the first mild rains, and bobbing blue jays announce blue jay courting season.

February 5 – When you hear mourning doves singing before dawn, then organize all your buckets for tapping maple syrup. When you hear red-winged blackbirds in the wetlands, then the maple sap should already be running. When maple sap runs, then prune house plants to encourage spring growth.

February 6 – When you see sparrows courting, then cut branches of forsythia and pussy willows for forcing indoors.

February 7 – When the red tips of peonies push out just a little from the ground, then watch for wild turkeys to be gathering in flocks.

February 8 – Cardinals began their mating calls before dawn in the last week of deep winter. Now they are in full song by eight in the morning, sometimes sing all day.

February 9 – Depending on the year, growth occurs on ragwort, dock, sweet rocket, asters, winter cress, poison hemlock, sedum, mint, celandine, plantain, poppies, pansies, daffodils, tulips, crocus, aconite, hyacinth, strawberries.

February 10 – The pollen season, which ended with early winter, has now begun again across the South with the blooming of mountain cedar, acacia, smooth alder, bald cypress, American elm, red maple, white poplar and black willow. Bluegrass, which stopped flowering in midsummer, revives and starts its seeding cycle. As the February thaws bring moisture and warmth from the Gulf of Mexico, they also bring the pollen from all these flowers to the North.

February 11 – More than half of the pussy willows have opened in the mildest years.

February 12 – The day's length is about an hour longer than it was on December 26. Azaleas bloom in Alabama. In the lowlands of Mississippi, swamp buttercups, violets and black medic are open. Across the deserts of the Southwest, wildflower season begins with the first spring rains. In the Lower Midwest, skunk cabbages are opening. In Vermont, snowdrops struggle to push up through the snow.

Visitors enjoy a horse-drawn sleigh ride through the winter woods at Merck Forest & Farmland Center in Rupert, VT.

February 13 – Owlets and young bald eagles grow inside their eggs. Riding the southwest winds, red-winged blackbirds, meadowlarks, starlings, cedar waxwings, snow buntings, eagles, killdeer, and ducks of all kinds migrate, accelerating the appearance of spring.

February 14 – When you see small brown moths on warmer afternoons, then you know that ducks are looking for nesting sites. When you see tulip foliage emerging from the ground, then horned owlets hatch in the woods and sweet corn is coming up along the Gulf coast.

February 15 – Sometimes the weather doesn't change for the better in the middle of the year's second month; sometimes the cold is worse than in the middle of January. But it's the sound that changes and fills the silence of dormancy, songs accumulating like spring leaves.

February 16 – Fields of daffodils open in southern Georgia, and throughout the South, honeybees and carpenter bees collect pollen from yellow dandelions, silver and red maples, blue toadflax, white clover and mouse-eared chickweed.

February 17 – Wildflower season has begun in the Southwest and bald eagles are laying their eggs in Yellowstone.

February 18 – Today is Cross-Quarter Day, the date on which the sun reaches half of the distance to spring equinox, entering the early spring sign of Pisces at the same time. The night has shortened by 90 minutes through the space of the last 60 days, and the speed of the change reaches real spring levels now, the remaining gain of 70 minutes occurring between February 18 and equinox. And the sun, which took 60 days to travel the first half of the way to equinox, suddenly doubles its speed, completing the second half of the journey in only 32 days.

February 19 – This is Supermoon Day: expect cold weather and increases in seasonal affective disorder. But today should be the last of the worst of S.A.D. for most people.

February 20 – The likelihood of seasonal stress begins to fall steadily throughout February. Even though clouds usually continue to deprive the human brain of the benefits of sunlight, the length of the day complements the slowly improving temperatures.

February 21 – The violet and golden flowers of the snow crocus, the white blooms of snowdrops and the bright yellow blossoms of aconites often begin their seasons during the last week of February. Those seasons last through the middle of March, if the weather is not too warm, and they are parallel to the season of red and silver maple bloom.

February 22 – The Delta Leonid meteor shower reaches its peak directly overhead in the early morning hours.

February 23 – Today marks the beginning of the end of winter's gray skies. Although February and March still have plenty of clouds in store, the frequency of brighter days now shows a slow but steady advance.

February 24 – After Snowdrop Winter (between February 23 and 27), geese follow the lead of the blackbirds, marking ownership of the more favorable river and lake sites for nesting. More migrant robins join the sizeable flocks that overwintered in the exurban woodlands.

February 25 – Migrant crows return with their young, sometimes clashing with the crows that have spent the winter here. Sap is running in the maples, a sign that migraine headache season is at its peak throughout the country. And although your asthma may have improved slightly through the winter, the gradual increase in pollen that accompanies the end of February may bring on a new period of congestion.

February 26 – Great flocks of starlings and grackles move across the nation as February comes to an end. And from now on, average temperatures rise at their spring and early summer rate, one degree every three days, until the second week of June.

February 27 – The very earliest bulbs, the snowdrops, the snow crocus and the aconites, have already bloomed in the sunniest microclimates. Now it is time for the larger, brighter standard crocus and the small spring iris, the iris reticulata to flower.

February 28 – The blossoming of the standard crocus bears witness to the blooming of weedy henbit in the garden, the increasing flow of maple sap, the full emergence of pussy willows, the appearance of woolly bear caterpillars, and the full bloom of the snow trillium along the rivers.

Late Winter and Earliest Spring Vermont Almanack

by Bill Felker

Every landscape is, as it were, a state of the soul, and whoever penetrates into both is astonished to find how much likeness there is in each detail.

—Henri Frederic Amiel

The Sun's Progress

Just after the Groundhog Day Thaw is over (typically by February 4), the Sun rushes toward Early Summer, climbs past a declination of 16 degrees, reaches about 40 percent of the way to equinox by February 12, and on the 18th, Cross-Quarter Day, the Sun reaches its halfway point to equinox, entering the Early Spring sign of Pisces at the same time. And on February 24, the Sun reaches a declination of over nine and a half degrees, 60 percent of the way to equinox.

As the Sun moves from the sign of Aquarius (early and middle February) to Pisces (late February), precedents create promise and potential for the fledgling season. Almost every year, skunk mating season begins by the end of the Groundhog Day Thaw. Salamander breeding time opens in the first mild rains, and bobbing blue jays announce blue jay courting season. Doves called occasionally throughout December and January; now their full mating time swells and extends the predawn songs of cardinals and titmice.

Phases of the Squashy Osage Fruit Moon And The Skunk Courting Moon

The ebbing and flowing of the new Skunk Courting Moon helps to create dramatic shifts in weather as well as to stimulate changes in flora and fauna. The volatility of the Skunk Courting Moon accentuates solar influence, and the mix of warming and freezing, Sun and clouds, encourages skunks (and other small mammals) to wander the night in search of mates. Under this Moon, pussy willows emerge, maple sap runs into buckets, and the early bulbs—snowdrops, aconites and snow crocus—send up foliage in northern states and come into full bloom across the South.

February 4: The Skunk Courting Moon is new at 4:04 p.m.

February 5: The Moon reaches apogee (its position farthest from Earth) at 4:26 a.m.

February 12: The Moon enters its second quarter at 5:26 p.m.

February 19: The Moon reaches perigee (its position closest to Earth) at 4:06 a.m., and the Moon is full at 10:54 a.m. Perigee and Full Moon make a Supermoon, the second of 2019.

February 25: The Moon enters its final quarter at 6:28 a.m.

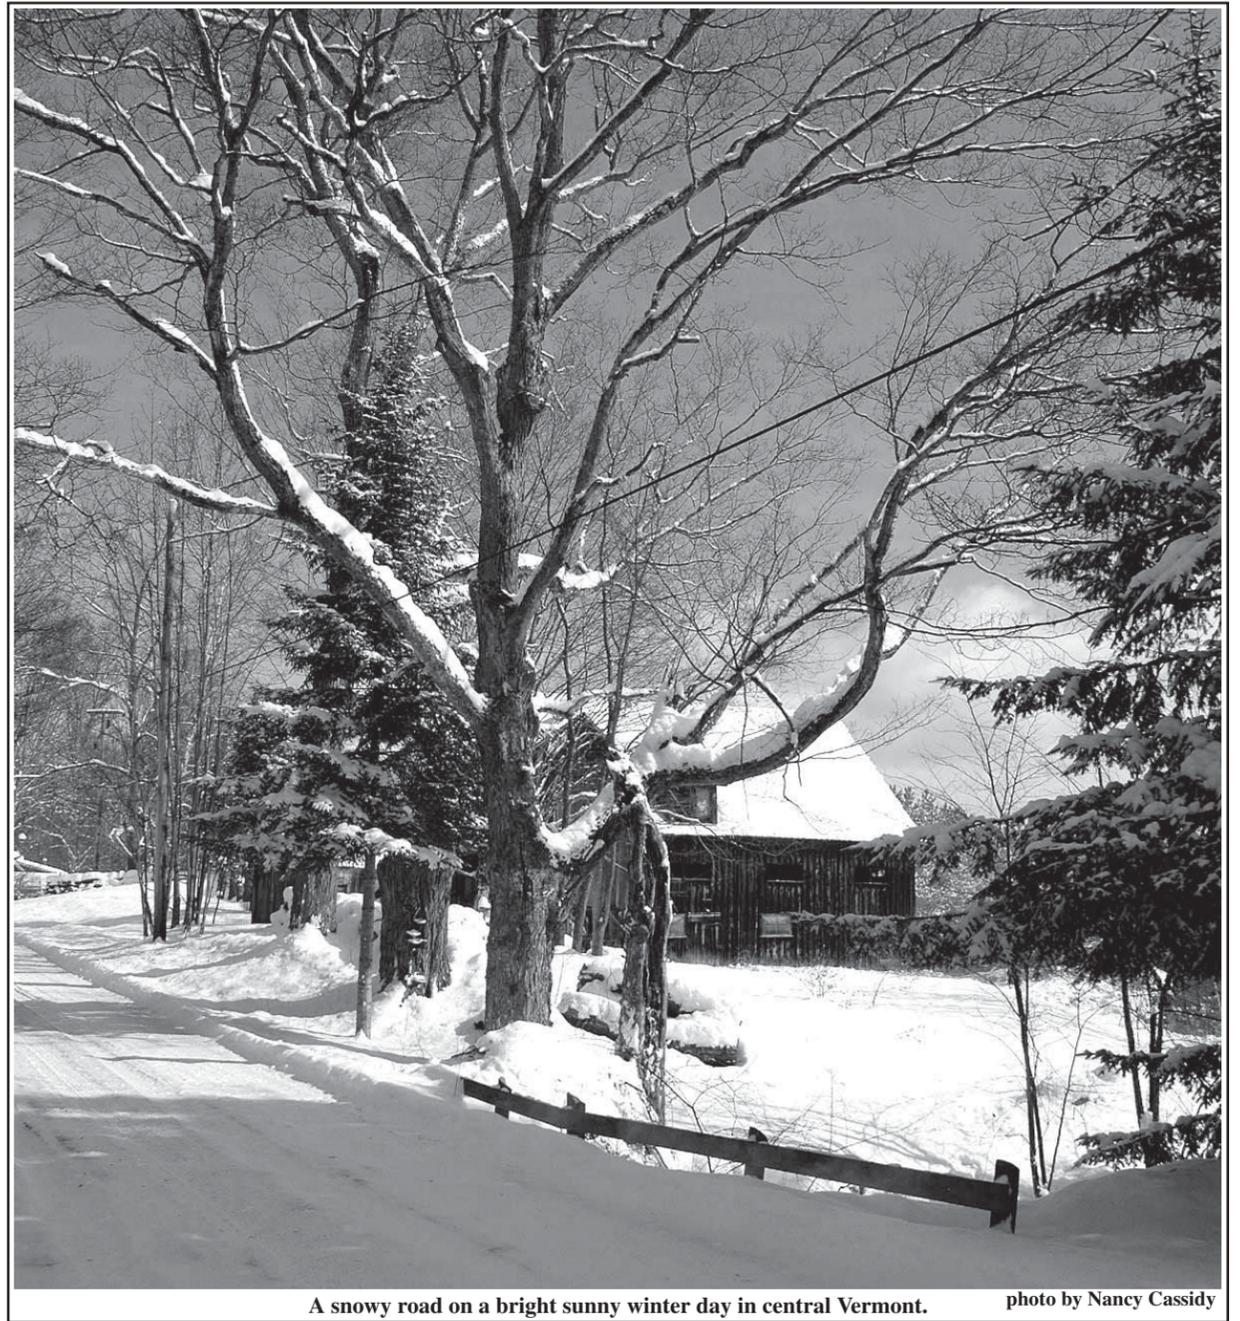

The Stars

By ten o'clock in the evening in the first week in February, giant Orion begins to move west from its dominating January position in the center of the southern sky. The star grouping of Canis Major takes its place along the horizon, with Sirius, the Dog Star, the brightest light in the whole night sky. Sirius, along with Procyon (the large star to the upper left of Sirius) and Betelgeuse (the reddish left shoulder of Orion) form what appears from our position on Earth to be an equilateral triangle.

