The maples were just turning then, the serviceberries and the hackberries half down, the honeysuckles full of berries. I could hear starlings and grackles ahead of me to the north, and I hurried down to see them.

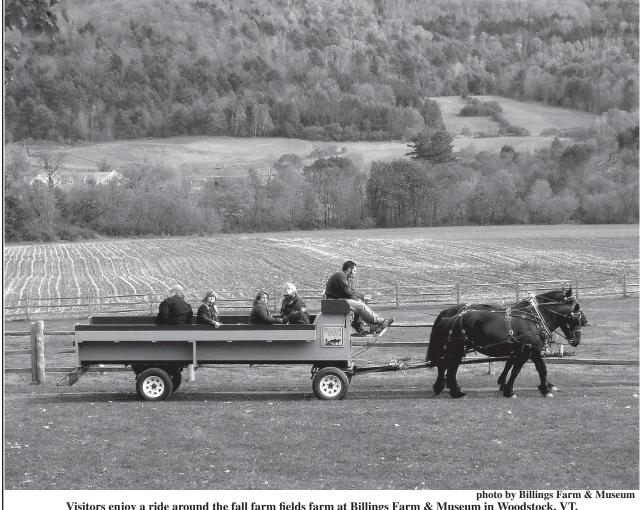

Past the apple tree, near the weeping willow, I came under the cries and the rushing of the great flock. They knew where they were gothe branches above me for a just few seconds, calling to one another, looking out above the high canopy, then hurrying, diving on, one after another.

I was swept away and then held tight in their direction and their certainty. They filled the space between the the bare black walnut tree.

A few weeks ago I was street and the silver maple

The tent of this flock's passage was such a safe place against the cold ahead. The coverlet was force enough, fortification against what would surely come, filtering and sorting through, in just an instant in the alley, the daunting approach of the winter, and giving me a balance like the bird itself must feel, pulled by time and context out into the autumn sky.

Surrounded, I had no place left to turn: the starlings and ing: southeast, stopping in the grackles had taken all the options. I stood loved, cradled, suspended, caressed, enfolded in a blanket of pinions, here on this familiar ground, in the presence of the white asters with red centers and the violet asters with arrowhead leaves and the last yellow spikes of Jerusalem covered me up, it seemed, in artichokes, witnessed by a their numbers. Winners of the annual Turnip Contest at the 2014 Gilfeather Turnip Festival in Wardsboro, VT proudly display their Gilfeathers. This year's festival contest on October 24th in Wardsboro features Celebrity judge Tracey Medeiros, noted cookbook author and food writer. Register turnip contest entries from 10 a.m. to 12 noon in the Wardsboro Town Hall.

Wardsboro, VT

Annual Gilfeather Turnip Festival

The 13th Annual Gilfeather Turnip Festival is is coming and serves homemade cider donuts and coffee beginning at to Wardsboro, VT on Saturday, October 24, 2015 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., rain or shine. The festival takes place in the Wardsboro Town Hall and under the Big Tent and many smaller ones on Main Street. There is convenient free parking and free admission.

Celebrating the tuber's humble beginnings

The unique festival celebrates the Gilfeather turnip, first propagated in Wardsboro in the early 1900s by farmer, John Gilfeather. Gilfeather Farm still exists, right in the heart of Wardsboro, and the current owners, Carol and Bob Backus, carry on the tradition of Farmer John by planting a large crop of the heirloom turnip that originated on their farm at the turn of the century.

The festival has grown in popularity through the years. It's exciting that a humble root vegetable—which some say is actually more of a rutabaga—has attracted so much attention to the small town even after leaf-season has peaked. In enter a turnip from their garden will be awarded a personal-January 2015 a bill (House Bill #65) was introduced into the State House in Montpelier, VT to designate the Gilfeather Turnip as the official State Vegetable!

Sold by the pound or by the bowlful

The turnip cart outside town hall is always overflowing with six or seven hundred pounds of Gilfeathers, many grown on neighboring farms such as Dutton's in Newfane or in local gardens. Turnips are sold by the pound and "they go fast" according to the Friends' top turnip sales person, Cris Tarnay. She says, "they are hardy and easy to cultivate from seed, but shouldn't be harvested before a bite of hard frost. They acquire a notable sweetness after a frost and that sweetness is what makes the Gilfeather so special.'

More than one hundred pounds of Gilfeathers will be cooked for the event's signature Gilfeather turnip soup. Over two hundred pounds will be given out to various Wardsboro chefs to prepare different recipes featured as "turnip tastings" at the Turnip Café. Savory entrées and sweet desserts, all featuring Gilfeathers as the main ingredient, are offered for lunch at the "tasting table."

Back by popular demand is the "chef's station" cooking up turnip latkes to order and served with real maple syrup from a local sugar house.

All recipes are from the 2nd edition of the Gilfeather Turnip Cookbook, compiled and published by the Friends and sold in the Turnip Shoppe in Town Hall.

The Turnip Café is located in the Wardsboro Town Hall

10 a.m., followed by lunch and ala carte servings of "turnip tastings" plus the delicious, creamy Gilfeather turnip soup from 11 a.m. until the food runs out. Soup and tastings are available for takeout or to enjoy at a sit-down lunch. An outdoor soup kiosk is for event-goers who want to buy soup only.

The exciting turnip contest with celebrity judge

Anticipation is always high for the festival's annual Turnip Contest. Turnip entries grown from seed or seedling plants, from Wardsboro gardens or from farther away all delight festival visitors as they await the judging.

Contestants may register Gilfeathers of all sizes and shapes from 10 a.m. to 12 noon. Contest categories are: largest grown in Wardsboro, largest grown outside of Wardsboro, best turnip name, and wicked-weirdest turnip. The largest turnip, total weight with greens, will be awarded "Grand Champion" of the festival. All children 12 and under who ized "honorable mention" ribbon. The winners and ribbon awards will be announced in Town Hall immediately after the judging at 12 noon.

The Friends are honored to have Tracey Medeiros as the contest's celebrity judge this year. She will greet festival goers and sell and sign all of her popular cookbooks.

Visit the Turnip Shoppe and over 30 vendors

More than 30 craft and farmers' market vendors are set up inside Town Hall as well as outdoors under the big tent and several smaller tents. Look for more artisan food vendors this year and new turnip merchandise displayed and sold in the Friends' Turnip Shoppe. Visitors will find an expanded selection of souvenir gifts and attire to purchase for family and friends.

Live music is always a big draw at the Turnip Festival. Jimmy Knapp, Wardsboro's strolling musician, will serenade visitors with his original Gilfeather turnip ballads and many more of his own guitar compositions. Other local musicians and entertainers are scheduled to perform throughout the festival in the Town Hall and the big tent.

The festival is the largest community fundraiser for the Friends of the Wardsboro Library for the support of the Gloria Danforth Memorial Building, the home of the Wardsboro Public Library.

Celebrate Heirloom Apples At Scott Farm in Dummerston

○October 11th ✓

Heirloom Apple Day at Scott Farm on Kipling Road in Dummerston, VT beckons apple lovers of all ages. Come visit the 571-acre historic farm and orchard that border Rudyard Kipling's former Vermont home, Naulakha, and other historic rental properties owned and renovated by Landmark Trust USA.

On Sunday, October 11 at 10 a.m., Noon and 2 p.m., Scott Farm Orchardist Zeke Goodband entertains guests with the enlightening history of the orchard and its ecologicallygrown fruits, accompanied by a free tasting of some of the more than 100 varieties of heirloom apples grown on the Visitors can also pick their own apples in the orchard or select them from multiple apple bins in the Farm Market, along with cider, freshly baked apple pies, fruit jams and jellies and more. In addition to the apple tasting, Whetstone Ciderworks, of Marlboro, VT, will be on hand to offer samples of their handcrafted ciders, as will Rigani Wood-Fired Pizza of Brattleboro, VT, with artisan pizza from their mobile oven.

In keeping with the Farm's mission to share living history, preserve and perpetuate heirloom apples and small fruits, and educate people about their cultivation and uses, Scott Farm also offers a variety of fall workshops.

 Local cider maker Jason MacArthur of Whetstone Cider Works teaches an introduction to making hard cider on Sunday, October 4th from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. Fee: $40.

• A hands-on apple pie making workshop with Pastry Chef Laurel Roberts Johnson of The Queen of Tarts is offered on Sunday, October 18th, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fee: $40.

• On the Farm 8th Annual Heirloom Apple Harvest Dinner. October 24th at 6 p.m. Tickets $45. Call to register.

Established in 1791 when George Washington was serving his first term as President, Scott Farm consists of 571 acres and 23 buildings, all listed on the National Register of Historic Places. In 1995 the Vermont non-profit Landmark Trust USA took over the farm.

The Trust has since restored many of the buildings, and under the guidance of Orchardist Zeke Goodband, has converted the orchard from conventionally-grown McIntosh to more than 100 ecologically-grown heirloom and uncommon apple varieties.

The farm also grows peaches, plums, nectarines, pears, grapes, cherries, quince, medlars and gooseberries. The unusual medlars and quinces are available mid-October into November. Four fully restored historic vacation rentals, surrounding the farm, are available for short or long term stays throughout the year. Details at LandmarkTrustUSA.org.

