Tracking Dead Trees

by Bill Felker

Place is dynamic, equal parts geography and imagination; cards. While funding lasts, www.postoilsolutions.org. it is a complex intermingling and, ultimately, fusion of mind and landscape, so that neither is finally separable or meaningful without the other.

-Kent C. Ryden If a tree dies and is cut down, do its leaves still fall every year? The tree that belonged to Nate's mother no longer stands.

She and her house and tree are, in fact, long gone. I started keeping track of the time the leaves turned on that particular maple tree in 1982, and I continued for over two decades to note when its leaves turned and fell. Nate's mother died some time late in the last century, and the maple declined quickly as the millennium approached. My notations from 2004 were the last I made of its leafturn and shedding trajectory.

It may seem trivial enough to keep track of when Lil's tree across the street (which is the latest on the block) turns color, and when the Danielsons' maple (which is the earliest on the block) comes down. Lil is dead now, as are the Danielsons, but their trees remain, and I watch them because it seems important in some way or other to me. And the history of the absent maple remains as vivid in my mind as the other histories in my daybook.

In defense of such frivolity, I appeal to the theories of R.G. Collingwood in The Idea of History (1946), Collingwood posits that historical events have both an outside—a visible or observable side—and an inside—an interior dimension related to the forces that might have caused the events. And he considers that since the outside can no longer be observed, it must be imagined and reconstructed in order to be studied and understood. From such a perspective, it is clearly not important whether a tree is dead or alive. It is the recreation of the tree in the imagination that matters.

So, if a tree died years ago in the yard of Nate's mother, do its leaves still fall?

Of course.

The core of what has occurred (and perhaps of what is occurring now) only exists in re-enactment within the mind. Exterior pieces of actions and objects and place in time must be recollected from records or fragments or stories in order to make them meaningful. Only when the past is born again does it provide context and connection for the present, while shaping and directing the one who reinvents it.

Enjoy Your Sundays with "Music At High Noon"

Popolo invites you to come to their November concerts and events at its Bellows Falls farm-to-table restaurant and the adjacent Windham Ballroom. Movies, cocktail parties, and concerts by regional and national touring musicians will be featured.

The fall season kicks off on Friday, November 1 with a "Day of the Dead" party featuring dark rock-art practitioners, Intercept. The night includes a high-dollar costume contest judged by Popolo staff and Intercept members with first and second prize totaling $450. "Day of the Dead" lets you have a family holiday on Halloween (Trick or Treat with abandon!) and still have a rousing good grownup time the next night. Tickets are $8 at the door. Doors are at 7:30 and dinner reservations are still being accepted in both dining rooms. If you're scared of parties, fear not, the ghouls are in another part of the building.

On Sunday November 3rd, the doors of The Windham Ballroom open again for the start of the brunchtime series "Music At High Noon," with area bands Rusty Belle and The Break Maids. Both are country bar bands who performed at The Windham earlier in the year to a sold out house. The "Music At High Noon" series features a concert, a full brunch menu, and a cash bar. Doors open at 11:30 am and the music starts at noon. Tickets are $12 or $25 for the best seats in the house.

The following Sunday, November 10th, "Music At High Noon" brings you roots gardener, Bow Thayer. In two unplugged sets Mr. Thayer and his acoustic trio will parade you through stripped down versions of songs from his album Eden as well as new tunes from his upcoming album. The Boston Globe says that Mr. Thayer's work "is a collision of hope and destruction (that) draws some crisp images of the maniacal survivors and heartbroken poets roaming a bombed-out paradise." You'll want eggs with a side of that and a Bloody Mary, for sure. Doors open at 11:30 am and the music starts at noon. Tickets are $12 or $25 for the best seats in the house.

On Sunday, November 17th, the brunch crowd is treated to After The Rodeo and some new-fashioned jazzicana which, as it turns out, is a big dose of Americana with a soupçon of jazz. The band is heralded in these parts as a supergroup of high quality musicianship and vocal stylings. The trio, guitarist and vocalist Pat Melvin (PossumHaw, Kelly Ravin Γrio), mandolinist Matt Schrag (Dixie Red Delights, Hot Pickin' Party) and guitarist D. Davis (Red Hot Juba), come from bands well known in the north country. They cluster 'round a single mic and entangle vocal harmonies with clever and virtuosic instrumentation. The Windham is the perfect room for old timey presentation and you'll be moved by what music can do to your insides at such close proximity. Doors open at 11:30 am and the music starts at noon. Tickets are $12 or $25 for the best seats in the house.