The Great Square sets in the west before midnight during February's second week. Perseus follows Cassiopeia into the northwest. Spring's Regulus will be well up in the sky on the other side of the horizon in the constellation Leo.

Early Summer's planting guide, Arcturus, is visible just before midnight in the northeast on February 12th.

By the third week in February, Procyon, the largest star of Canis Minor, replaces the Dog Star due south near 10:00 p.m. Above it, find the twins of Gemini, Castor and Pollux. To the right, Orion and the Milky Way have shifted deep into the west, a simple sign that Early Spring has begun. If you are looking for the North Star, the Big Dipper has moved well into the northeastern sky, up from its low December and January position, and its pointers, the outside stars of the dipper, are easily found. On the 17th, the first stars of Deep Summer's Hercules appear in the northeast after 10:00 p.m.

A snowy road on a bright sunny winter day in central Vermont.

In the last week of February, the early night sky tells of Early Spring. Looking east, you can almost forget that cold Orion fills the west. Just a little to the right and down from the Big Dipper, May's Regulus is shining in the constellation Leo. The faint stars of lanky Hydra spread along the horizon. Due east, the most prominent star is Arcturus, which will be overhead this time of night when the first fireflies appear.

The Planets

This month, Jupiter remains the earliest Morning Star, rising a few hours past midnight in Ophiuchus. Moving retrograde from Ophiuchus and its tryst with Jupiter into Sagittarius, Venus arrives on the horizon just before dawn, with Saturn, low in the east, following well behind. Red Mars moves retrograde from Pisces to Aries, visible in the west after dark.

Meteorology

Significant cold waves are due to cross the United States around the following dates: February 3, 6, 11, 15, 20, 24 and 27. The first four February weather systems belong to the subseason of Late Winter, the last three to Early Spring. New Moon on February 4 and Full Moon, combined with lunar perigee, on February 19 are likely to increase the intensity of the weather systems that typically arrive near those dates.

Fireside Chant

Apple wood for fragrance,
Ash for violet glow,
Hornbeam, larch and sassafras,
Such lovely words to know.
Sycamore's serenity,
Hickory's embrace,
Oak to scatter golden sparks
Before the watcher's face.

Juniper for incense,
Birch for flame and flare—
Someone to come walking in

With snowflakes in her hair,
Darkness past the windows,
Wind above the eaves,
And friend to friend relating
The thoughts the heart believes.

Hemlock, spruce and poplar.
Say them softly now:
Chestnut, pine and mountain ash,
Beech and cherry bough.

Winter Festivities at Merck Forest & Farmland Center

Winter has come to Merck Forest and Farmland Center. There are plenty of family-centered fun activities and events to take part in, or you can just enjoy a stroll around the farm, or an invigorating hike or x-c ski along our 30+ miles of trails.

Winter Event Schedule

To learn more about the details of an event that interests you, please call the Visitor Center at (802) 394-7836. Advance reservations—made on a first-come first-served basis—are necessary for many events due to space limitations or scheduling considerations. For outdoor events, please dress for the weather: sturdy shoes/boots, layered clothing, snow/rain gear, flashlight/headlamp, snacks and water. Outdoor events are held weather-permitting.

Forest Makers Workshop for Children: Treats for Soap Felting Workshop. February 9th, 1-3 p.m. Just in time for Valentine's Day: Merck Forest's Soap Felting Workshop! Attendees will felt three bars of Kirk's 100% Pure Coconut Castile soap, scented or unscented, using natural-colored wool with natural- and brightly-colored wool and silk. One of these handmade scrubbies (or the set of three) would be a luxurious—and personal—gift for a loved one. Pre-registration is suggested: call (802) 394-7836 to reserve your place in the class. Fee: $30 per person includes materials.

Full Snow Moon Guided Hike. February 16th, 4-5:30 p.m. Join Merck Forest staff on a guided hike in the evening landscape to view the Full Snow Moon. This hike will be of moderate difficulty; participants must have appropriate footwear, headlamps, water and snacks. Reservations are requested, please reserve your spot in the group by calling (802) 394-7836. Held weather-permitting. Fee: $5 per person.

Winter in the Woods: Vacation Camp for Children. February 19th, 9 a.m. through February 21, 3 p.m. Winter-Break Camp for second through fifth graders. We'll explore the snowy woods, create wintry crafts and play! Merck Forest is a winter wonderland and you can come to camp for one day or all three. Bring a bag lunch (we'll furnish snacks) and dress for outdoor play. Space is limited, call to register. Fee: $50/day or $125 for three days.

Owl Presentation and Guided Walk. February 23rd, 4-6 p.m. Whooo's looking for company in our late winter landscape? Well, the Barred owls are, the Great Horned owls, and whooo knows whooo else. If we're lucky we'll be able to listen in on the conversation of one or another feathered couple. We'll start in the Visitor Center with a presentation featuring owls native to the Northeast, then we'll hike out in hopes of finding some courting couples. Participants must have appropriate footwear, headlamps, water and snacks. Reservations are requested. Held weather-permitting. Fee: $5 per person.

Vernal Pool Monitoring Workshop. March 1st, 6 p.m.-7:30 p.m. Vernal pools are unique, ephemeral wetlands that provide critical habitat for many species, particularly pool-breeding amphibians and invertebrates. Given their small size, landowners and private citizens have the opportunity to make a big difference in vernal pool conservation by protecting a single pool or complex of pools on their property or in their local community. Alex Wells of the Vermont Center for Ecostudies (VCE) will conduct a workshop to train property owners to monitor these special wetland habitats, using the VCE's monitoring protocols. This workshop will be indoors and will not have "field" component; admission is free to all. For any questions regarding the training component, call the VCE at (802) 649-1431, or check their vernal pool information page at vtecostudies.org.

Maple Madness for Children. March 16, 1-3 p.m. Let's find out what sugaring and maple trees are all about! This is a sap-to-syrup program; youngsters will see a tapping demonstration, tour the sap house to see the evaporator and equipment (if we're very lucky and the weather conditions are just right, we may even get to watch the sugar makers at work!), and then taste the sweet product of our maple trees. Since we'll be outside, children must be dressed for the weather, and must be accompanied by an adult companion; pre-registration is necessary (since enrollment is limited). Fee: $10 per child.

Merck's Annual Maple Celebration and Pancake Breakfast. March 23 at 9 a.m. through March 24 till 2 p.m. Admission: $5-$12. Hooray, it's coming! It's all kinds of fun, with sugaring demonstrations, games for the kids, wagon rides, and—of course—breakfast (pancakes laced with the best maple syrup in the universe, eggs, Merck-produced breakfast sausage, coffee and

Prime Time for Ice Fishing in Vermont

Late February and early March are prime time for ice fishing, according to the Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department.

"The warmer days and cold nights we normally have in late February and early March offer some of our best ice fishing of the year," said Vermont Fish & Wildlife Commissioner Louis Porter. "For safety reasons, you need to watch ice conditions as we get closer to spring, but this is prime time to enjoy the great ice fishing we have on many Vermont lakes."

Lake Champlain offers lots of ice fishing. Ice anglers can find good fishing for a variety of species on this 120-mile long lake, including landlocked salmon, lake trout, northern pike, yellow perch, white perch, walleye, and crappie.

Northern pike hotspots include Lake Champlain's Kelley Bay, Missisquoi Bay, Dillenbeck Bay, Carry Bay, Keeler Bay, St. Albans Bay, the shallow flats south of the Sandbar Causeway between Milton and South Hero, and the area south of the Champlain Bridge from Addison to Benson.

Landlocked salmon can be caught in the Inland Sea north of the Sandbar Causeway. There is no closed season for trout and salmon on Lake Champlain. Lake trout are found off the west shore of Grand Isle and North Hero, as well as Outer Mallets Bay, Shelburne Bay, and Button Bay south to the Champlain Bridge.

While walleyes can show up anywhere in Lake Champlain, winter action can be found in the southern end of the lake off Benson and Orwell, as well as the northern end in Swanton and Alburgh.

Yellow perch and other panfish are being caught throughout Lake Champlain in the bays and shallows as well as on many other Vermont waters.

Vermont's ice fishing season for trout, salmon and bass starts January 20th and continues through March 15th on 41 other large Vermont lakes. For a list of those lakes, go to page 36 of the "2018 Vermont Fishing Guide and Regulations" available where licenses are sold and digitally on Fish & Wildlife's website at www.vtfishandwildlife.com.

To locate places to stay and get help on the latest fishing activity, go to the Vermont Outdoor Guides Association website at www.voga.org.

The Vermont Room

by Pamela Hayes Rehlen

The Vermont Room—originally the Edward A. Ellis Room for Vermontiana and Local History—is part of the library at Castleton University. Ed Ellis was an old-time Vermonter, life-long Castleton town patriarch, politically-active, history-minded, and his room is filled with collected information about Vermont, and also a lot of obscure material about Castleton State Normal School, the forerunner to Castleton University, a teachers'-college-world nobody remembers any more.

This is a smallish place with book shelves built by one-time school administrator Jeff Hatch. When I visit in December, it has an uncharacteristically cluttered atmosphere. Furniture has been moved around to accommodate a school finals week 'de-stressor play and drawing table', set up for anxious students in the center of the room, with paper and crayons, a clothes line overhead on which to peg up resulting art work. I think to myself that to anyone attending the long-ago Normal School, this would have been simply incomprehensible.

Just inside the door of the Vermont Room, there used to be a collection of Calvin Coolidge memorabilia, including the pamphlet Growing Up in Plymouth Notch 1872-1895, the smaller pamphlet I Do Not Fit in With These Times reprinted from the January 6, 1933 edition of The New York Sun, old 78 RPM phonograph records of Coolidge's orations, sheet music for Keep Cool and Keep Coolidge, and, finally, the Rutland Herald front page announcing Coolidge's death.