For more information, festival and workshop details, please contact (802) 254-6868. scottfrm@sover.net. scott farmvermont.com. The Scott Farm Market is open daily, 8 am - 6 pm, through November 24. You-pick apples are available September into October.

Directions: From Brattleboro go north on Rt. 5 about two miles, turn left on Black Mountain Rd., in about half a mile bear right onto Kipling Rd. In about a half mile you'll arrive at Scott Farm at 707 Kipling Rd. If you reach Middle Rd., you've gone too far.

Wet Paint Live

Comes to Springfield, VT on October 10th capture Springfield, VT on canvas and paper on Saturday, October 10th, rain or shine in the Wet Paint Live plein air painting event.

Whether a serious painter or someone who paints for relaxation and fun, you are invited to pick a spot along an outdoor "Painting Loop" that offers views of the Black River, Comtu Falls, historic factory buildings, and views of Springfield town. The "painting loop" will be marked with sidewalk stencils for the public and artists to follow.

Starting at 8 a.m. there will be a "walkabout" of the "painting loop" for artists starting at Great Hall Public Art Showcase, One Hundred River Street in Springfield. Check-in for artists will start at 9 a.m. at the Great Hall. Painting begins at 10 a.m. and goes until 2:30 p.m.

Starting at 3:30 p.m. the public is invited to enjoy the completed paintings, judging, sale, and reception, free of charge.

Prizes will be awarded for: "Best in Show, Professional" ($150) and "Best in Show, Emerging" ($75), "People's Choice," Professional ($75) and Emerging ($50). Young artists below age 18 will also receive recogni-

Artists of all ages and skill levels will tion: Best in Show, youth, 13-18 ($25); Best in Show, youth 12 and under: ($25). People's Choice in both youth categories will receive recognition.

According to the event Judge, Robert Carsten, PSA-M, "an artist would be considered professional if he or she "receives all or some income from painting." Emerging is defined as "an aspiring artist, adult student or one who paints for fun." Artists Jamie Townshend and Matt Chinian will demonstrate their plein air styles throughout the day.

Wet Paint Live is organized by a committee that sprang up out of a community effort to celebrate Springfield as an arts destination. The event is made possible through donations and sponsorships.

The deadline for artist registration is September 30. Artists may pre-register by using the mailing the registration form found on www.wplvermont.com along with $15.

For more information and to receive the registration form, map, and guidelines by mail, call Nancy Lanoue at (802) 885-6156 or e-mail your mailing address to nlanoue@ comcast.net, subject line: WPL.

Country Woman

Have you picked up a quince to smell it And thought of grape jam on cellar shelves, Of honey, brown eggs in water glass, Of the braided bulbs of garlic and onion Hung from the rafter?

There is sage and bay in the autumn wind, There are apples that have not dropped from the bough, Red withering brown in the smoke and the haze. The cows are slow to pull at the frost-grey grass; There was ice on the pond last night.

The city is miles away. The quince in your hand Is warm as a grandmother's cheek.

Cider Days on the Belmont Green

Imagine watching fresh cider being made on a centuryold press and then enjoying a cup of that cider (hot or cold) with home-baked apple pie or crisp topped with ice cream or Crowley Cheese (made just around the corner). You don't have to imagine it.

Come to Belmont, VT on Saturday, October 10 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. or Sunday, October 11 from 12-4 p.m. and take it all in along with wonderful fall colors. Fresh cider will be for sale by the gallon, there will be food and local crafts vendors, a bake sale, and more. Cider Days is sponsored by the Mount Holly Community Association.

A tradition of gathering to press the cider

The event builds on a community tradition of local residents bringing their apples to the green to be pressed by neighbors—originally on a hand-cranked press. It's still a hands-on process, but the century old press used today does have an engine. And you don't have to bring your own apples. They are provided by Brown's Orchard in Poultney, VT.

"Visitors will see cider made end to end," says Penny Coldwell, who has worked the press since the early days. "Workers climb up to the top of the press and dump apples into the hopper. Apples are mashed into a pulp and a worker down below opens a small door and mash falls down onto hemp cloth. It is smoothed out and cloth is folded over the mash. The mash then is put into flats (made by a local furniture maker) and stacked up under the press.

"When there are enough, the hopper is shut off and the hydraulic press is started. The press comes down slowly—up to 1,200 pounds pressure—and the cider comes out a drain and into a five-gallon bucket with a cheesecloth strainer. From the bucket, it goes into gallon jugs, ready for drinking."

Coldwell and her crew handle more than 90 bushels of apples over the two days.

Plenty of festivities

But it's not all apples and local artisans. You also can see photos taken around Mount Holly for the 2017 Mount Holly Community Association Calendar contest (and can purchase a 2016 calendar); get your personal Souper Kids bowl, each decorated by students at the Mount Holly Elementary School, who also make delicious soups to go in the bowls.

Browse among hundreds of books at the Mount Holly Town Library used book sale at 26 Maple Hill Rd. And the Mount Holly Museum, next to the green, will be open.

Stay for supper

On Saturday, stick around for an all-you-can-eat, Roast Beef Supper, served home style, served at the Odd Fellows Hall just off the Green. Seatings at 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. Tickets are $12 for adults, $5 for children 11 and under. Take-outs available, call (802)259-2460.

Directions: To get to Cider Days, turn west toward Belmont at the flashing light on Rt. 103 (between Ludlow and Rutland) or turn east at the Belmont sign from Rt. 155. Head up the hill, find a place to park and stroll through Belmont Village to the Green, just like the folks did so many years ago when they brought their apples to be pressed!

Pressing apples to make fresh cider at Cider Days in Belmont, VT, coming this October 10 & 11.

The clump of maples on the hill, And this one near the door, Seem redder, quite a lot, this year Than last, or year before; I wonder if it's jest because I love the Old State more!

If there was any poppies left,
I guess they'd jest be vexed
To see the hillsides all on fire
Without the least pretext;
Sometimes I think I'm in this world,
And sometimes in the next.

Jest look! the woods are made of trees,
Instead of wholesale green;
Jest see the "wine glass elms" stand out,
With hemlocks in between;
Jest see the birch flags on their staffs
So long and white and clean!

From Killington and Sterling peaks
The flames are pouring down;
The ferns below the pasture woods
Are scorched and dead and brown;
The shoemake fire-bugs set the blaze
I heerd last night in town.

It's kinder more than folks can stand,
This beauty, every year;
The eye that's full can see no more
Until it drops a tear;
It's hard to tell jest where you are,
In paradise or here.

A Vermont Almanack For Middle Fall

by Bill Felker

'T is the noon of autumn's glow, When a soft and purple mist, Like a vaporous amethyst, Or an air-dissolved star. Mingling light and fragrance, far From the curved horizon's bound To the point of heaven's profound, Fills the overflowing sky.

—Percy Bysshe Shelley

The Orb Weaver Moon And the Deer Mating Moon

The moon of October shines on the last of the summer's spiders. It also signals mating time for deer, as well as for many varieties of sheep and goats.

October 4: The Orb Weaver Moon enters its final quarter at 4:06 p.m. October 11: Lunar Apogee. October 12: The Deer Mating Moon is new at 7:06 p.m. October 20: The moon enters second quarter at 3:31 p.m. October 26: Lunar Perigee. October 27: The moon is full at 7:05 a.m.

The Sun

October 23rd is Cross Ouarter Day, the halfway mark between autumn equinox and winter solstice. The sun enters Scorpio at the same time. Also on October 23rd, there will be a partial eclipse of the sun visible in most of North America during the late afternoon.

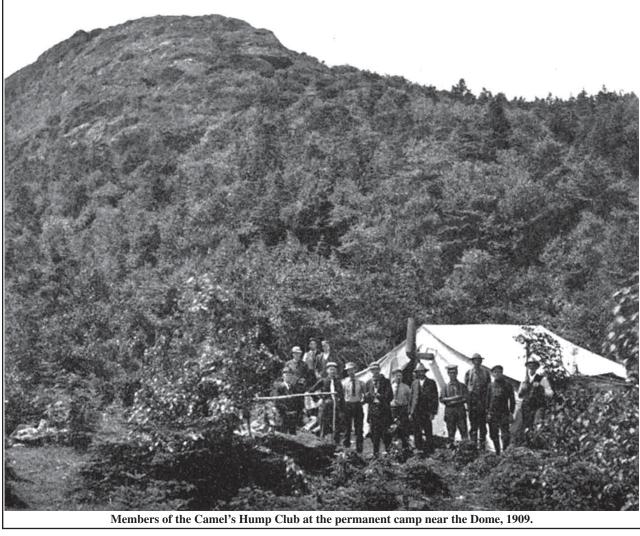

The Shooting Stars

The Draconid meteors arrive in the late evenings of October 7th and 8th.

Look for the Orionids to peak in and around Orion on the night of October 21-22.

The Stars

At midnight, the Milky Way runs from east to west across the sky. The keystone stars of the Summer Triangle, Altair and Vega and Deneb, are setting in far west, and Orion is climbing up from the eastern horizon. Hercules, which was horizon for just a short time at dusk.

overhead at 12 a.m. in the first week of June, is now setting in the northwest, and Castor and Pollux, the twins of Gemini are peering over the tree line in the northeast. By sunrise, Orion has shifted to the center of the heavens. January's Leo and its brightest star, Regulus, have come up in the east, and the Great Square is following Hercules into the Pacific Ocean.

The Planets

Venus moves retrograde into Leo this month, sharing that sign with Jupiter as well as with Mars. Now before sunrise four major lights shine in the east. The largest is Venus. The red one is Mars. The twinkling one (the only star in the group) is Regulus, the major star of Leo. That means the other prominent light is Jupiter. In the evening, Saturn rests in Libra and Scorpio, continuing to lie along the western

October Notes

by Edward Martin Taber Stowe, VT • circa 1896

The willows in the valley are some bare and all brown and frost-nipped. The hillsides are light and cloudy with bare twigs.

Yesterday's snow-storm made evident the thinness of the foliage by marking out the boughs and trunks in lines of white, for the snow was driven level on a strong southwest wind, that all the evening and the early part of the night hallooed and whistled about the house like a ghostly giant calling his stray dog.

Yesterday afternoon late, about six o'clock, I started two partridges on the edge of a wood. I entered by a dark congregation of hemlocks. With beat and ruffle, and a numbing reverberation in the air, they rose one after the other and fluttered away among the snowy boughs.

Interiors must have seemed bright and pleasant to outsiders in the chilly dark. Yet the night was not dark; the moon was behind the clouds, and the dim forests and the white fields shone with a ghostly brightness.

This morning, in an open pasture, my horse's hoofs were balled with snow. There are now whole hillsides of vaporous twigs, gray in the sun and purple in the shadow. The sun seems to bleach out this pale autumnal world. The orchards are brown, leaf and trunk.

It cleared during the day, and most western hillsides and pastures were free of snow.

I notice that the bluebird's call more nearly approaches the note of domestic fowls than any wild bird utterance, unless it be the crowing of the hoot owl. It is very like the cry of

In the woods the ferns are faded and shrunk away to grayish skeletons thin as shadows, and show like a yellow dust among the dead leaves.

Coming up the hill after our drive today, we faced the cold north wind. The Hogback rose above us, white and unreal; the yellow slope, crowned by a little house, its surrounding lilac bushes, and a large white pine, looked strange against this glistening frosty ridge, that gleamed vividly in the afternoon sunlight with an almost golden sparkle.

The sun set, and the ridge turned to a delicate metallic pink broken with innumerable blue shadows. Little rose-colored clouds were low over the glowing woods northwest, and the snowy top of Sterling was rose-tinted.

The sun sank lower, and the Hogback lost its color, which, concentrating on the Sterling pyramid, grew brighter. Later, only a clear pale amber space in the southwest, and in it, on the margin and the melting blue, the evening star shone, scintillating frostily. The dusky and shrunken clouds, low over Mansfield, were shredded with dull reddish streaks.

Though the night had every promise of a clear tomorrow, yet on waking I found the sky overcast. This morning there was a strong wind, hollow, thunderous.

In the afternoon in the south wood there was the nutty odor of the fallen leaves. The wind searched the most secret places. The wood was bare and open, the breaking sky gleamed through the naked boughs.

This afternoon in the swampy hollow the wind passed with a deep and melancholy sigh among the nodding spruces.

Coming home we started a flock of bluebirds. They were brilliant in azure and cinnamon, their breasts as red as ever I saw robins'. They were lingering in the cornfields, where the glowing pumpkins showed their warm and cheering countenances in the stacks of gray and withered cornstalks.

Toward evening the upper northern sky was free, and later, as I looked from the lighted parlor out on the night, a star shone and quivered in the dark space of the window.

The night was silent, except for the slight stir in the dark cloudy branches of the white pine before the house. A collie barked, and was answered from a distant farmyard.

Edward Martin Taber (1863-1896) was a noted landscape painter who lived in Stowe, VT at the family seat called Four Winds. For reasons that his frail health required the cold northern climate, he moved from Staten Island to Stowe, VT and spent the remainder of his life there. He was just 33 years old when he died.

Taber's works, exhibited in many museums, includes one of Mount Mansfield, which hangs in the Metropolitan Museum in New York

Autumn at Billings Farm & Museum

Billings Farm & Museum in Woodstock, VT, a gateway to Vermont's rural heritage, is an operating Jersey dairy farm and museum that continues a 144-year tradition of agricultural excellence. Be sure to plan a visit this fall.

Pumpkin & Apple Celebration

The Annual Pumpkin & Apple Celebration is coming up on Saturday and Sunday, October 3 & 4, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The weekend features hands-on activities and programs, plus pumpkin and apple displays highlighting these two important fall crops, their historical importance, and many uses. Horse-drawn wagon rides are included with admission.

Take the apple taste test and vote for your favorite! Lend a hand pressing cider, making pumpkin or apple ice cream, and peeling apples for drying. Join in the "pumpkin and apple fun" with apple races, pumpkin bowling, apples-on-a-string, sampling pumpkin bread, watch the apple butter being made, and take home a recipe for "Pumpion Pye."

31st Annual Harvest Weekend

The 31st Annual Harvest Weekend takes place on October 10 & 11, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Voted Top 10 Fall Event for 2015 by the Vermont Chamber of Commerce, the weekend features a husking bee and barn dance, plus 19th century harvest activities for the entire family.

A traditional husking bee will begin at noon, followed by a barn dance from 1 to 4 p.m. Lend a hand pressing cider, preserving apples, threshing grain, and making butter and ice cream. Help harvest the heirloom vegetable garden. Children can help dig potatoes and other root crops and learn how crops are "put up" for the winter.

Activities include shelling beans, fence building, appleson-a-string, and 19th century games. Have some hot-spiced cider and homemade doughnuts! Admission includes all programs and activities.

Autumn Wagon Ride Weekend

The 8th Annual Autumn Wagon Ride Weekend takes place on Saturday and Sunday, October 17th & 18th, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. See the brilliant colors of a Vermont autumn on a scenic narrated horse-drawn wagon ride around the Billings farm fields.

The dairy farm, farm life exhibits, and restored and furnished farmhouse, plus programs and activities including cider pressing, are included in the entrance fee.

22nd Annual Family Halloween

The 22nd Annual Family Halloween on Sunday, October 25, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Children in costume receive free admission when accompanied by an adult (adults pay the regular admission fee). Pumpkin carving, doughnuts-on-a-string,programs will be featured. Costume parades around the farm will be held at 12 & 2 p.m., and all children will receive a ribbon.

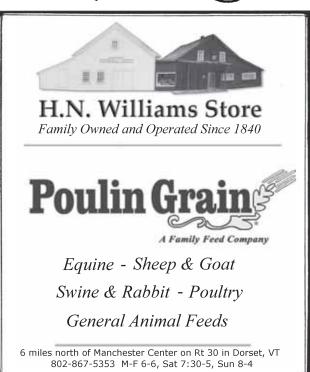

The Billings Farm & Museum is owned and operated by The Woodstock Foundation Inc., a charitable non-profit institution.

Admission to the special events includes all programs and activities, plus the working dairy farm, farm life exhibits, and farm house. Admission: adults $14, 62 & over $13, children 5-15 $8, 3-4: $4, 2 & under free.

Billings Farm & Museum is open daily May 1 through October 31, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., weekends Nov. – Feb., and Christmas & Presidents' weeks, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Farm & Museum is located one-half mile north of the Woodstock village green on Rt. 12. For information call (802) 457-2355. Visit www.billingsfarm.org.

−Wild in Vermont*∕* West Rutland Herbalist Publishes New Book

by Charles Sutton

When Vermont herbalist Sivvie Lio goes to her garden or into the woods to collect plants she often brings a camera to take color photographs of the wild flowers to capture their uniqueness and beauty.

She has now published a collection called Herbs: Wild in Vermont (And Other Places). The book has full-page photos of nearly 100 of these plants with interesting information about each, its uses for herbal remedies, some 30 different teas, and even as a tasty addition to salads.

You will recognize many of these plants while driving along Vermont's back roads—certainly goldenrod, dandelions, violets, elderberries, cattails, jewelweed, Queen Anne's lace, clover and pussy willow. And on walks in the woodlands you could spot wild strawberries, blackberries and mountain raspberries, also used in her remedies.

A special love for wetlands

The herbalist likes particularly to go to wetland areas which present their own challenge in collecting, but with ample rewards.

"I love cattails," she writes. "They are part of my childhood." She tells about her mother and father going there to collect cattails and pussy willows. We learn that many parts of the cattail can be eaten. "The root can be gathered year round if you can budge it from the mud." And she adds that the root can be a starch vegetable for your meals as its pollen stalk makes a golden powder that makes a great ingredient for muffins, pancakes and breads, and the cattail leaves are

Another plant that Sivvie covets is the "pretty weed" burdock because it, too, can be used from root to top. She says the leaves are used in burns for pain and as a moisture barrier. The plant is also used for teas, skin and pain lotions, and other remedies. In one of many anecdotes throughout her book she notes the Swiss inventor George de Mestri noticed the plant's hook and loop system of seeds which gave him Greeley Writers' Symposium the idea for Velcro.

Herbs of many uses

Sivvie recommends using the young leaves from these herbal plants in salads: borage, burdock, chicory, dandelion, mallow, pineapple weed, purslane and violets.