"Ed Ellis was an old-time Vermonter, life-long Castleton town patriarch, politically active, history-minded..."

Now there's an assemblage of winter scene sketches, and on the bottom shelf the sword of Captain Abel Edgar Leavenworth of the Civil War 9th Vermont Infantry (later a principal of the Normal School from 1881 to 1897.)

The cabinets on the room's north wall were brought over from the original school library, which was in use from 1926 to 1965, and a place I remember well. Now they're filled with bound magazines and periodicals including Vermont Life, the Vermont, CSC's Vermont Literary Review, Vermont History, the Spartan, Vermont Affairs, and Vermont Climate. There's also The Green Mountaineer for junior historians—

Books

Busy that man must be indeed,
Who thinks he has no time to read,
No time to sit him down and look
Upon the pages of a book.
So busy with his tasks of day,
So eager, with the night to play,
That Tennyson is thrust away!

Near him are richer friends than those
His daily wandering ever knows
Friends who would share his every mood
And fill his heart with gratitude,
But he's so busy that he must Know Shakespeare merely as a bust,
A bit of marble gathering dust.

Busy that man must be, who finds
No time for all God's noble minds,
Who sees them waiting all about,
Takes tradesmen in and shuts them out.
He lives his life on crowded streets,
Listens to every man he meets,
But has no time for Lamb or Keats.

Fancy a garden wondrous fair
With every lovely blossom there
And at its farthest end a shop
Where one to eat a bite could stop,
Not to know books would be I think
Like racing there to eat and drink,
Blind to the roses, white and pink.

last published in 1990, a loss, I think, because the magazines were filled with stuff like: Was Your Town a Mill Town? (Dorset, surprisingly enough, was), How They Put the Wedding Bells in Bellows Falls (once a wedding capitol), and The Disappearing Balloonist of Hyde Park.

An original James Hope lithograph of Woodruff Hall once hung in this room, and below it a primitive pencil sketch of a Leavenworth Hall dormitory room that could have been mine in the 1960s except this 19th century-era accommodation was heated by a tiny Langdon stove.

The Vermont Room houses only a few artifacts, but Marcella Jackson, born in 1898, a wispy, maiden-lady, art, speech, and dramatics instructor, who taught at the school from 1928 to 1964, has left behind her speckled granite bird sculpture Beaconaire.

I knew Marcella Jackson. My closest school friend revered her. My parents, aunts, and uncles were less reverential, but she exemplified how sincerely high-minded the Normal School once was, and how its mission was seen as that of lifting up, and polishing up its many just-off-the-farm students and future teachers

The Vermont Room stacks have everything, including Vermont Reports, Vermont Statutes, Laws of Vermont, Reports of the Vermont Labor Relations Board, School Reports, State of Vermont Vital Statistics, and Annals of the Vermont Asylum for the Insane (shown to be a lively place with cheerful employee-inmate social interaction.)

There's also Rutland County Cemetery Inscriptions, The Collected Poetry of William Mundell, (poet laureate of the Poetry Society of Vermont,) genealogical registers for early families, the novels of Chris Bohjalian, and Mrs. Apple yard's Family Kitchen cookbooks. I think that The Blue Cat of Castleton must be in here somewhere, and I hope my own books: The Blue Cat and the River's Song, and Vanished Landscapes - Vermont Stories from West of Birdseye.

I also like visiting the hall outside the Vermont Room to look at old school photographs, my favorite being of the graduating class of 1933. I find my father here, standing on the steps of Woodruff Hall next to my Uncle Nelson Lyons, two Fair Haven boys, my father looking uncharacteristically louche, but Uncle Nelson in a well-cut dark suit. They both always told me that there were no men graduating from the Normal during their years, but I count sixteen in this photo.

Even a near-by picture of the class of 1909 shows three men among the women graduates—and, even more unexpected, sprawled at the feet of the ladies in the front row, an evil-looking, piebald pit bull.

On my last visit—the door kept open wide as mandated—I hear the steady buzz of a lot of students preparing for their end-of-semester finals.

I wish I could convey to them out there some sense of what this school once was, but I can't. They wouldn't believe it. I hardly believe it myself anymore.

That's why, every once in a while, I come back to The Vermont Room for a visit.

The Great Backyard Bird Count on February 16-19

The 21st Annual Great Backyard Bird Count will be held Friday, February 16, through Monday, February 19, 2018. Please visit the official website at birdcount.org for more information and be sure to check out the latest educational and promotional resources.

Join birders across the world to count birds in backyards, parks and favorite birding spots. A great free family project!

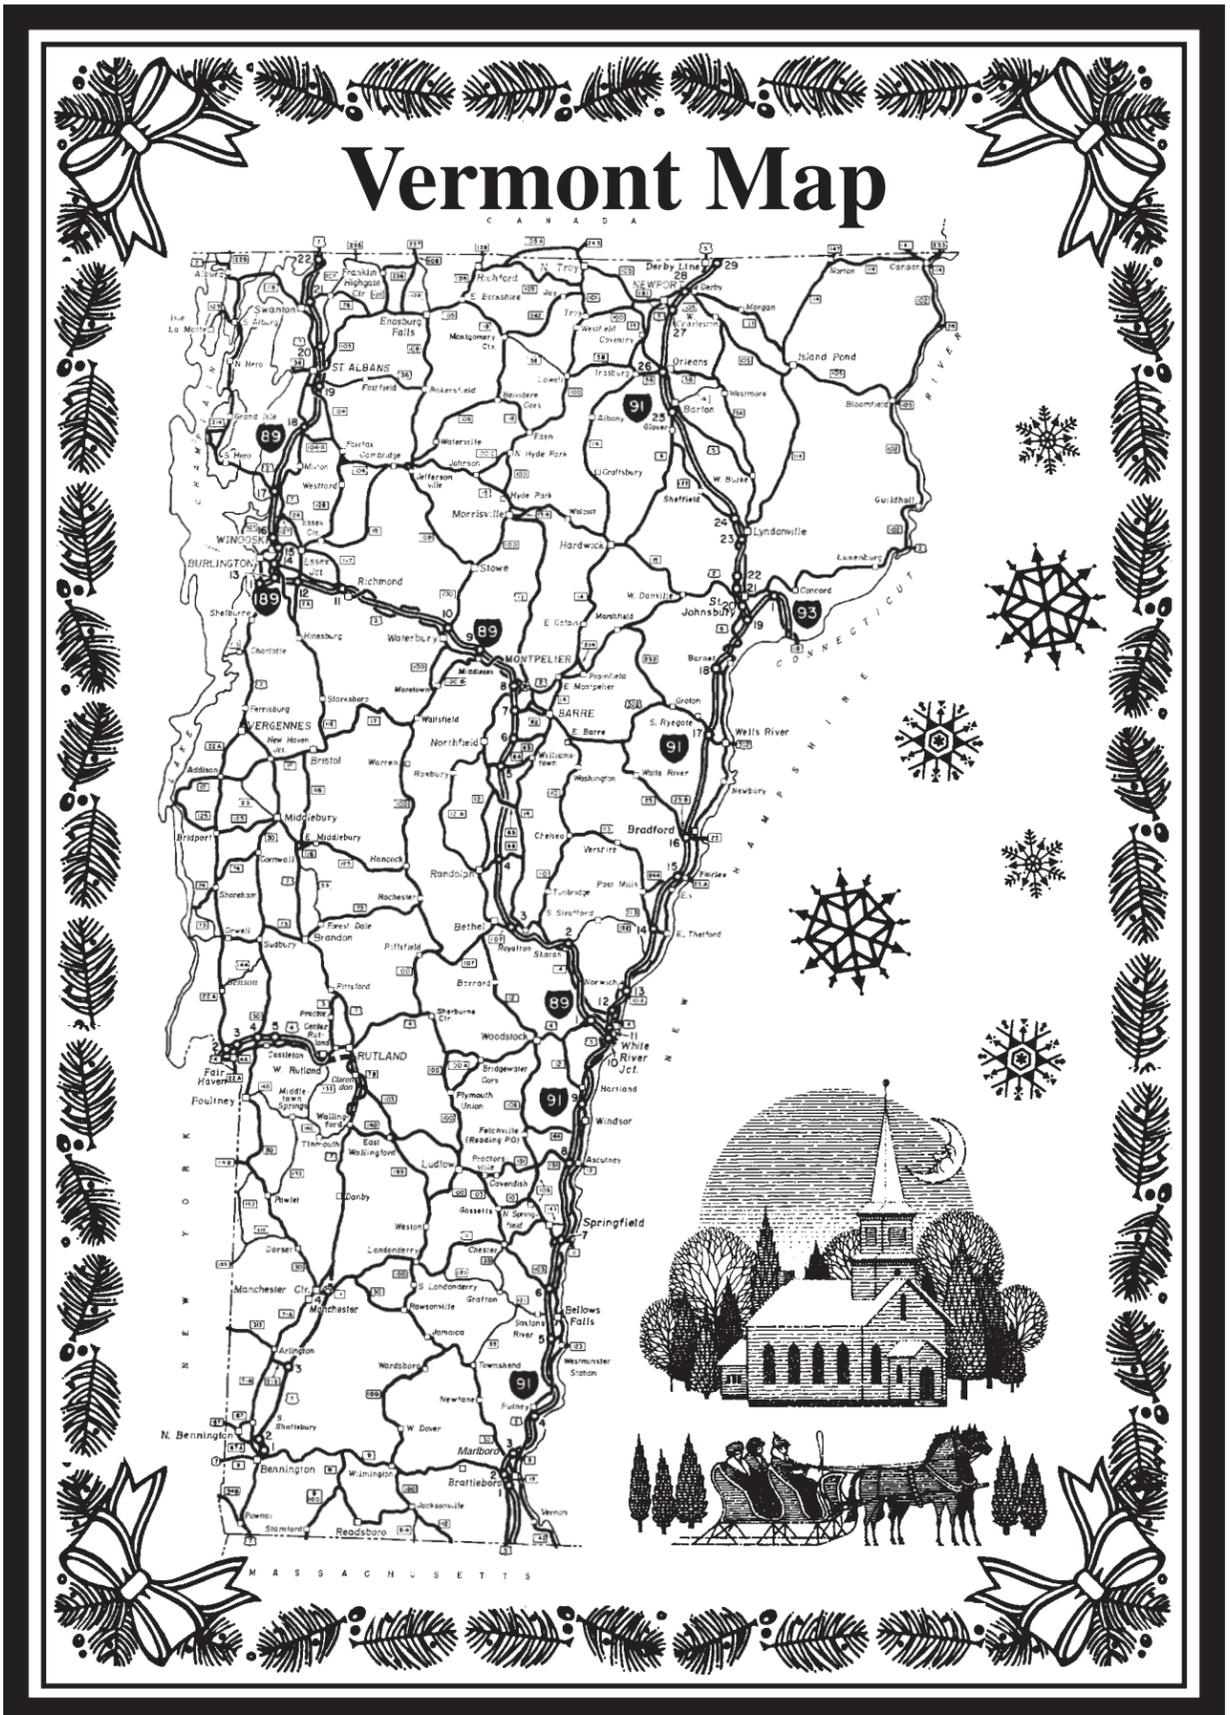

The Great Backyard Bird Count is a free, fun, and easy event that engages bird watchers of all ages in counting birds to create a real-time snapshot of bird populations.