Her book is also a good introduction to the less familiar and exotic herbs, some that we may never heard of. Some examples: chug, a mushroom that grow on white birch trees, an anti-inflammatory which can add a wonderful taste to coffee; boneset, called gravel root, with lovely little white flowers, used to break a fever and as a remedy for Lyme's disease; fleabane, a beautiful daisy-like flower, with many uses including as a flea powder for your animals; and yellow dock, good for digestive problems and whose leaves can be ground and added to cornmeal to make porridge or mush.

From pharmacist to herbalist

Sivvie began working with herbs about 20 years ago after studying to become a registered pharmacist. She currently works at pharmacies around Rutland. She opened her herbal remedy 'pharmacy' in West Rutland in 2001.

She has been a Reike master/teacher in both Usui and Karuna Reiki for more than 10 years. She is a certified Tai Chi Gung teacher, offering classes at 5 pm Tuesdays at The Vermont Herbal General Store, 518 Main St., West Rutland, VT.

The Last Boat Ride Of the Season

by Pamela Hayes Rehlen

Looking and sounding a lot like the African Queen, our wooden Lyman inboard, its antique fittings gleaming in the buttery sun, chugs noisily across Lake Bomoseen on a late Monday afternoon in October. We should have pulled it out and put it into storage Labor Day, but we didn't, and now even Columbus Day is past.

Under a steady breeze, with temperatures in the low 70s, the old boat is moving through choppy water for this last, sentimental, excursion. Bright white cottages, most half hidden in the trees, line the lake's approaching, seemingly deserted, eastern shore. The oaks, ash, and beeches are mustard colored, the cedars faded, and the sumacs have all turned red.

Local people, now living on Bomoseen year-round, seem to be away from home taking care of non-lakeside responsibilities, and the out-of-state seasonal residents are gone until next year. Carefully arranged Adirondack chairs sit on lawns which have turned as much gold as green.

This is not the atmosphere of July my husband and I soon realize on our last, around-the-lake, equivalent to a back roads drive. We chug past Cedar Mountain, a long-abandoned slate dump and a monument to the inherent wastefulness of slate extraction.

last half century, but I remember it when it was still a bare pile of shattered rock to which my father took me one day so we could climb to the top and have a panoramic view all down the lake.

He told me that we had to watch out for rattlesnakes and knelt down and searched around and found a stout forked stick. As I look back from the boat and remember that day, I still can't believe I was willing to risk the snakes in order to go with him.

In front of us, a lone sailboat cuts across our bow flying a rainbow-striped Genoa and avoiding a water skiing course, straight ahead, laid out in orange and yellow buoys.

When we reach the east shore, we find other sailboats bobbing in front of the Lake a golf cart left out on a gravel path. House, once Uncle Charlie's, a bar with a colorful Prohibition-years history. Route 30 runs along this side of the lake, and cottages have been built above the road on the steep crystal ledges that first provided close-by Crystal Beach swimming area with its name.

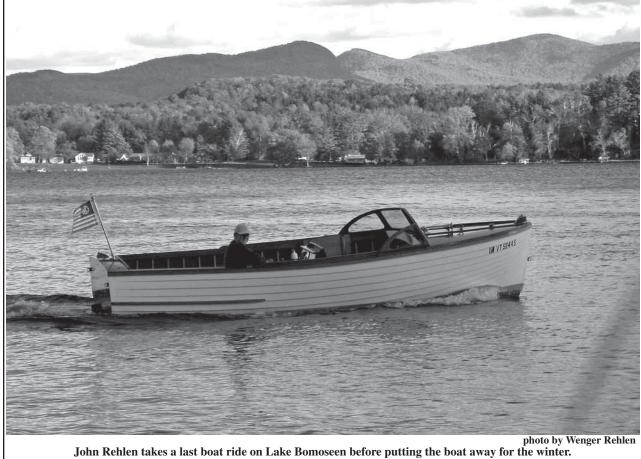

These cliff dweller cottages are marked by their busy, chaotic, shore-line assemblage of summer accessories: decks and ladders and docks and floats jumbled together, 'Party Kraft' pontoon boats, and, still bobbing out on the water, a giant blue plastic 'Splash Log,'

The Cedar Grove and the Trakenseen Hotels once stood along this narrow lakeside road. A teahouse operated here, and the hillside behind the hotels, away from the lake, was farm pasture land.

All of it is gone; the hotels long ago abandoned and demolished. Now, especially where the shore is steep, there's a tumbled village of cottage-houses, all facing west, all yearning for sunlight and lake views, capturing both with dizzyingly-numerous sliding glass doors, balconies, decks and oversize windows.

In contrast, next-up Prospect Point is serene and quiet, a shaded, park-like area of sleek year-round residences. This was always seen as the lake's premier location, formerly site

It's been growing up with white pines and sumacs for the of the grand Prospect House Hotel, a big wooden, wedding cake of a building with a vast apron of porch. It was torn down in the late sixties, a victim of changing tourist tastes.

I can't look at where the Prospect House used to stand without feeling jolted that so much has changed. The hotel was the center of the universe, a great buzzing, teeming sort of Downton Abbey where I had my first job as a timid teenaged waitress, where generations of local people worked, and to which city vacationers returned year after year.

Rounding the point, we chug out across the surface of the wide, shallow lake, buffeted by a steady breeze and little choppy waves. Straight ahead is six acre, heavily-wooded, Neshobe Island with glimpses of a well-tended interior, sunlight slanting through the trees onto manicured lawns,

After passing the island, the African Queen heads home to the still, dark water under the west shore beeches and hemlocks. When we pull into our dock, it feels like the Adirondacks, the smell of water and watery things is pronounced, mixed with the faint scent of boat exhaust. The carefree, summer, party-season is gone, the water raffish crowds along the side of the road at Green Dump. All that is over. The vacationers have left. Now, Lake Bomoseen is dark and still. It seemed like a mistake not pulling the boat out sooner, but it wasn't, because it gave us this different perspective. It gave us this last ride.

Birding Hot Spots in Rutland County

Rutland County Audubon Society has developed a list of places to bird in our area—places that are special to us and are representative of variety of habitats.

These birding hotspots are places that are publicly accessible; some large, some small. A few involve hiking and others can be canoed or kayaked.

The spots are selected because they host special birds or habitats. Some are chosen because they are a good place to take kids or a place for a quick break from our everyday lives.

We hope you will visit these places and report your crease the knowledge of the birds of Rutland County.

If there is a place that is special to you, please let us know!

Rutland Community Garden

The Rutland Community Garden is a great spot for a quick birding trip as it is easily accessible and fairly level walking. It is an ideal spot to bring a child or to practice your own birding skills.

As the name implies, the garden is a twenty-five acre parcel of land within Rutland City where residents may cultivate their own vegetables for a small annual fee.

The city also, while not in the business of growing vegsightings to www.ebird.org etables, has a well-managed as well so that we can in- tree nursery. These cultivated Heron. areas take up no more than an acre.

The balance of the land supports approximately one mile of well-tended walking trails that pass through woods, besides a small meadow, and overlooking a beaver induced wetland.

It is not surprising that the diversity of habitat, extent, minimal disturbance and accessibility makes this former "Poor Farm" an inviting place to bird. Over a period of two years, eighty-eight species of birds have been documented in this urban "hotspot." The species range from ducks to warblers, from the expected to the highly unusual, whether it is a Tufted Titmouse or a Great Egret, a Warbling Vireo or a Green immediate access.

A small kiosk provides as well as a bird list of the species seen.

Directions: The Rutland Community Garden is located on Woodstock Avenue (Route 4) in Rutland, VT behind McDonalds.The preferred access is from the Big Lots parking area east of McDonalds. Park to the south facing the grove of white pines. The gently rising footpath ahead is the

Middlebury's Hidden Gardens

by Judith Irven

The success of any garden is measured by the pleasure it brings to the people who use it. And, when many people use a garden, there is much pleasure to go around.

Hidden behind the walls of the Helen Porter Health and Rehabilitation Center in Middlebury is a garden that is enjoyed by hundreds of people in sundry ways. It is a garden that serves the entire Helen Porter community—not only the residents and their visitors, but also the many staff and volunteers associated with the nursing home.

On a warm summer afternoon you might see a visitor quietly chatting with an elderly parent; a couple of staff members leading a group of residents in a gentle ball game; a rehab therapist carefully guiding a patient around the smooth flat path; and a group of residents and UVM Extension Master Gardeners tending vegetables in raised beds.

And from time to time special garden events, such as annual Pumpkin Festival coming in October, draw a huge crowd

In what follows, by means of a few personal stories, I would like to illustrate some of the ways this special garden brings happiness to its unique community.

How the Helen Porter garden came to be

Over twenty years ago, during the initial design of the nursing home, Burlington landscape architect, Terry Boyle, proposed the building have a three-sided configuration and a south-facing orientation, specifically to create a warm and sheltered space (approximately 130' x 160') for the residents. He then added a grove of lacy honey locust trees for shade.

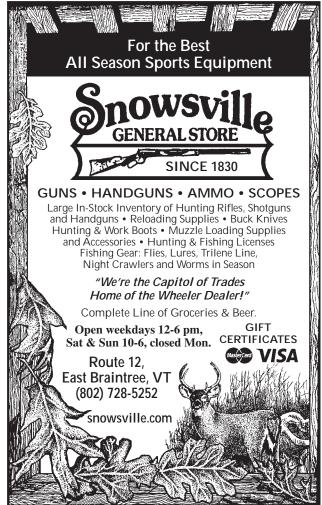

Credit for the careful spatial design goes to Susan Potter Davis of Weybridge, working as a volunteer Master Gardener with the enthusiastic support of Neil Gruber, the nursing home director at the time.

Completed over a decade ago, the results of her work still resonate today. She used a curved lattice fence and a long water feature to divide the overall space into two distinct gardens. Each garden offers a smooth winding circular path for pushing wheelchairs and paved sitting areas for relaxing. The smaller of the two, the Lemon Fair garden, is used primarily by memory-care residents, while the larger Otter Creek garden serves both long-term nursing home residents as well as shorter-stay rehab patients.

Soothing sounds of moving water emanate from the marvelous water feature Susan designed. Its central waterfall, flanked by large smooth rocks, is set in a 20' long shallow trough of water which can be explored by young and old alike. Susan is also quick to praise the way several local businesses stepped up to implement her unique design without charge. Thus, right from the outset, the garden was a community initiative.

Master Gardeners get involved

In 2009 a new group of UVM Extension Master Gardeners, myself included, started a weekly gardening project at Helen Porter. First we met with several residents to find out what they would enjoy growing. The answer was lots of vegetables plus some flowers!

To create a new veggie garden, the staff built two new raised beds at wheelchair level in the Otter Creek garden, adding to an existing one.

Now Master Gardeners meet weekly for a delightful afternoon with interested residents, where we tend both the raised beds as well as an in-ground flower bed. More recently we added a new bed with fragrant non-toxic plants for the Lemon Fair residents. Next year there are plans for more veggies at that end too.

Our activities with the residents revolve around the timehonored gardening cycle: in April we start seeds; towards the end of May we plant outdoors; June and July are for weeding and watering; and August and September are for harvesting the edibles, as well as for arranging flowers with those so inclined. And, when Mother Nature does not oblige, a team of four volunteers take turns to stop by and water everything.

Residents are encouraged to get their hands in the soil as much—or as little—as they like. It seems everyone enjoys sampling the harvest while reminiscing about their earlier gardens. And many also love to arrange vases of flowers, as a way of taking some of the garden indoors.

Blue Ribbons for Selina

Selina was among the initial group of residents who met with the Master Gardeners to tell us what they would like to grow. And every summer she has been a regular member of our weekly gardening sessions.

Selina has always loved growing things. All four of her grandparents were farmers in Clark, New Jersey, where they grew fresh vegetables to sell in the nearby cities. She recalls the Friday evening ritual, helping her grandparents load their trucks with freshly picked produce to sell at the Newark Farmers Market. (Of course today, in this part of New Jersey the farms are long gone, now replaced by an endless sea of houses)

Selina married a Vermonter and a naval man who was serving on the Mediterranean convoys in WW II. After the war they settled in his home town of Swanton (VT) where she raised her family and also tended a huge garden. She smiles as she recalls how passers-by would stop their cars to admire her wonderful flowers. And each summer she entered her exhibits of flowers and vegetables at the local County Fair.

Now, as a resident at Helen Porter, Selina enjoys exhibiting in the Home and Garden section at Addison County Fair and Field Days.

This year she prepared four entries from the Helen Porter garden: string beans; Swiss chard; a pint of Sun Gold cherry tomatoes; and a lovely arrangement of garden flowers. And she was completely overjoyed to hear that she had garnered three blue ribbons (highest honor) for her veggies, plus a red ribbon for her flower arrangement.

But then Selina said: 'This is our community garden and the ribbons belong to all of us'. So now, at her suggestion, all four ribbons hang proudly on the notice board in the front hall—a tribute to the entire gardening community at Helen Porter!

Margaret and Joe

Margaret, a serene lady in her nineties, has been a resident here for just a few months. Her son Joe, who lives in Colchester and visits his mother every Monday, said that, despite the distance from his home, they chose Helen Porter for two reasons: the friendly caring staff and the lovely accessible garden.

As he gently massaged his mother's legs, Joe told me how, as a child, Margaret spent time in her parents' flower-filled conservatory. And as an adult, even while raising ten children, she always found time to grow flowers.

Today it is the flowers in the Helen Porter garden that are guaranteed to bring a smile to Margaret's face.

Keeping everything neat and tidy

Andy Mitchell is responsible for grounds maintenance across the entire complex at Porter Hospital. But his singular pride is the nursing home garden. He clips the shrubs, mows the lawn and rakes the leaves. He also greets all the residents by name and cheers on the volunteer Master Gardeners!

As Selina remarked to me recently 'Andy does such a wonderful job in the courtyard, keeping everything looking so nice for all of us!'.

Many users and many gardeners

These stories illustrate a few ways this special garden brings pleasure to the entire Helen Porter community. To paraphrase a well-known saying:

It takes a community to raise a garden!

A Vagabond Song

There is something in the autumn that is native to my blood—

Touch of manner, hint of mood;

And my heart is like a rhyme,
With the yellow and the purple and the crimson keeping

The scarlet of the maples can shake me like a cry Of bugles going by.

And my lonely spirit thrills

To see the frosty asters like a smoke upon the hills.

There is something in October sets the gypsy blood astir; We must rise and follow her,

When from every hill of flame

She calls each vagabond by name.

Crisp Fall Days & Old-Fashioned Apple Treats

These recipes were published over 80 years ago by Ella Shannon Bowles and Dorothy S. Towle from Durham, New Hampshire. They were collected from dishes served during the previous 200 years and represent the ingenuity of New England cooks.

Boiled Cider Pie

1/2 cup cider1/2 cup seeded raisins1/2 cup maple sugar1 tablespoon butter2 egg yolks, beaten2 egg whites4 tbsp. powdered sugar1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

Boil the cider and maple sugar. Add the beaten egg yolks and stir until thick. Add the nutmeg, raisins, and butter. Turn into an unbaked pie shell, cover with top crust, and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven at 350 degrees F. The top crust may be omitted, and a meringue may be made of the beaten egg whites and powdered sugar. Brown in a moderate oven. Makes one nine-inch pie.

Deep-Dish Apple Pie

1 quart sliced apples

1/2 cup molasses

1/2 cup sugar

2 cups hot water

1 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon black pepper

1 tablespoon diced salt pork

Cover the parings and cores of the apples with water and simmer until soft. Strain the pulp, and add the liquid to the apples. Arrange the apples in a round twelve-inch baking pan. Mix the molasses and sugar with the hot water and pour over the apples. Sprinkle with the salt and pepper and bits of pork. Place in the oven and bake slowly at 325 degrees F. The apples should turn dark red while baking. One-half hour before time for serving, remove from the oven and cover with a crust.

Crust

1 cup yellow corn meal 1 cup flour

1 teaspoon salt

³/₄ cup clarified fat Cold water

Mix the corn meal, flour, and salt with your fingers or with a pastry mixer. Rub in the fat. Stir in the cold water until the dough is of the consistency of pie crust. Roll, prick with a fork, and place lightly over the apples, tucking in the edges of the crust around the rim of the pan. Bake fifteen minutes in a moderate oven at 375 degrees F. During the last five minutes, if necessary, raise the temperature of the oven to 450 degrees to brown. Serve warm with sauce.

Caramel Sauce

3/4 cup maple syrup
1/4 cup light cream

Combine the ingredients and stir until well mixed. Heat to the boiling point and cook three minutes. Pour two tablespoons of sauce over each serving of pie.

Squash Pie

2 cups strained cooked squash ½ teaspoon allspice
2 cups milk 2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 eggs 2 tablespoons flour
1 cup sugar ½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ginger

Most recipes for pumpkin pie may be used for squash pie also. This modern version of squash pie calls for more spices than are used in older recipes. Mix the squash, milk, and eggs. Sift the dry ingredients and stir into the squash mixture. Pour into an unbaked pie shell and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., until the crust is brown and the filling is set, about fifty minutes.

Spiced Cider

2 quarts cider
4 whole allspice
4 whole cloves
1 stick cinnamon

4 whole allspice
1/2 cup light brown sugar
3 or 4 apples

Simmer the cider, spices, and sugar for fifteen minutes. Let stand several hours, strain, and reheat. Bake the apples whole. Serve hot from a large bowl with the apples bobbing on the surface. Two or three pieces of ginger root may be used in place of the spices. Serves eight.

Apple Batter Pudding

3 apples
1/4 cup chopped nuts
1/4 cup chopped raisins
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup white sugar

2½ cups flour ½ teaspoon salt

3 teaspoons baking powder 2 tablespoons shortening

1 cup milk

2 eggs, well beaten

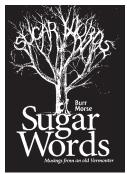

Pare and core the apples and place them in a buttered shallow baking pan. Fill the cavities with the nuts, raisins, brown sugar, and cinnamon. Sift the white sugar with the flour, salt, and baking powder. Melt the shortening and add to the milk and stir in the eggs. Combine the two mixtures and turn the batter over the apples. Bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven, 375°F. Serves eight. Serve with a lemon sauce or whipped cream.