Participants are asked to count birds for as little as 15 minutes (or as long as they wish) on one or more days of the four-day event and report their sightings online at birdcount.org. Anyone can take part in the Great Backyard Bird Count, from beginning bird watchers to experts, and you can participate from your backyard, or anywhere in the world.

Each checklist submitted during the Great Backyard Bird Count helps researchers at the Cornell Lab of Ornithology and the National Audubon Society learn more about how birds are doing, and how to protect them and the environment we share. Last year, more than 160,000 participants created the largest instantaneous snapshot of global bird populations ever recorded.

For more information contact birdcount.org, the National Audubon Society at audubon.org, or Rutland County Audubon Society at birding@rutlandcounty.audubon.org.

Green Mountain Gardener

Greens in the Dead of Winter

by Gordon Clark

Extension Master Gardener, University of Vermont

If you're a food gardener, you're probably counting the weeks until you can start your seeds and are already dreaming of your first fresh garden salad of the season. But what if you could easily produce salad greens right now?

You can, and the miracle green is pea shoots. You don't need low tunnels, cold frames or even artificial lights to grow these delightfully delicious and nutritious shoots in your home. It's also very cost effective as a few dollars of materials will produce $20 or more of product at retail prices. Shoots are sometimes mentioned interchangeably with sprouts. Both are highly nutritious and easy to grow but are distinct and grown differently. Sprouts are essentially the initial developing root system of the plant, are grown in jars or special containers and can be harvested in days.

Shoots are grown in a growing medium, have developed roots and are growing stems and initial leaves (and in the case of peas, tendrils) and typically take two to three weeks from planting to harvest. Think of them as teenage plants vs. baby plants.

Pea seeds for shoot production are available at most garden stores or seed companies. My favorite is the Dwarf Grey Pea, but other varieties will work. Here's how to do it.

Use a standard 10-20-inch growing flat, and fill it with potting soil. Don't worry about holes in the flat as you really don't need drainage for this.

Spread up to a cup (8 oz.) of pea seeds as evenly as possible over the surface of the flat. The flat should be fairly full. Just don't have seeds piled on top of each other.

Water and cover with a shallow growing flat placed right side up as if you were stacking the two flats. To create this shallow flat, simply cut the top off a standard flat so it is no more than one-inch deep.

Place in a cool spot. As the seeds germinate and start to grow (3-5 days), they will push up the shallow flat cover. Once they do that, give them another watering if needed. Keep moist but not wet.

Then turn the top flat over so it's upside down. Let the shoots continue to grow until they start to push up that top flat (another 2-4 days), then replace that with a standard 2 1/2-inch deep flat, also upside down, again watering if needed.

Don't skip this step as the two flats are a simple but effective means to "cap" the shoots and keep them growing at a uniform rate to produce a lush, even, easily harvested crop. Without them you may have a scraggly mess with shoots of all different heights.

Once the shoots start to push up the top flat (another 2-4 days) remove it, and put the shoots next to a window. Keep them moist and watch them grow for a few more days, turning the flat daily to keep them growing straight.

In as little as 10-14 days total you will have a flat full of sweet, highly nutritious 6-8-inch shoots. It's that simple. Harvest with scissors, leaving the bottom 2-3 inches so you will get a second "come again" crop.

Mix the shoots with winter veggies such as beets and carrots, apple or pear slices and nuts for a fresh salad to get you through the winter. They're also great on sandwiches, as garnishes and even stand up to a quick stir-fry. Enjoy!

by Edward Martin Taber

This morning about ten o'clock the thermometer stood at four degrees, and I think it did not go much higher in the course of the day, which was overcast, snowing, and with a steady north wind. I noticed it again at five, and it had gone down a degree.

From about three to four o'clock I walked in the west pasture. I went for the purpose of collecting some balsam boughs, which, being laid on the top of the stove, exhaled a pleasant odor.

The walking was very difficult, owing to the loose snow drifted in between the hummocks and hiding the underlying ice.

The brook could be heard but faintly, muttering under a double covering of ice and snow.

The spruces and balsams were heavily weighted; a touch would send the feathery mass scattered like powder from the ends of the branches.

I passed up on the edge of the old road through a small group of balsams, and on to the ridge among the branching sumacs. The position of the sun might be occasionally detected by an obscure gleam in the gray expanse of the sky. The fine snow sped almost horizontally on the steady wind.

Coming home by the pines, I was stopped by a faint note. I saw a bird that I took at first for a blue jay rise from the ground and slip behind an evergreen. Almost at the same moment, with a soft and broken cry, a vermilion-hued bird flew close above my head, swerved suddenly to one side, and disappeared in the boughs of a spruce close by. In the swift glance upward I saw distinctly the reddish chest, pale belly, and ashy under tail-coverts of the pine grosbeak.

This disappearance was immediately followed by the passage of one darker tinted, that with a powerful and easy flight swept across the pasture and settled in the top branches of a sumac. I waited patiently for the reappearance of the first, for although I knew they were the male and female pine grosbeak, I wanted another glimpse of the vermilion plumage. Had I not seen them, I think I should have recognized the note, so strange, so plaintive.

Casting a glance after the one departed (the female), I was startled to see a flock rise suddenly above the thicket of sumac where she had settled. They rose high into the air, and descended fluttering among the evergreens on the crest of the hill.

I immediately set out in pursuit, but before I had retraced my steps to the pine, they were up again, this time sweeping down toward me, over the snowy undulations. They passed within a rod of me, a considerable flock flying rather low. The males were brilliantly tinted—a deep red, almost crimson, on the crown; the females, flying, showed an orange spot on the rump.

Sometimes a thin lisp intermingled with their twitter, which latter sound reminded me somewhat of the distant chant of frogs, sometimes a cry, like the jay's, but fainter and softened, more like a sea bird's but not so plaintive. They appeared to me to be as large as robins.

They seemed mightily at home. It was a beautiful spectacle. They lit in the pine's swaying boughs, scattering the snow, the bright males contrasting finely with the dark green foliage.

My last sight of them was in the air, making a descent a little farther along the slope, fluttering, falling and changing place.

Way Back Then

Crossing the Atlantic by Steamer

by Charles Sutton

When one goes to Europe today the main consideration is the best ticket price on an intercontinental airline. But 60 years ago following a three-plus year stint in the U.S. Navy I gladly looked forward to and took passage on ocean liners.

My most memorable and longest trip—nine days from Naples, Italy, to New York City was on the 700-foot Italian (29,191 gross tons) SS Cristoforo Colombo built in 1954 and then the largest merchant ship in Italian service.

Old-timers living in New England may well remember when her sister ship the SS Andrea Doria sank July 26, 1956 off Nantucket after colliding with a Swedish merchant ship. Some 46 lives were lost, but an unbelievable 1,660 were saved. A college friend of mine's father was one of those life-jacketed passengers rescued after floating around for hours in the sea. He said it was a horrifying experience. Rescue efforts were difficult because the sinking ship listed so badly to starboard that its lifeboats were unreachable.

Any thoughts of such a disaster were far from my mind on my Italian liner. Maybe it helped that we were in the mid-Atlantic (albeit winter) but far from floating icebergs that sent the RSM Titanic to the ocean bottom on April 15, 1912. Also we never saw other ships during the journey so there was little chance of a collision on the high seas. The Atlantic Ocean was choppy and turbulent with gray, overcast skies for most days of the trip. But well worth staring at with one's inner thoughts.

My meal companions included two nurses from New Jersey returning from a vacation, an Italian-American from Brooklyn, NY, who had visited relatives in Italy, and a Russian 'princess'—so she claimed. She did have a cold, aristocratic manner and seemed annoyed to be stuck with us 'serfs' one deck level from steerage class. She could remain unfriendly because she said she spoke little English, but when I tried conversing with her in Russian, she was taken aback and not pleased. I said "please pass me some butter" (pozhaluysta propustite menya nemnogo masla). I received a "here" (vot) from her and that was it. We rarely saw her the rest of the trip—she took meals in her cabin. She probably had a fascinating and sad story to tell about fleeing the then Soviet Union with none of her wealth. We'll never know.

The man from Brooklyn was fun to be with, but one day he was depressed having attended the Mass that was conducted daily. He didn't like how the priest scared those who were immigrants, frightened enough to leave their country for a foreign land where they spoke no English. The priest told them their sins were like the angry seas surrounding them.

"The Atlantic Ocean was choppy and turbulent with gray, overcast skies for most of the trip."

In addition to restaurant-quality Italian food, there was plenty of Italian wine and other beverages. Except for movies, passengers had to occupy time on their own as there was no entertainment, musical groups, dancing, swimming pools, and sauna baths as are required on cruise ships today.

That was fine by me as I needed rest after my ski adventure and I was recovering from a serious ear infection—I was at the age and stage in life when going to a doctor was the last thing to do. I didn't go but should have. Some time was spent pondering the future. I had no prospects for a future job on the magazines and newspapers I applied at before I left. My credentials, I thought, were spotty: summer jobs on a farm, a BA in Russian studies, and three years as a crypto-linguist in the Navy. It would be back to live with my aging parents in Connecticut until I found a job.

Not many years after my ocean liner trip, daily jet flights to Europe by PanAm, TWA, BOA and other carriers got most of the business and forced the shipping companies to get their business from cruises and cargo-carrying services. The Cristoforo Colombo gave up New York service in 1973 and after a few years servicing South America as a cruise ship (but with maintenance and cockroaches problems) she was finally scrapped in Taiwan in 1982.

Today there is limited inter-continent passenger service on a few remaining ocean liners. If time is of no concern, limited bookings on cargo ships are also available. But who today has the luxury of ignoring the passage of time...

The Gettysburg Address by Abraham Lincoln

November 19, 1863

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced.

It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

Nancy Hanks

If Nancy Hanks
Came back as a ghost,
Seeking news
Of what she loved most,
She'd ask first
"Where's my son?
What's happened to Abe?
What's he done?"

"Poor little Abe,
Left all alone
Except for Tom,
Who's a rolling stone;
He was only nine
The year I died.
I remember still
How hard he cried."

"Scraping along
In a little shack,
With hardly a shirt
To cover his back,
And a prairie wind
To blow him down,
Or pinching times
If he went to town."

"You wouldn't know
About my son?
Did he grow tall?
Did he have fun?
Did he learn to read?
Did he get to town?
Do you know his name?
Did he get on?"

Maple Jam—Sweet A Cappella Jazz at Chandler Music Hall

Vermont's own a cappella jazz septet, Maple Jam, is returning to Chandler Music Hall on February 15 at 7:30 p.m. The snazzy vocal masters return to warm up a winter's eve with jazzy vocal sounds, spotlighting classic love songs in honor of Valentine's Day. Tickets are $21.

Maple Jam is a Vermont-based jazz a cappella band. These seven talented singers reinterpret favorite jazz and big band melodies with lush close-harmonies, cool percussion grooves, and soulful trumpet solos using only their voices. From the music of Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Neal Hefti and Miles Davis to Bill Evans, Chick Corea, Antônio Carlos Jobim and more—Maple Jam's got it covered!

Long ago, on a cold March day in 2004 several members of the Vermont Symphony Orchestra Chorus got together after rehearsal to sing some Gene Puerling arrangements of jazz and popular tunes. They were hooked! With almost 100 gigs under their collective belts, over the years they've delighted audiences at Burlington's Discover Jazz Festival, Sing for Peace Concerts, Burlington's First Night, Bristol's Best Night and scores of other events in Vermont, New Hampshire and Canada. In 2012 they completed their first CD Grade "A" Fancy. In 2017, after their tenor moved on, they regrouped to their present seven-singer ensemble.