Cow Time

by Will Templer, 1899

Cow time, and in October, in the days of long ago... Come, Shep, old fellow, hurry up; I think you're very slow; But then, too, I remember, I remember with a sigh, That you've been dead for eighteen years and I, alas—well, I Am older by a score of years than when we used to roam Out to the fallow pasture old to drive the cattle home.

So, Shep, old dog, we'll go once more while memory still is bright; We'll take the path out through the woods and fetch the cows to-nite. Here, you, no nonsense! Keep behind; you fool, where have you heard That shepherd dogs are swift enough to catch a yellow bird? What, found a track? I guess you have—a woodchuck's I declare Ah, here's his hole. Go for him, Shep! We'll have him out of there.

Wait, dog; stand back, right where you are; I'll show that chuck a trick. Stand back, I say, and wait a bit; I'll poke him with a stick. Jab! Jab! It's deep, that woodchuck hole; see how it twists and bends. Oh! there he runs! I should have known—some chuck holes have two ends. I'm down; no matter, get him, Shep! He ran up on that knoll. No use, come back; just as I thought, he's got another hole.

Come on. Hello! I didn't know the burs were open yet. Lie down, old dog, I'll take a climb, there's chestnuts here to get, A pocket full; that's pretty good, I've something now to chew. You wag your tail; do you want some? Do dogs like chestnuts, too? Well, take a couple; now we'll go. Hi! there's a squirrel; now we Must catch him. Pshaw! He's got away up in a hemlock tree,

And we have lost him. Let him go. Now here's the pasture bars; You find the cows and fetch 'em up, or we will see the stars Before we see the milking yard; it's plump a half a mile; So, sick 'em, Shep, and round 'em up and I will rest me while I eat this Seek-no-further and this Pippin that I found Out in that pile of apples where they're lying on the ground.

Ah, here you come. Have you them all? Here's Speckle, Spot and Jess, Old Brownie, Molly, Lill and Dot, but not old bell cow, Bess. So, sir, go back and find that cow; come, lively! You can tell Just where she is, for she's the cow that wears the copper bell. Some dogs know lots; he won't be long. I hear the bell, I think, Down in the hollow by the spring where she has stopped to drink.

There, there! Don't run her; steady, now! Her heels—don't bite her nose. She's through; just start them down the lane—I've got the bars to close-And then we'll drive 'em slowly home, and stop our dreamy song, For driving cows is not for men, nor dogs that's dead so long Moose are more likely to be crossing roadways at this time of year, especially after dark or early in the morning. The peak of their breeding season is late September and early October.

· Increase your roadside awareness and reduce your speed when you see MOOSE CROSSING signs along the highway. When on secondary roads, the recommended speed is 40 mph or less in want you to enjoy seeing these moose crossing areas.

NEWS FROM VERMONT -

Corn, Corn, Corn

by Burr Morse

Corn, corn everywhere and not a kernel to eat. That's the way it is here in Vermont this time of year when all the gardens have gone the way of Jack Frost and what's left are only fields of peaked-looking corn stalks saved for the cows. Yup, that's the way cows like their corn, frost-hardened, kernel-dented, and chopped into little tiny pieces. In Vermont, farmers don't pick, harvest, glean, or gather their corn—they chop it. Although corn chopping brings nostalgia as big as silos, it's a wonder that anyone ever survived a single season; the history of chopping corn is rife with man-eating machinery and careless ways.

Our Allis Chalmers chopper was connected to an Allis D-17 tractor via a long hitch pole and a brutal power take off shaft. The chopper, resembling a pumpkin-orange Brontosaurus creeping through the cornfield, was followed by our black '48 Ford farm truck with high sides. The person driving the D-17, usually my father, had to somehow "zero" the thing in on a single corn row while using the proper gearing and engine speed. For the duration of chopping season, he needed the pivotal dexterity of a hoot owl. It was essential to keep his eyes on both the chopper's thousand moving parts and the corn rows ahead. The Ford had a jumpy clutch, a grinding transmission, and a flathead V-8 engine that stalled at the drop of a hat. The Ford's driver, constantly blinded by a "sand storm" of corn silage, had to "match bumpers" with the chopper at 5 mph through mudholes and sidehills. That old Ford had more idiosyncrasies than the corn field had stalks; a person who could successfully drive it deserved the unofficial title of "master of anything on wheels".

There wasn't a lot of danger out in the corn field except for the constant temptation to jump in the chopper's opening out of sheer frustration built up from all the breakdowns and plug ups! The real danger came back at the silo with the unloading. It was usually a quagmire out there since "Murphy's" design for chopping season was most always torrential rain.

Our silo, an old wood-stave Unadilla, was thirty feet high. It was fed by a ten-inch steel pipe which went from the extremely "unforgiving" blower to an opening in the silo's dome. The blower was powered by a slapping leather belt which was spun at frightening RPMs by the pulley of an ancient farm tractor. The most dangerous part of the blower, however, was a long trough with an endless chain conveyer. The conveyor had paddles which were designed to convey corn silage, or anything else that might fall in the trough, into the blower.

When the Ford truck was full, we'd drive it to the silo area and ram it backwards, through the mud, to where it would empty into the trough. It had a dump body and after we unlatched the tailgate, we raised the body to an angle that would allow gravity to help with removing the silage but not let the whole load spill out all at once. Then we started the blower tractor and "threw her into gear". One of us climbed into the silo to level the blown silage; the other stayed outside to pull the stuff steadily from the truck with an implement fashioned from a long iron pipe and a potato digger.

To this day, I have nightmares thinking of that moving conveyer; one misstep and the guy unloading the truck would have been drawn right into the blower's gaping maw. My brother, Elliott, said one time the blower "swallowed itself". He was up high in the silo doing the leveling and all of a sudden there was a deafening clatter. "I scrambled to the edge of the silo and stood there with my back pasted to the wall. Shrapnel was sprayin' all around me and all I could do was pray that none of it would hit me!" he said.

It must have started with the conveyer chain breaking and being "sucked" into the blower and up the pipe; it ended with a total voiding of the blower's bowels until there was enough spare parts mixed in with the silage to repair a battleship. Luckily Elliott escaped injury that day but said he and Dad spent several days separating metal from cattle feed and somehow toggling that blower back into working order.

To this day I'm still full of nostalgia about chopping corn. loved the fermented smell of the puckery ooze that seeped from the silo's bottom. I loved driving that old Ford bumper to bumper with the chopper, guided by "by-guess-and-by-glory" through a tiny hole in its corn coated windshield. I loved the feel of blown silage against my face, danger be damned.

We no longer chop corn at Morse Farm so it's a clear-cut case for nostalgia. We do, however, "flaunt" foliage season to the thousands of tourists who come here. I love the crispness of autumn and the beauty that surrounds us; it's almost nature at its absolute perfection. Like an expensive steak, however, there's always room for a little seasoning and from my point of view, autumn is only perfectly "seasoned" when you have a field of corn to chop.

Pumpkins, Apples & Autumn Leaves—Fall is Here!

The change of seasons from summer to fall makes all outdoors look different. Fall harvest foods and events, and our stories have a new mood and everything is on the move.

Imagine a father and young daughter wandering around on a beautiful fall day, having a good time looking, even just asking questions: What else? How come? How about? and What do you like? In Ask Me by Bernard Waber and illustrated by Suzy Lee ($16.99, Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, www.hmhco. com), you can enjoy every moment of the father-daughter team on their question-and-answer trek through the swirling fall leaves. In one memorable full two-page spread the twosome take the rest beneath tree under a blanket the colorful laves. You'll find much about the young girl, too. She likes dogs, cats, turtles, geese, frogs, butterflies and lightning bugs, bees and flowers, digging in the sand, an ice cream cone, and best of all at day's end she likes Dad putting her to bed with teddy and kangaroo and two good-night kisses. And Dad remembers to leave the door open. Their fall day in such a splash of colors will warm your heart.

This is still camping season, but suppose you park your camper in the middle of the 'Great Forest,' disturbing wildlife that are used to being alone in peace and harmony? Find out what these wild animals can do when their home at Howling Hill is invaded in The Big Blue Thing on The Hill by Yuval Zommer ($16.99, Candlewick Press, www.candlewick.com). Here's a book that one can't wait to turn the next page to see what happens. No, actually, you'll delay on each page to study the amazing animal drawings.

The Big Blue Thing is a vintage VW camper which the animals view as a terrifying sight, possibly a meteorite or spaceship or elephant. "It's trouble," said the foxes. And the foxes were right. As the story unfolds the foxes, weasels, boars, badgers, bears and wolves fail to remove the blue monster with their howls, pushing it downhill and trying to dig it out. In desperation they seek the advice of "Wisest Old Owl" who summons the smallest forest friends—the bees and wasps, midges and skitters, to form a big bug flying squad. They zoom inside the monster to whizz and buzz, and nip and sting, if necessary. The Wisest Old Owl had been right! With a roar and a rumble the Big Blue Thing turned tail and fled back down Howling Hill. And the animals' peaceful kingdom returns, but with a surprise ending. This is a book you'll enjoy again and again.