Maple Jam.

Maple Jam performs a wide variety of music, mostly from the jazz world including classics from the Great American Songbook, Big Band hits from the 30s to the 60s, and Be-bop. They have also been known to sneak in a couple popular and novelty tunes here and there. Their repertoire includes their own arrangements and those made famous by such groups as The Swingle Singers, The Singers Unlimited, The Real Group, Manhattan Transfer and more.

Chandler Center for the Arts is located at 71-73 Main St. in Randolph, VT. (802) 728-9878. www.chandler-arts.org. info@maplejam.com. www.maplejam.com.

Snowstorm

Frost crystals obscure half my window pane,
But through the unobstructed glass I see
The blizzard swirling across field and road,
Covering lawn and car and neighbor's roof.
Flat light and snow blur the fine distinctions
Of sculpted shrubs, the inessential curves
Of garden walks, the subtle modeling
Of every shape that man and nature make.
What stands out now is the elemental
Structure of things, the trunks of my maples,
The angles of the heavy limbs from which,
In peril, hang snow-wrapped twigs and branches,
Sacrificed if need be without regret.
And the posts supporting my neighbor's porch,
The horizontals of the ridge and eaves,
The A of his pitched roof, his brick chimney,
Dark red against the white, no shingles seen—
All abstracted from the embroidery of things
Like muscle and bones beneath the skin,
Like the arc of hills seen from afar,
Like sea-swept cliff stripped of grass and bush,
Like the bedrock of things.

Off to the Sugarwoods by Bette Lambert

And the snow conditions are...variable! Recently we worked in the woods, in a steady rain. Each branch, each twig was frosted in ice. I floundered a bit in the mushy snow, well, alright, I actually went down face first twice.

The next day was different, as the crust was hard and beautifully shiny. The boys dove headfirst, sliding down hummocks on their stomachs, looking like young otters. I stayed on top for the most part, occasionally dropping through, with a loud "Humph!"

Walking out of the woods on the logging trail, conditions changed, and there was the odd, widespread sinking of the crust all around me, with each step.

At the top of the pasture, home in sight, I could not walk, the crust was so hard and slippery. I sat down and slid home, no sled needed.

37th Annual NOFA-Vermont's Winter Conference Celebrates Our Food Traditions & Agricultural Roots

by Megan Browning

This year's Northeast Organic Farming Assoc. of Vermont winter conference celebrates those who came before us by honoring the history of land-use in Vermont. The event takes place February 16-18th, 2019 at The Davis Center at the University of Vermont in Burlington. The conference highlights the role of all people working the land past and present, as well as the whole community currently committed to food production in Vermont.

Keynote speakers

Two keynote speakers will speak to this theme: Leah Penniman, a Black Kreyol educator, farmer/peyzan, author, and food justice activist from Soul Fire Farm in Grafton, NY, and Melody Walker Brook, Abenaki educator, activist, artist, and UVM alumni from Highgate, VT.

Drawing on twenty years of tending the soil, Leah will share both her farming wisdom as well as experience from her work at Soul Fire Farm, working to end racism and injustice in the food system. She will invite you to join in this work by learning how you too can be part of the movement for food sovereignty and help build a food system based on justice, dignity, and abundance for all members of our community. She is the author of Farming While Black—Soul Fire Farm's Practical Guide to Liberation on the Land published by Chelsea Green.

Melody Walker Brook will invite us to honor those who came before us, reminding us that the past is an integral part of our future. She will be joined by the Alnôbaiwi Dance Group, who will perform sacred dances from the Abenaki calendar. Together they will highlight the important role of the Abenaki community as the beginning of Vermont's rich agricultural history.

Over 80 workshops

With over 80 workshops, there is something for everyone. Learn how to graft your own tomato plants or how to grow hemp, or maximize the benefits of cover crops on your farm. Find out about techniques for seed saving, or learn to make bone broth or kimchi? Explore the precolonial history of the land you tend. Build an action plan to work toward uprooting racism in the food system.

Leah Penniman from Soul Fire Farm in Grafton, NY will be a keynote speaker at the Northeast Organic Farming Association of Vermont Annual Winter Conference in Burlington, VT Saturday, February 16th.

Four full-day intensives are presented on Monday, February 18 if you want to take a deeper dive: Sourdough Bread Baking, No-Till Vegetables, Business Branding and Marketing, and Finding Your Inner Activist.

cost of registration. Children are welcome to join their adult guardians for lunch at the children's price of $12. Of course, they're also welcome to pack a bag lunch for their kids.

Food, friends, and socializing

During a time when the future of food and organic farming is uncertain, we invite you to come together around hope and momentum toward building the food system that you want to be a part of. This conference will inspire us to think and talk together about the key role food and agriculture plays as a tool for social change and spend time honoring all of our agricultural roots as a critical piece of working together toward a just food system.

The NOFA-VT Winter Conference, is a highlight of the winter for Vermont's local food producers and consumers alike. We look forward to this annual opportunity to bring together farmers, gardeners, homesteaders and organic food enthusiasts for three days of shared learning, inspiration, good food, and great conversation. We hope to see you there!

Cherries Sweet and Tart

by Marie W. Lawrence

Although I suppose the legend of George Washington cutting down the cherry tree with his little hatchet has been thoroughly debunked by now, I still think of February as the month to enjoy cherries. Perhaps Valentine's Day, with its perpetual red theme, has something to do with this. Perhaps it's also because these highly perishable little fruits are frequently easier to find canned or frozen than fresh. One of my goals is to have producing cherry trees on our property. Finally varieties are being developed that tolerate the cold of a Vermont winter, which is exciting news indeed for a person whose favorite fruit in the whole world is a sweet golden cherry, with that gorgeous blush of red on its little cheek. Such delicacies notwithstanding, here are some recipes using their red (sometimes even artificially red) cousins.

SWEETHEART COOKIES

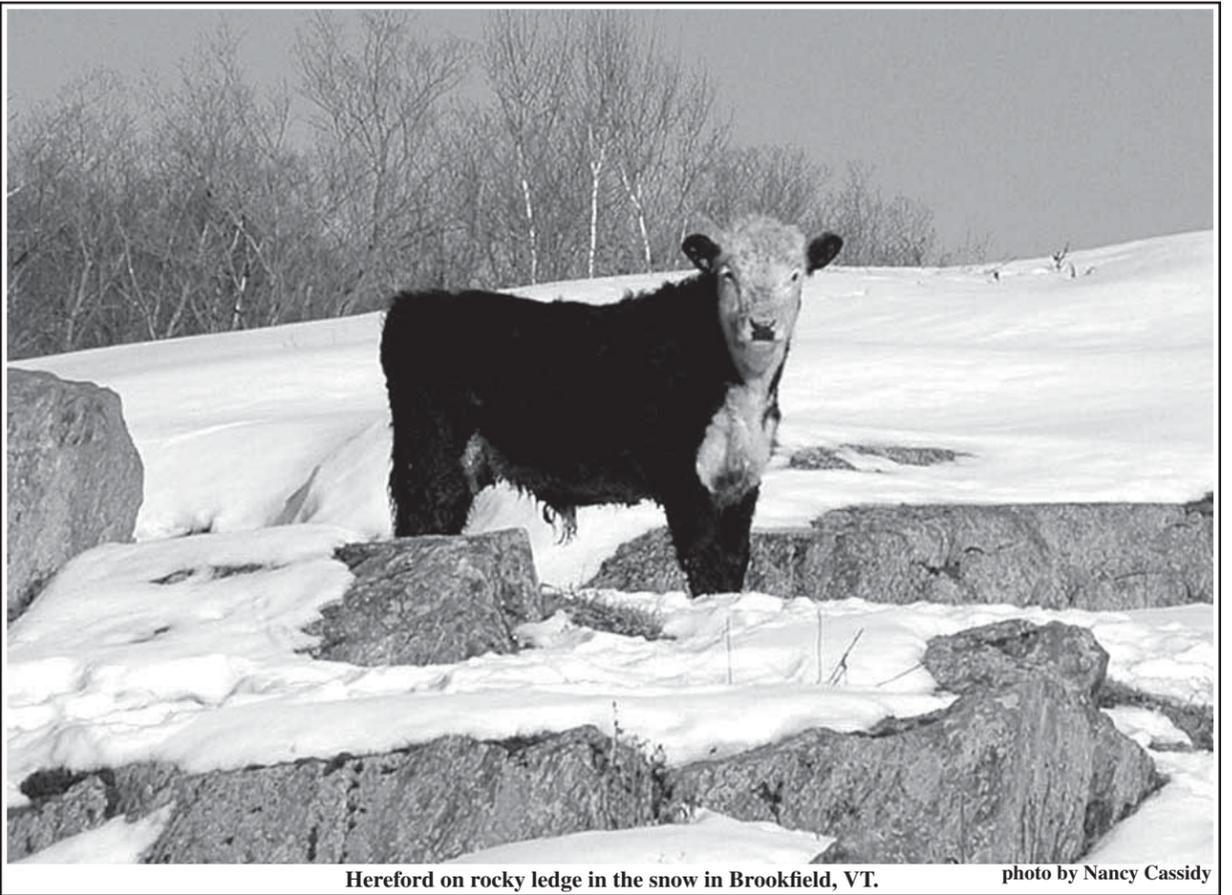

We couldn't let February slip away without including at least one Valentine recipe, could we? When our now-adult children first headed off to college, I wanted to still be able to share a little taste of home baking with them. I devised my recipe for sweetheart cookies about the time our older son Greg departed for the halls of higher academia. The nice thing about these crispy little sugar cookies is that the frosting is sandwiched inside, making them easy for transporting and even for mailing to someone special who's far away.

- | | |
|--------------------------------|------------------------|
| 1 c. unsalted butter | 1 t. vanilla |
| ½ t. almond extract | 1 c. granulated sugar |
| ½ t. salt | 1 egg |
| 1 t. baking powder | 2 c. flour |
| Colored sugar and/or sprinkles | Milk for brushing tops |

Pink Buttercream Filling/Frosting

- | | |
|---|------------------------------|
| ½ c. butter | 3 c. confectioner's sugar |
| 1 T. water | 1 t. flavoring of choice |
| 2-3 drops of red food coloring (optional) | (vanilla, cherry, raspberry) |

Beat the butter and sugar together until smooth and creamy. Add the egg and extracts, beating again until light and fluffy. On low speed with a heavy mixer blade or by hand with a wooden spoon, stir in the flour, baking powder, and salt until thoroughly combined. Cover the dough or place in a plastic bag and refrigerate for about one hour (or more) before rolling and baking. The chilling time is important for a couple of reasons; it makes the fragile dough more manageable, and it decreases the amount of flour necessary for rolling and therefore the amount absorbed when rerolling scraps. When you're ready to bake your cookies, roll portions of the dough at a time, thin (¼"). Cut out with heart-shaped cookie cutters. Lightly brush the tops with milk and sprinkle generously with colored sugar. Bake on ungreased cookie sheets on upper shelf of a 350°F for about 10-12 minutes, until light golden brown around the edges. Cool for a minute or two on the sheets before carefully removing to cooling racks. For the filling, beat the softened butter with the extract of choice at medium speed until it's nice and fluffy. Gradually add the confectioner's sugar, beating well. Mix in the water and a few drops of red coloring, if you wish. The frosting will be creamy, yet stiff enough to sandwich between cookies without running out or turning the cookies soggy. If you prefer to ice your cookies, you may wish to beat in another tablespoon or so of water. Use 1-2 teaspoons of filling per cookie; this batch should yield enough for approximately 2½-3 dozen heart sandwich cookies, depending on the size of the cookie.