Giant pumpkins may win prizes every fall, but what about a giant apple? You'll be totally amused while following the life of one such apple in Just One Apple by Janosch ($17.95, North/South, www.northsouth.com). Our lonely hero Walter has his wish come true when his dormant apple tree finally produces one apple. Walter lets the lone apple grow so big he has to struggle to get it to market, but then sadly nobody will buy it, believing it isn't real. "No one has ever seen such a huge apple. It can't possibly be real." The mean townsfolk change their tune, however, when a monstrous green dragon descends upon the kingship. Walter's giant apple saves the day when the dragon chokes to death trying to devour it. A much happier Walter now wishes his apple tree would give him two marketable-sized apples next year.

The German-born author-artist Janosch (real name Horst Eckert) who studied at the Academy of Art in Munich, has published over 100 books for children in 30 languages. His drawing are original, amusing, almost surrealistic.

Now's the time to check your chimneys to make sure there's a safe passage for all that smoke. Could be a chimney > swift nest might be in the way. Just as the title suggests, Spit & Stick-A Chimney Full of Swifts by Marilyn Grohoske Evans and illustrated by Nicole Gsell ($16.95, Charlesbridge, www.charlesbridge.com), swifts do indeed make unique half-saucer shaped nests pasted together with small sticks and their own spit.

> This is a delightful book about the family and farm and the stub-tailed, cigar-shaped swifts that call it home from early spring until late fall. We learn that the swifts winter over in the Amazon region of South America and migrate to North America and Canada in the spring. A declining species, they are protected by state and federal wildlife codes.

> The pair of swifts and their babies are pictured here spending the season with the farm family who gladly share their chimney and love of these special guests.

Time is fast approaching to get pumpkins for Halloween. To learn more about this fascinating autumn vegetable – no, actually it's a 'fruit'—then read and enjoy Pumpkins by Jacqueline Farmer and illustrated by Phyllis Limbacher Tildes ($7.95 paper, Charlesbridge, www.charlesbridge.com).

We'll find out that the term jack-o-lantern actually came from an Irish folktale about a foolish man named Stingy Jack who lit his way with a burning coal inside a carved out turnip! People called him Jack-o'-Lantern or Jack of the Lantern, hence the name we use today for our pumpkins.

We'll see pictures of orange, red, white and even blue pumpkins including the Atlantic giant pumpkin that may weight more than your whole family. People in South America have been eating pumpkins for thousands of years and they have been grown for hundreds of years by native Americans for food and medicine. There's a recipe for pumpkin pie flavored with maple syrup. And as a bonus learn how to say pumpkin in 12 other languages including pumpa in Swedish, calabaza in Mexican, and yucca in Italian.

While you and your family are in the woods this fall admiring the foliage, be on the lookout for nut trees; maybe even those scarce butternut trees, if you are lucky. To help you and your children in such a quest, Let's Go Nuts - Seeds We Eat by April Pulley Sayre ($16.99, Simon and Schuster, www.simonandschuster.com), is an introduction to all kinds of edible nuts and also beans, grains, and even some spices. Full-page color eye-catching photographs identify many of the nuts we may see on the tree or in the market: Brazil nuts, butternuts, black walnuts, English walnuts, peanuts, pine nuts, macadamia, cashew nuts, pistachios, nutmeg, chestnuts, hickory nuts, hazelnuts, pecans and even coconuts. This will inspire us to 'lets go nuts' with our fall and holiday treats!

Phoenix Books Rutland—New Bookstore Opens September 28

borne through a communitysupported pre-buy program and local investment, will celebrate its grand opening September 28, followed two days later by an event with arguably Vermont's most successful author, Chris Bohjalian.

Rutland resident Tricia Huebner, who will manage the store, and with her husband, Tom, is a co-owner, said her excitement has been building for weeks as space was renovated and inventory began to arrive.

We've created a spectacular space that will be welcoming and warm, and will fill a need not just for books, but for discussion and debate and connecting with one another," Huebner said. "This is a dream fulfilled for me personally, and for a lot of people in Rutland County."

Michael DeSanto, co-owner of Phoenix Books Rutland and founder of the first Phoenix Books in Essex, and later a branch in Burlington, VT, said, "We've been blessed with incredible community support."

Green Mountain Power, with support from the Downtown Rutland Partnership,

Phoenix Books Rutland, Mayor Chris Louras, and a variety of local residents, organizations and businesses, recruited Phoenix Books to open the store in Rutland. GMP Vice President Steve Costello enlisted more than 50 people and businesses to pre-buy $1,000 worth of books each last fall to support

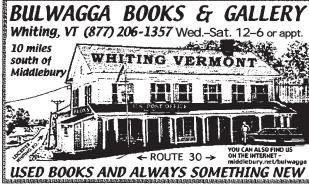

> "I thought he was kidding when we met for the first time and he said he already had $30,000 committed, DeSanto said. "I've never seen a community rally like Rutland has rallied around us. It is humbling.'

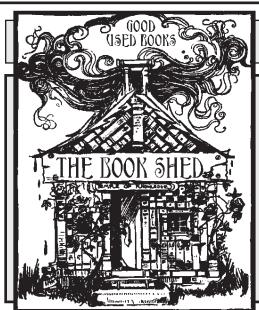

Phoenix Books Rutland will be hosting community and book & author events.

As part of the Grand Opening, Vermont author Chris Bohjalian will read from and answer questions about his new book, Close your Eyes, Hold Hands. The event is free at 7 pm, held at Green Mountain Power's Energy Innovation Center (EIC) at 68-70 Merchants Row.

Phoenix Books Rutland is located at 2 Center St. in Rutland, VT. Open 10-6, Mon-Sat. For more information, call (802) 855-8078 or visit www.phoenixbooks.biz.

kitchen, preserving, canning, even making artisan cheeses and homemade sourdough bread? Then The Backyard Homestead— Book of Kitchen Know-How by Andrea Chesman ($19.95, Storey Publishing, www. storey.com), will give you 350 pages of tempting food ideas for your kitchen.

As a starter here's a typical day in her homestead kitchen: "Kimchi may be fermenting in the cool spot under the sink. Bread may be rising on top the refrigerator where the heat collects. In the refrigerator, salt pork may be curing, and in the slow cooker, lard or chicken fat may be rendering. Attached to one of the cupboard handles, cheesecloth may be draining whey from cheese curds into a bowl on the counter. Yogurt may be culturing under a blanket by the wood stove or in a picnic cooler."

And she adds "When you are homesteading, working in the kitchen is a never-ending journey." She gives us intricate details and advice on preserving and preparing an amazing variety of food while living on a experimenting with dry-curing after beone-acre homestead in Ripton, VT.

"I make a few gallons of maple syrup every year from just five maple trees. I have harvested and preserved lots of different fruits and plenty of wild foods...I have managed to barter or buy raw milk, pastured meats, free-range eggs and honey for most of my

And "I have cooked woodchuck, venison, frog's legs, rabbit, guinea fowl, ducks, and geese, wild and farmed."

Be surprised and enjoy learning many of her skills preparing these and other foods. For an example, in addition to common meats, she shows how to cut up and prepare goat, rabbit, guinea fowl and how to spatchcock (remove backbone and flatten the bird) poultry including ducks, geese and turkey.

Living by the principle of 'waste not, want not,' Chesman shows how to handle, clean, package and freeze edible innards like gizzards, hearts and liver. With her meats there are also intricate drawings to show every primal and retail cut.

The author says each of her chapters could be expanded into a cookbook itself. She gives us a great deal of information. She writes about processing, preserving and especially preparing one's own home-grown fruits and vegetables, and she gives us plenty of bonus ideas. Among then is how to freeze eggs, making one's own beef jerky, pureeing fruit and drying it into a chewy leather, making apple cider syrup, extracting honey from the comb, creating fruit liqueurs, making aioli (a Cantonian garlic and oil spread), and preparing Swedish gravlax salmon.

The author provides us with detailed drawings of pots and pans, knives, and all kinds of cooking gear. She even shows the kettles needed to boil maple sap on your stove!

This is the season when the kitchen replac-vegetable dish called Shakshuka; Sag Paneer, Indian creamed spinach and cheese; Berbere is in—bake that apple pie, can or freeze those lentils, an Ethiopian dish; rabbit or chicken vegetables and cure that meat. Fall foods are ragu with rigatoni; pimento-crusted pork here. Eat and enjoy! Here is some reading to chops; boiled tongue with mustard sauce; and orange-scented polenta honey cake.

The author's other cookbooks included Ever wonder if you could do more in your The Pickled Pantry—Recipes from the Root Cellar, Serving up The Harvest, and The New Vegetarian Grill. She also gives cooking classes and demonstrations.

Chesman lived on a rural 'back-to-theland' community in New York State before moving to Vermont in 1980. She is married and has two grown sons.

As a final note she thanks her readers for "letting her into their kitchens", but after reading this book, we should all thank her for letting us into her magical kitchen.

Ever go into an Italian deli or grocery store and been intrigued by those tightly-packaged meats (looking like small footballs) hanging from the ceiling. And with such interesting names. Now one can find out how they are made and of what meats and spices in Drying Pork—Make Your Own Salami, Pancetta, Coppa, Prosciutto and More by Hentor Kent ($19.95, Countrymen Press, www.country menpress.com).

The author, a biology teacher, started ing given a couple of piglets by some friends while living in Portland, Oregon. He and his family now live in East Barnard, VT, where he continues to teach and dry-cure pork.

"As the last leaves fall off the maples, our extended family gathers and we begin the process of paying our respects to the recently killed pigs," he writes. "We do this not with band saws to put pork chops destined to end up in the depths of the freezer, but by carefully segmenting whole pieces of beautifully marbled, dark-red muscles into their natural forms. We continue the ode to pork by salting, drying, and finally thinly slicing meat on to a plate with a little cracked pepper and

His experience as a do-it-yourselfer plus having filtered through thousands of pages of research and data on dried-cured meats has led to this definitive textbook on dry-curing meats just as has been done in Italy and other Mediterranean countries for centuries. His instructions include preparing the meat, proper salting, drying conditions and times, packaging, and tips on safety. Then term 'cured' means the meats have been modified through the application of either salt, sugar or smoke and they are never cooked.

If you don't ever try dry-curing your own meat, then here's what to look for at that Italian deli, thanks to this author's guide: Copplette (long, thin slices of salted meat tied together in pairs); Pancetta (dry-cured pork belly); Jambons de Camont (cured and dry-smoked ham muscles); Carnitas (fatty pork scraps fried until crispy); Guanciale (dry-cured jowl of pig); Coppa (the best parts of the pig); Fiocco (made from shin meat of back leg); Culattlo (muscle mass from the back leg); Lardo (cured fat); Speck (skin-on, deboned butterfly ham, salted, cold smoked One of the most impressive gifts of this and dried); Prosciutto (whole bone-in, skin-various foods. Chesman shares homestead making salami, a type of sausage that goes as well as ones reflecting ethnic and regional through a fermentation process in addition processed or preserved. Some that might to being dried. Included are making Genoa salami where the meat is finely ground; spicy red pepper salami; and Nduja-inspired salami (meat and extra fat). Also covered in the book are instructions for bacon, dry-curing pork loin with juniper and garlic; and Mediterranean dry-cured hams.

Among the author's suggestions for eating your dry-cured meats are a breakfast sandwich with English muffin, fried egg, Alpine-style cheese, crispy spicy Coppa and avocado. For a farm sandwich, he recommends sourdough bread, salami, Monterey Jack cheese, fresh tomato and red torpedo onion. For your surplus of Brussels sprouts try adding Pancetta, garlic and red pepper flakes. It's one of his favorites.

Need help in deciding what to do with this fall's crop of apples? Then The Apple Orchard Cookbook by Janet M. Christensen and Betty Bergman Levin ($12.95, The Countrymen Press, www.countrymenpress. com) will give you more than 100 easy-tofollow and tasty recipes where the apple is center-stage in your kitchen and on your dining room table.

This cookbook is seasoned with some interesting quotes, quips, tips and unusual information about apples. We learn all apples consist of 85% water, all have 10 seeds, are members of the rose family, and that the crab apple is parent to all apple varieties now growing. A good tip is to add an apple to a bag of potatoes to keep them from sprouting. We learn there are 8,000 varieties of apples known throughout history and 2,500 of them can be found in America.

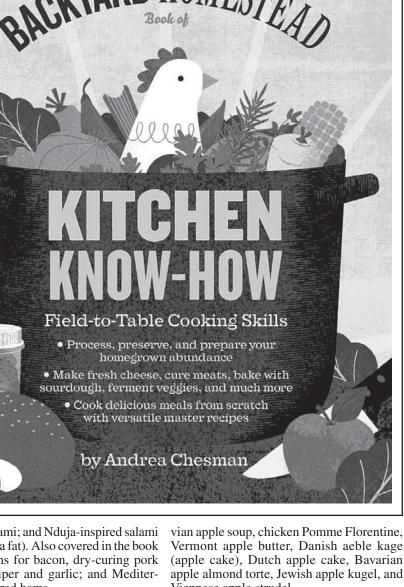

Considering 100 countries in the world now grow apples, this and other cookbooks The author gives us extra instructions for are more frequently offering foreign recipes preferences. In The Apple Orchard Cookbook, bakers and cooks can try Swedish ham balls made with chopped apples, Scandina-

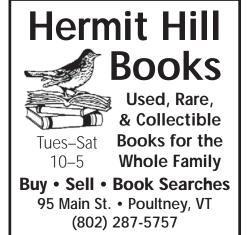

Viennese apple strudel.

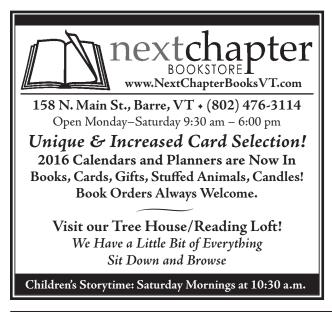

If one would like baking a different apple pie than the traditional one, this cookbook has nine tempting recipes for apple cheese pie, apple custard cream pie, apple praline pie, caramel apple pie, cranberry—glazed cheese pie, grated apple meringue pie, honey apple pie and sour cream apple pie.

The Apple Orchard Cookbook also has a few suggestions eliciting remarks from family or guests of, "Well, what have we here?" These recipes include a curried apple and banana soup, an apple and sausage quiche, a shrimp and scallop apple casserole, and an appetizer of Danish marinated herring mixed with a Granny Smith apple.

The authors are food writers and editors in the Boston area. The first edition of The Apple Orchard Cookbook was printed 30 years ago. They hope this updated version retains the beloved 'homespun' taste of apples.

13th Annual Pumpkin Festival at Cedar Circle Farm

Pumpkin season is a special time of the year at Cedar Circle Farm & Education Center in East Thetford, VT. The 13th Annual Pumpkin Festival, always held on Columbus Day weekend at the height of fall foliage, takes place Sunday, October 11, 2015, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. This popular, rain or shine harvest festival, attracting more than 1500 visitors each year, offers Fall family fun on the farm including pumpkin picking, horse-drawn wagon rides, engaging children's activities, cider pressing, visiting owls, live music from local bands, and plenty of good eats!

Throughout the day, hop on a horse-drawn wagon and take a ride to the pumpkin patch, with farm guides aboard to talk about organic agriculture on the farm. Taste some freshly-pressed apple cider, that you can even press yourself!

Live music, food, and entertainment!

Enjoy live music from talented local bands on the main stage, under the tent. The morning act from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Blind Squirrel, led by Thetford native Bill Shepard, draws on Irish, Appalachian, Canadian, and New England sounds. Jeanne & The Hi-Tops bring high-energy soul and roots music from 1 to 3 p.m.

Children's entertainment takes places in the "Enchanted Forest" in our circle of cedar trees, the farm's namesake. Musical acts feature the Swing Peepers, an interactive music duo, who perform at 10:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m., and 2 p.m. The Revels Mummers, part of the Norwich-based Revels North group, perform intermittently between 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Other activities include face painting, crafts, and wreath making, as well as learning about the visiting owl from

The "Good Food" Concession opens at 11 a.m. featuring delicious organic food grown and prepared on the farm, to include salads, hearty soups and desserts, as well as grilled local sausages and organic ice cream. Northeast Organic Farmers Association (NOFA-VT) returns with their woodfired mobile pizza oven.

The farm's Hello Café will be serving coffee drinks during festival, and the farmstand, which features an abundance of organic produce, fall flowers, and farm-made sauces, jams, spreads, and pestos, will be open until 5 p.m.

Lots of information and farm tours

Gather information about food, farm equipment, and alternative energy sources by visiting our community educational displays. Take a stroll around the farm and follow our self-guided farm tour.

The Share the Harvest raffle features an array of prizes from local businesses, and proceeds go toward NOFA-VT's Farm Share Program. With this community supported raffle, the Farm Share Program can help more local families every year with a season of wholesome and organic fruits and vegetables from Cedar Circle Farm. Tickets for the raffle are available at the CCF table by the main tent, and the drawing takes place at 2 p.m.

Entry fee to the festival is $10 per vehicle. Please leave pets at home. Guests are encouraged to bring their own serving ware, as the goal is to minimize waste and carry on our tradition of just two bags of trash generated at the festival.

"We could not host this festival without the generous Vermont Institute of Natural Science from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. spirits of our more than 50 volunteers," says Lindsay Pattison, CCF's outreach and communications coordinator. "We have volunteers as young as seven helping out with our kid's activities and waste recovery stations, and some families volunteer for the entire day, including helping out with our set-up and tear-down. At our festivals, you will find the heart of our community. I'm honored to be a part of it."

A farm with a mission

Cedar Circle Farm is a forty-acre certified organic farm, dedicated to "growing for a sustainable future" through the production of certified organic vegetables and berries, bedding plants, and quality flowers and herbs. The farm offers a CSA program, harvest festivals, cooking classes, gardening programs for adults and children, and guided educational farm tours.

Cedar Circle Farm & Education Center is located at 225 Pavillion Rd., off of US Rt. 5 in East Thetford, VT, just north of Hanover, NH along the Connecticut River. Call 802-785-4737. E-mail: growing@cedarcirclefarm.org.