CHERRY BERRY PIE

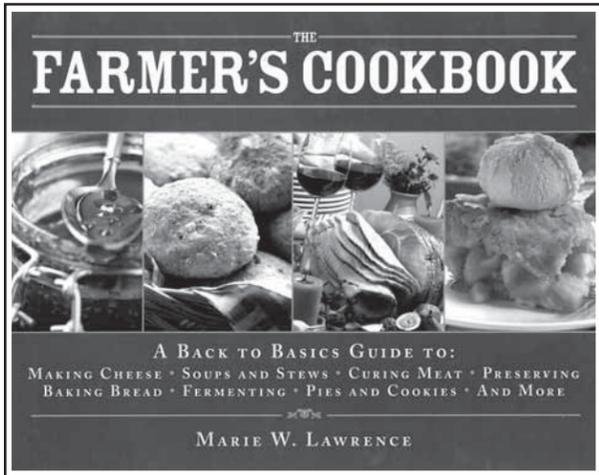

When I was a vendor at the Brattleboro Farmers' Market, one of my specialties was little triangles of homemade puff pastry filled with either savory veggie or sweet fruit fillings. The cherry-berry combination was one of my favorites, here revised to make a standard pie.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 2 c. tart cherries (frozen are fine) or 1 can of tart cherries, not drained | 2 c. fresh or unsweetened frozen red raspberries |
| 3 T. cornstarch | 1¼ c. water (measure the canned cherry juice first, adding extra water to equal this amount) |
| 1 t. grated lemon rind or ¼ t. pure lemon extract | ½ t. pure lemon extract |
| ½ t. almond extract | 1 T. kirsch or other cherry liquor |
| Unbaked 2 crust pie pastry | |

Combine everything except the extracts, liquor, and crust in a heavy saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring gently, until thickened and bubbly. Remove from heat and add the flavorings. Allow the filling to cool for about 15 minutes. Meanwhile, roll out half the chilled piecrust and fit into a 9" pie plate. Add the filling and moisten the out rim of the bottom piecrust with water or milk. Roll out and fit the top crust, fit it over the pie, and trim excess overhang from both crusts, leaving about an inch extra. Fold the top crust down over and under the bottom crust to seal. Press the edges and flute decoratively. Cut slits in the top crust or prick with a fork to allow steam to escape during baking. Brush the top crust with milk or cream and sprinkle lightly with sugar. Bake at 425°F for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350°F and continue baking until the crust is nicely browned and the filling is bubbly, about 30 minutes longer. Cool before cutting.

Guided Wildlife Management Area Walks

The Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department will be hosting a series of free guided walks to look for winter wildlife and their tracks on select state wildlife management areas this year in northern, central, and southern Vermont beginning this winter.

The walks are led by wildlife biologists and naturalists with decades of experience conserving Vermont's wildlife and their habitats. The walks will focus on bird watching as well as observing the sign or presence of other wildlife.

"These wildlife walks are a chance for Vermonters to get to know the state's 98 wildlife management areas either in their own backyard, in a unique area such as along the Connecticut River Valley, the Lake Champlain Valley, or in a wild remote corner of the state," said John Austin, lands and habitat program manager for the Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department. "We'll have offerings throughout the year, from winter tracking walks to summer birding paddles. Whether you're watching trout jump up Willoughby Falls in the spring, looking to observe unique birds, or looking for moose among the colorful fall foliage, there are always great opportunities to view wildlife on Vermont's wildlife management areas."

All seminars are free and participants are encouraged to bring snacks and water and to dress in footwear and clothing appropriate for walking slowly in the woods in winter. Space is limited to the first 30 signups and these events fill up quickly, so signup as early as possible. Go to vtfishandwildlife.com for more information and to sign up for the walks.

Wildlife Viewing Tour. Saturday, February 2, 2019, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Victory Basin Wildlife Management Area, Victory, VT. Join St. Johnsbury biologists Doug Morin and Paul Hamelin for a wildlife-based exploration of a unique part of Vermont. Victory Basin is a vast lowland boreal forest, an environment common to northern Canada but rare here in Vermont, and this walk allows visitors to feel like they've stepped into another world. There is a possibility of spotting boreal wildlife such as snowshoe hare, gray jays, and possibly even tracks of an American marten. Doug Morin is a highly trained naturalist who manages Victory Basin WMA and Paul Hamelin is a veteran wildlife biologist who manages wildlife habitat on WMAs throughout the state. Backup date: Saturday, February 9.

Winter Wildlife of Vermont. Saturday, February 16, 2019, 10 a.m. – 1 p.m. Middlesex Notch Wildlife Management Area, Middlesex, VT. John Austin, lands and habitat program manager, will lead this tour of this unique area of mature forest at the base of central Vermont's Worcester Range. Winter is a quiet time for wildlife on the landscape, but many species are still out and about and are easily located due to their tracks in the snow. This large forested property contains many important food sources for wildlife, meaning the group may see birds or mammals and their tracks as they forage for a winter meal. Backup date: Sunday, February 17.

Tracking Wildlife in Winter. Saturday, March 2, 2019, 9 a.m. – 12 noon. Turner Hill Wildlife Management Area, Grafton, VT. Wildlife biologist Chris Bernier has spent his career working with mid-size mammals such as fisher, fox and the elusive lynx and pine marten. Much of his field work with these species has involved tracking them in the snow. Come learn Bernier's tricks for tracking these and other wild mammals and birds. This tour is sponsored by The Nature Museum in Grafton, VT. Backup date: Saturday, March 9.

Vermont's wildlife management areas are owned and managed by the Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department for wildlife-based recreation such as hunting, fishing, and wildlife watching. These lands are purchased and managed in part using funds from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Wildlife Restoration Program using excise taxes on hunting and shooting equipment, as well as through hunting and trapping licenses and donations to the Vermont Habitat Stamp program.

There are Vermonters, Then There is Vera Ruth

by Burr Morse

I can just hear my wife Betsy now talking on the phone with her cousin Pennie. One of them would say “and what would Vera Ruth say about that?” And then, through gales of laughter, they’re off and running with a long phone conversation. You see “Vera Ruth” was their grandmother, stalwart Vermonter, character...perfect common denominator for the those gales of laughter.

Vera Ruth Cole was born in 1892 before Vermont living got “soft”, our winters were still winters, and folks grubbed out a living one grueling step at a time. She started her life performing the never-ending “girl” chores of cooking, housecleaning, and washing clothes but, due to the particular poverty around her hometown of Mount Holly, Vermont, she also inherited “boy” chores: milking cows, cutting wood, driving horses. In fact through her experience with these chores, she once reached down a cow’s throat to extract a choke-causing apple. Another time, she was dragged through the dirt by a team of runaway horses! This early period in her life gave her both Yankee fortitude and Vermont wisdom.

Intrepid and straight-laced, she had no room for smiling. This quality remained through her whole life. Back in her early years, smiling was passé, especially for photographs or in public. One theory was that smiling portrayed a person as “lower class, foolish, dumb” and Vera Ruth was certainly none of the above. In her case, this writer’s theory is that life was so hard in her

“Intrepid and straight-laced, for her whole life.”

community that there was rarely anything to smile about! In spite of her hard life, life did go on...even though she was once heard to say “Harold never saw me naked”, she and her husband Harold Parker somehow had four kids. Not surprisingly, most things were done in the dark!

Even with her stoic persona, there was at least one of life’s little pleasures she partook of. She often departed behind her bedroom’s closed door to, in her words, “take a trifle of a nap”. It was smoke from an unfiltered Chesterfield, however, wafting through the loose-fitting farmhouse door that told the true story...a nap was not what she was about! Although she never admitted to having the habit (ladies did not smoke!), telltale signs went as far as once putting out a couch fire with the crook of her cane (we have the cane which is still very charred).

The earlier description of Vera Ruth Parker points heavily to her being prickly but that was not necessarily the case. To her children and grandchildren, her door was always open. Her idiosyncrasies included love, reverence and guidance. She had a gossipy interest in what was going on around town but also a genuine concern for the lives of each and every family member. After all, her granddaughters say the harshest swear word she ever uttered was “bubbles”...and in light of words we hear today, who could not love a person like that!

Vera Ruth Parker finally passed away at age 99 in spite of the Chesterfields. If she could assess the quality of her life, she would probably say something like “hard work never killed anyone” and would cast an unsmiling eye toward some things that go on these days. I, for one, pine for the Vermont of yesteryear when hard work brought character instead of complaints, more folks farmed the land, and the worst swear word we heard was “bubbles”.

Building the Kitchen Fire In Vermont Winter

To turn out with a frozen yawn
And in the blue-black dark,
And haul your socks and brogans on
Without no mean remark,
And poke through both the entry doors
And grope to left and right,
And find the matchbox, strike a match
And light a lantern light;

And set the lantern on a chair,
And then look down to see
If there is any kindling there
Jest where it oughter be;
Then lift the lid and take both hands
To feed the fire-food in,
And touch it off and curl all up
To feel the heat begin;

And stand there till your legs get weak
As No. thirteen wire,
And then decide you’ll take a peek
To see what ails your fire,
And lift the old cracked lid again
From off its iron seat,
But not a vittermine of fire
Or callory of heat—

It’s quite a thing, it’s quite a chore
To make two cold sticks spark,
Without, as I have said before,
No malapert remark;
The fire collapsed, but ‘twan’t your fault
No more than urn, a bit,
When Europe scrapped and called on us
To make the Hell-Bosch quit.

It didn’t ketch, that’s all; you know
It means a woodshed trip,
Which means that you must sweep some snow
Unless you want to slip;
You grab the broom, unlock the door,
But such a blast of air!
It blows the cat inside the house,
The lantern off the chair.

A batch of woodshed kindling sends
Your hopes of heat-waves higher,
And when your new endeavor ends
You’ve got a Christian fire;
You sling the milkpails on your arm
And start out through the dark—
“Come cold, wail wind, I’ve beat you both Without no mean remark!”

Book Reviews by Charles Sutton

Stories About Friendships to Warm the Heart

In times when people are estranged and friendships elusive it is reassuring to read that friendships still can happen in unique ways among unlikely persons...and even animals.

Consider the young mouse Pete's friendship with an aging, pipe-smoking professor mouse, a former astronaut who was the first mouse to land on the moon.

The twosome strike up a friendship in Edison—The Mystery of the Missing Mouse Treasure by Torben Kuhlmann ($19.95. NorthSouth Books, Inc. www.northsouth.com), and dream up and build a vessel capable of taking them to the bottom of the ocean to find missing treasure more precious than gold.

The author, born in Germany in 1982, was already a gifted draftsman as a child, captivated by small airplanes, strange machines and steaming trains.

So be amazed at his mouse-made submarine and underwater diving suits carefully manufactured undercover by the two mice at Reynolds & Sons car repair shop. They sneak their sub aboard an ocean-going liner that will take them to the site of a ship wreck and its hidden treasure. Stunning, full-page illustrations show their trials and errors including an underwater glass dome and wooden spice container before developing the metal submarine. The drama includes crabs eating the diving bell's lifelines and a giant whale song making the sub's metal 'creak and groan.' As the title of the book suggests, the mice's treasure has something to do with another inventor, Thomas Edison, and what he created with the help of mice. We won't reveal their treasure, but you will be pleasantly surprised.

Kuhlmann, who studied illustration and design at the University for Applied Sciences in Hamburg, works in pen and watercolor, and also with acrylics, oil paints and digital programs. Marvel at the book's many full-page color depictions of young mouse Pete and the older Professor as they build their vessel and find the treasure. This latest book was translated from the German by David Henry Wilson.

The author's other books are Lindbergh—The Tale of a Flying Mouse, Armstrong—The Adventurous Journey of a Mouse to the Moon, and Moletown.

When one is especially old and loses a spouse, a world with any sort of joy also comes to an end. That is unless some small event like a new and unexpected friendship can rekindle and start life again. Such is the story of The House of Lost and Found by Martin Widmark & Emilia Dziubak ($17.95. Floris Books. www.florisbooks.co.uk) where the grief-stricken Niles gets one of life's reprieves when an unknown stranger—a neighbor boy, makes him take a potted plant to look after while he and his family go on vacation. At first the elderly man sulks at such an imposition, but then when the plant starts growing a flower the old man is inspired to clean up his house, open the windows for some fresh air, his runaway cat returns, and he no longer mopes about day and night reliving sad memories.

By some miracle the potted plant produces a poppy flower just like the ones in the field his late wife Sara had painted, and where the couple had first fallen in love. After a few days the boy returns to rescue his plant and invites the once-grumpy old man to visit his family, and he happily accepts.

Polish artist Emilia Dziubak's illustrations contrast the gloom and doom of the old man's sorrowful and lacking life in his rundown house with the life and comfort that just one flower and one little boy can bring. The old man's despair is common in life and the story of his renewal is told and illustrated with compassion and hope.

Most self-exiled shut-ins are left alone, ignored or invisible to the outside world for many reasons. But sometimes by some strange chance they can come out of their shell and enjoy a few moments of happiness. Meet live-alone Elise in The Visitor by Antje Damm, translated from German by Sally-Ann Spencer ($17.99. Gecko Press. geckopress.com).

Elise is scared of spiders, scared of people, even scared of trees, and never goes outside. One day a strange object, a blue paper airplane comes sailing through her window. She quickly burns it up. The next day, after a fitful night's sleep, she has a visitor. A knock on the door produces a little boy, Emil, wanting his plane back...but first can he use the bathroom? His matter-of-fact friendship encourages Elise to show him around. She gives him something to eat, reads him a storybook, and they play games. "It's fun at your house," he says, waving goodbye. "Bye for now, Emil," she replies. Later we see her working hard at making a paper airplane for the for-sure return visit.

You will marvel at German artist and architect Damm's eye-catching illustrations made of cut-outs, and her use of the colors yellow, fuchsia, red, and light blue to warm the atmosphere room to room. This is a delightful book.

For a dramatic yet whimsical story of a short-lived but all-encompassing and tender relationship between two unlikely entities reflect on and give thought to an unhappy cave-dwelling gray Creature and friend, an all-seeing, talkative tiny sun spark...yes spark...in My Little Small by Ulf Stark and illustrated by Linda Bondestam ($15.95. Enchanted Lion Books. www.enchantedlion.com).

Narrated in blank verse by Sweden's beloved poet Ulf Stark, accompanied with extraordinary visionary drawings by Finnish illustrator Linda Bondestam, we meet the Creature who because she would become ill and die if exposed to light, goes out only at night, trying to reach the moon for something to care for. Then one day a tiny sun spark enters the Creature's cave and a sweet, brief friendship begins. The Spark, whom Creature calls Little Small, tells of sunset colors, and the life it supports with its rays: the "vast, blue ocean with its wonderful waves, fish and boats" and a "hot, empty yellow dessert" where some still live. Little Small thrills the Creature with descriptions of animals of the green forest: tree swinger, gaudy ground-pecker, gangle-leg (a spider), spotty runner, sock creep (a snake), little hopper and more. The Creature feels happy and tells stories, too, of how she built and climbed up boulders to get closer to the moon.

But all too soon Little Small must return to the sun before dark and the Creature carries her to the far side of a mountain to say their good-byes. Even though the twosome have had only one day together their friendship has changed the Creature's life. As she waves goodbye to Little Small, "The Creature covers her eyes, to better see all the colors the Spark lit up inside her." And isn't this the mark of a true friend?

Swedish poet Ulf Stark, who died in 2017, authored more than 100 books for children. Those printed in English include Can You Whistle, Johanna, FruitTop and Dip Sticks, When Dad Showed Me the Universe, and three My Friend Percy books. Linda Bondestam, who lives in Helsinki, has illustrated more than 25 books, 10 printed in English.

Archer Mayor Releases His 29th Joe Gunther Mystery!

Archer Mayor, author of The New York Times bestselling Vermont-based mystery series featuring detective Joe Gunther, recently released his 29th novel, Bury the Lead (St. Martin's/Minotaur Press).

In this intriguing mystery, a woman is found dead at the top of a Vermont ski area in the summer. The investigation leads to Mick Durocher, who, when confronted, confesses to the killing. Case closed? Hardly. The confession is riddled with holes, the evidence doesn't back it up, and Joe Gunther and his crew are left to wonder why their initially hot lead is dead and the murder now clearly the work of some unseen master manipulator.

Archer Mayor, a 35-year Vermont resident, has written 29 highly-acclaimed Joe Gunther novels loosely based on his actual experience in the field.

Over the past 30 years, he has worked (and continues to work) as a firefighter/EMT, a police officer, and a death investigator for Vermont's Office of the Chief Medical Examiner. Mayor's diverse careers in other fields also inform his books. He has been a scholar, editor, researcher, and photographer, as well as a political advance man and a medical illustrator. He is a graduate of Yale.

According to Mayor, who releases one novel each year, "I am continuously driven by two things: ignorance and curiosity." His research is always in depth, whether it be into horses, reservoirs, how disease is spread, or even ginkgo trees.

In 2016, the author received the Robert B. Parker Award, named for "the dean of mystery writers." He also received the Vermont Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts. The New York Times calls Archer Mayor "The boss man on procedures."

Bury the Lead is available at independent bookstores and online.

George Washington's Secret Six

The Spy Ring That Saved the American Revolution

by Brian Kilmeade and Don Yaeger

($17.99, Viking, www.penguin.com/youngreaders)

When we remember and honor George Washington on his birthday (February 22, 1732) how many of us know anything about him operating a top-secret spy ring in the New York, Long Island and surrounding areas that helped defeat the British and win the War of Independence.

Thanks to this timely book, written for middle readers but a fascinating read for all ages, we learn that a group of unlikely spies, average patriotic citizens, risked the lives collecting and gaining intelligence on the British which was sneaked by couriers on horseback directly to their Commander-in-Chief, George Washington.

Only one of them—a woman, Agent 355, was captured and presumably perished aboard a British prison ship, the HMS Jersey. The other spies had numerous and scary close calls, but made it safely through five years of war. Afterwards they had to remain anonymous for fear from being found out and harmed by Loyalists still living in America.

A forerunner to the six spies was a 21-year-old Connecticut schoolteacher Nathan Hale who early on was betrayed by Loyalist cousins, captured by the British and executed. The famous saying 'I only regret I have but one life to lose for my country,' has been attributed to him.

The stories and doings of each spy are interwoven into the timeline of Washington's movements and battles, successes and failures, throughout the long war. Washington early on knew that his ragtag force of volunteer civilian patriots were no match for the well-trained, heavily-armed and well-equipped British forces. But he knew that a chance of victory would also be through the help of a sophisticated intelligence service. He had earlier served as a major in the Militia of the British Province of Virginia during the French and Indian War. There he gained tactical and strategic military skills, even including some spying. Fortunately for us he was unable to get a commission in the British Army!

In a mission statement dated April, 1781, Washington writes to his chief spy Benjamin Tallmadge: "the great objects of information include arrivals, embarkation, preparations for movement, alterations of positions, situations of post, fortifications, garrisons, strengths or weaknesses of each, distribution and strength of corps."

He also writes that whatever intelligence is communicated should be not in general terms, but in detail with the greatest precision. Getting that intelligence data to Washington usually took about two weeks. It was to be written in invisible ink and disguised among regular papers like invoices, shipping forms, family letters, even in packages of blank paper. The use of invisible inks was well known, and there were easy ways to make it reappear. For that reason Washington had his spies use a unique ink that could only be seen again if treated by a special stain. (This book includes a how-to on making invisible ink and an alphabet code). Now let's meet our spies.

Benjamin Tallmadge (undercover name John Bolton), the young army captain who was close to Washington at Valley Forge, became his spymaster on Long Island, recruited other spies, planned routes and was instrumental in exposing a British scheme to harm the economy with counterfeit money.

He developed a code and name for each spy to use. He also was instrumental in exposing to Washington the traitorous plot by officers Major John Andre and General Benedict Arnold to give fortification data about West Point to the British. (An ancestor of this book reviewer was one of the three Patriot militiamen who apprehended Major Andre and found plans for the fort in his boots).

Caleb Brewster, a brash young longshoreman, ferried messages in a whaleboat across the Long Island Sound to Connecticut. He had a key role in tricking the British into thinking Washington was to attack New York City. This allowed ships loaded with French troops sent to aid Washington to safely disembark and avoid an attack by British naval vessels.

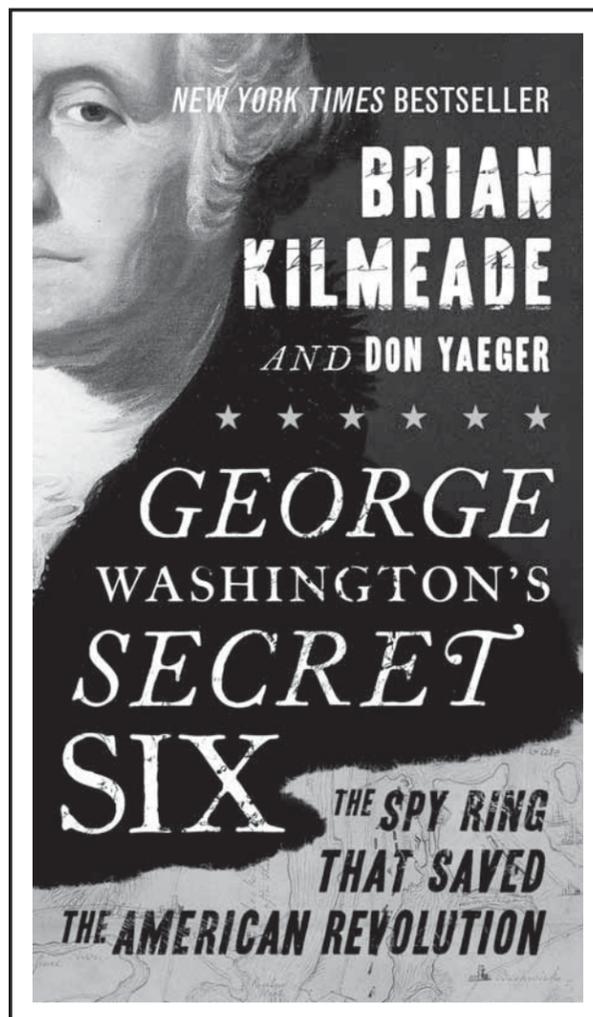

Abraham Woodhull, described as a 'black sheep in a strait-laced family' with the code name Samuel Culper, reported on the state of British warships in New York Harbor as well as troop movement and naval preparations on Long Island Sound. The group of spies was named after his undercover name: The Culper Spy Ring.

Austin Roe, the owner of a tavern in East Setauket, Long Island, frequented by British soldiers and others loyal to the King, overheard enemy conversations which he reported.

James Rivington, a newspaper publisher and former Loyalist, used book bindings to hide slips of paper holding intelligence he had gleaned from Loyalist friends and guests who patronized his coffeehouse.

Robert Townsend, a quiet shopkeeper, developed the perfect cover as a writer for Rivington's Long Island newspaper the Royal Gazette. The spy-to-be could ask questions about 'things' without raising suspicions.

Agent 355 remains a mystery to this day with only Woodhull, who recruited her, ever knowing her name and telling no one. She worked in Manhattan, he wrote in a letter to Tallmadge, where she was uniquely positioned to collect important secrets. Her disappearance and apparent death was very upsetting to the other spies. In a letter he wrote that she was situated to "outwit them all."

The book concludes with a timeline from when the Stamp Act by England (March 22, 1765) levied a tax on every piece of paper the colonists used to November 25, 1783 when Washington rides into Manhattan as the victor and the last British ships leave the harbor. Our narrative ends with this scene:

"But now the citizens of New York, no longer subject to British law or British soldiers, waved flags freely as Washington rode forward. Church bells tolled. Not in warning but in celebration, and the shouts after each firing of the cannons were triumphant rather than terrified. Some people even crowded theater's edge, waving at the ships for departure and laughingly bidding the defeated soldiers on board a lovely trip home."

Fantastical Cakes

Incredible Creations for the Baker in Anyone

by Gesine Bullock-Prado

($30, Running Press, www.runningpress.com)

Many of us would never think of baking a cake from scratch—just too risky, but we might be willing to put together one of those cake box mixes. They look easy, and one doesn't have to worry about not getting measurements and ingredients just right.

But to veteran cake-baker and food author Gesine Bullock-Prado anyone can easily make beautiful, imaginative and tasty cakes from scratch by following her easy step-by-step instructions for baking and decorating.

Gesine's cake-making techniques always use ingredients from scratch in this order: Bake Ahead, Dam and Assemble, Smooth Coat and Spruce Up. She highly recommends baking and freezing several cake layers at once so one always has several rounds stored away for your final touch as needed.

The author entices us with a lengthy choice of cakes just waiting to be assembled and baked. Ones that particularly tempted us because of their 'fantastical' looks were a Giant Pumpkin Cake, Sticky Bun Layer Cake, Carrot Cake (decorated with a marzipan rabbit and orange carrots), Gingerbread Cake (made of gingerbread cookies and spice cake), and Fraisier Sponge Cake (strawberries in and around a mousse).

For those of you who may want to start baking a more familiar cake she has recipes for Coconut Cake, Tiramisu Cake, Devil's Food Cake, Yellow and Chocolate Cakes, and Banana Cake (like banana bread but less heavy).

Although Gesine grew up in Virginia, as a child she made trips to visit her grandmother Omi and aunt Tante Christel in Germany. So some of her recipes have a distinctive German touch. As a child she used to sneak into a candy store and load up on Schoko Crossies made from cornflakes, sliced almonds and bittersweet chocolate. The recipe is here and she also uses them to decorate birthday cakes.

You may also want to try her Black Forest Cake which features "chocolates, cherries, whipped cream, and a bit of booze" topped off with "marzipan toadstools and bit of cake moss."

With a home now in Vermont, Gesine has recipes for Maple Cake, Maple Sticky Bun Cake, Maple Bark and Maple Leaves Cake, and a Maple Espresso Cream Cheese Frosting.

In addition to mouth-watering full-page color photographs of her cakes, the 325-page book is attractively laid out and interspersed with dozens of special one-page "Messages from The Cake Lady" covering such topics as Wet and Dry Caramel, Creme de la Creme, Torting and Freezing Layers, Egg Whites Europe, Foamy is My Middle Name, and Making Simple Edible Paper Flowers.

Gesine teaches classes on how to bake cakes, pastries, and other goodies at her Sugar Glider Kitchen school at her home in Hartford, Vermont. Most classes run for three hours ($95 fee) and offerings include Eclairs, Puff Pastry, Perfect Pie, Macaron, Confetti Cake, Strudel, Patterned Swiss Roll, Baking 101 (Muffin, Biscuit, Paste & Cream), French Pork Pies, and a two-day French Pastry & Croissant Class.

She hosts Food Networks' 'Baked in Vermont' and teaches classes at King Arthur Flour in Norwich, Vermont, and at Stonewall Kitchen in York, Maine.

And she is the author of Bake It Like You Mean It, Let Them Eat Cake, Sugar Baby, and Pie It Forward. Her book My Life From Scratch covers her baking adventures from Hollywood to Vermont, from pastry shop owner to teacher and writer.

North Country Reflections

From Classic to Whimsey
The art of decorating our outdoor spaces

by Judith Irven

Even though we—and our gardens—are still in the midst of winter hibernation, many of us are planning outdoor changes, both large and small, we will be making this coming season—perhaps making a new flower bed or maybe trying some gorgeous but unfamiliar plants.

Beyond Plants

But, in addition to plants, what about enhancing your garden with some special highlights—a new bench, a decorative planter, or perhaps a compelling sculpture? It is like choosing a beautiful necklace to compliment your new outfit, or hanging some evocative pictures on your walls.

The possibilities for decorating our gardens are both endless and also extremely personal. Perhaps your imagination is triggered by a beautiful classic hand-crafted ceramic pot you saw at the local show or a stunning arbor at the public garden last summer. Or maybe the sweep of a flower bed motivates you to go in search of an elegant sculpture.

In addition to choosing that special decorative item, it is helpful to consider the impact you want to make in the garden—for instance to create a dramatic focal point, an imposing entrance, a beckoning destination or welcoming outdoor room.

Here are four ways I have used non-living things to create special highlights around my own garden, and indeed they run the gamut—from classic to whimsy. I hope they will inspire you to find new ways of enhancing your own garden.

And to learn more—I will be presenting a seminar on this whole topic, including over a hundred beautiful photographs, at the Vermont Flower Show on March 1, 2019 at noon. I hope you can join me.

A Dramatic Focal Point

While the shady corners in our gardens may be soothing and relaxing, sometimes they can also feel featureless and uninteresting. But just the simple trick of setting a classic ceramic pot among all those green leaves will create a focal point that draws our attention and brings that shady space to life.

I am the proud owner of three beautiful colorful pots that I bought many years ago from Robert Compton, a skilled potter who lives in Bristol, VT. And, at around 20" high, they make perfect containers for shade-loving flowers.

Every spring I put out these special pots in different parts of my garden. I set each one up on a couple of pavers, both to create a firm base and also to elevate the pot slightly above all the surrounding ferns and hostas. Finally adding a few tuberous begonias with brightly colored flowers creates the perfect foil for all the surrounding greenery.

Beckoning Destinations

Like many people, Dick and I love to spend time outdoors chatting over a nice cup of tea or a glass of wine.

Thus not only did we build a screened gazebo for those times when the bugs may be biting, but I have also carefully positioned several benches around the garden in both sunny and shady areas.

And while our preferences have evolved over time, at this point our favorite bench for day-time forays sits on a specially created 'mini-patio' under a huge maple. From this shady vantage point we can look across the sunny garden beds, and watch the butterflies and bees as they flit from flower to flower in search of nectar.

If your garden seems to be missing that special 'something' I suggest you add a garden bench where it is visible from your favorite indoor room. Garden benches seem to magically conjure up evocative feelings about the specialness of our outdoor world. From spring until fall it will beckon you 'come on out and enjoy the garden', while even in the depth of winter it will be like 'a ghost of summer' reminding you that spring will soon be here.

An Enticing Entrance

The space around our back door is strictly functional; there is a small raised bed where I grow herbs and salad greens, plus the wash line and the woodshed. Thus my mood there is decidedly busy and focused.

But a few steps away I walk out along a short path and quickly my mood changes to serene and tranquil. This is the entranceway to our back garden with its colorful flowing flowerbeds and, off in the distance, a view of Mount Moosalamoo.

The entrance path is made of flat irregularly shaped blue-stone pavers, and it is flanked on either side by deep flower beds. Here I planted a pair of serviceberries and in their dappled shade, I grow many favorite woodland plants. Finally, to finish the picture and further emphasize this special entrance, on either side of the path I placed the free-standing wrought-iron trellises you can see in the photograph.

Furthermore this arrangement is lovely in every season. The flowers on the serviceberries are a springtime delight, the trellises support a pair of flowering clematis for summertime color, the leaves on the serviceberries turn a beautiful orange each fall, while in wintertime the snow on the ironwork is nothing short of magical.

A Welcoming Front Doorway

The south-facing space around our front door, enclosed on three sides by house walls, is a quintessential 'outdoor room'. Narrow flower beds run along each wall, while the central stone patio (just 18' x 14') easily provides room for the front walkway and, to one side, a charming metal bench.

Our front door is a busy place. In addition to our guests, Dick and I also use it for all our own comings and goings. So I really want this small space emanate a huge 'WELCOME'.

Not only does the bench create the perfect sunny spot for enjoying a cup of tea, it also sets an easy relaxed mood as we come home.

And, although most of the vertical wall space is claimed by windows, in each of the remaining areas I have hung carefully selected objects. On the east wall a burnished metal 'sun' with radiating flames shines down, while between the windows on the north wall a charming metal trellis provides support for a climbing honeysuckle, which has the added benefit of enticing the hummingbirds.

Finally, about five years ago, to add a delightful touch of whimsy to the scene, I hung the smiling face you see in this picture to watch over our arrivals and departures. And, since she has a small planting pocket concealed in her hair, each year I can give her a new hair style.

Our lovely 'face' is work of talented Vermont ceramicist, Susan Smith-Hunter, and, if you are interested, she currently has a few for sale in the Brandon Artist's Guild—each a unique individual!

Judith Irven and her husband Dick Conrad live in Goshen, VT where together they nurture a large garden. You can subscribe to Judith's blog about her Vermont gardening life at www.northcountryreflections.com.

Old Homes

Old homes among the hills! I love their gardens;
 Their old rock fences, that our day inherits;
 Their doors, round which trees stand like wardens;
 Their paths, down which the shadows march like spirits;
 Broad doors and paths that reach bird-haunted gardens.

I see them gray among their ancient acres,
 Severe of front, their gables lichen-sprinkled—
 Like gentle-hearted, solitary Quakers,
 Grave and religious, with kind faces wrinkled—
 Serene among their memory-hallowed acres.

Their gardens, banked with roses and with lilies—
 Those sweet aristocrats of all the flowers—
 Where Springtime mints her gold in daffodillies,
 And Autumn coins her marigolds in showers,
 And all the hours are toilless as the lilies.

I love their orchards where the gay woodpecker
 Flits, flashing o'er you, like a winged jewel;
 Their woods, whose floors of moss the squirrels checker
 With half-hulled nuts; and where, in cool renewal,
 The wild brooks laugh, and raps the red woodpecker.

Old homes! Old hearts! Upon my soul forever
 Their peace and gladness lie like tears and laughter;
 Like love they touch me, through the years that sever,
 With simple faith; like friendship, draw me after
 The dreamy patience that is theirs forever.