Finally, on Sunday, November 24th, folk icon Mark Erelli honors the valley with a brunchtime show. Hayley Reardon and her band will be opening.

Erelli's not some grizzled road dog from the sepia-toned past but it's hard to imagine the modern folk scene without him. The fourteen odd years that he's been making music professionally has helped to infuse the industry with his own youthful vigor all while he became a fixture in his own right. Now he's made a record with the young and talented Hayley Reardon, a teenaged songwriting award winner from Boston who has the media in a flutter about her future. It's the kind of press that makes one feel faint: "a bright star on the horizon and a glorious addition to the future of acoustic music," Performer Magazine trumpeted in a way that makes

35th Annual Putney Craft Tour

November 29, 30 & December 1

Putney Craft Tour will be celebrating its 35th anniversary this Thanksgiving weekend, November 29, 30 and December 1. It's the oldest continuous crafts tour in the U.S. and has served as a prototype for tours all over the country. The tour is also a participant in American Craft week, a nationwide celebration of American Craft.

Artists had been drawn to Putney in the late-1960s and early-70s for many reasons, including the back-to-the-land movement, the rise of American craft, and the powerful cluster of creative souls brought there by Windham College, the Yellow Barn Music Festival, The Putney School and the Experiment in International Living.

Founding members still on the tour

There are several founding members of the craft tour who will be opening their studios again this Thanksgiving, as well as some new to the tour. One of the founders is potter Ken Pick who arrived in Putney in 1969 after receiving an MAT from Antioch-Putney Graduate School, an education degree. Pottery was never far away from his heart, and in about 1973 he began to earn his living from his craft.

"There are still five or six of us here who were here from the beginning," Pick said. "We banded together in one location before we evolved the tour concept. It got more sophisticated as time went on. This year we have 26 artists on the tour. Thanksgiving weekend was chosen carefully — it's the start of the gift-buying season."

"Also, because it's Thanksgiving, there are a lot of people from all over the country visiting family," Pick said. "People are coming from all the New England states. They come from New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, New York and even from overseas."

Home studios open to the public

Carol Keiser, another of the original founders, says that "Artists and craftspeople open their studios to become part of the creative community and to provide an avenue for exposure; to let people know what they do and to provide them access to their craft."

Carol creates vivid painted tiles and paintings with lush landscapes, dreamy figures, fanciful images, and colorful still lifes. She says she has been concentrating more on painting recently. "My paintings are more expressionistic; magical realism. I try to put in things like stars, moons, the sun; things suggesting the cosmos and iconic elements that suggest something." Much of her work is of places such as Italy, Mexico and Costa Rica and other locations where she travels. She will also have small drawings of nudes, done in gouache and Japanese brush ink in her studio, which is "like a small cottage," she says. "People always go 'wow! What a great place to work!' There's lots of light and color from the paintings and tiles."

Artists welcome the visitors

Judy Hawkins, says preparing for the Tour is always critical to have the best presentation for her paintings to the public. She is energized by the wonderful interactions she has with visitors to her studio. Most of the time Judy works in isolation, with little feedback while new ideas percolate. Her approach to painting landscapes is based on her intuitive interpretation and recollections to create a sense of place. She has had a very successful year for private and corporate sales and her paintings can be seen at several galleries, including Those connections are what it's all about, both for the artists and the people who visit their studios. Thousands of visitors move through the studios over the course of three days and engage with the artists, the real draw of such tours, as well as the distinctive, original pieces for sale.

Silver jeweler Jeanne Bennett, who has been on the tour for over 10 years, appreciates the feedback she gets. "It's nice to get the work out in public. I'm up in the woods and I love hearing everyone's feedback."

In addition to first-timers, Bennett, like most of the artists, has repeat customers that come back "to see what's new and add to their collection." More than anything, she said, the tour is great entertainment. Driving the back roads and finding these places is an adventure in itself, she said, although the studios are well marked and maps provide clear directions.

The phases of the Cider Moon and the Deer Mating Moon

As the leaves come down, and after the big push to make cider, deer begin their mating seasons. Starting earlier in the South and later in the North, this season typically occurs before Early Winter arrives and the last leaves fall. November 3: The Deer Mating Moon is new at 7:50 a.m. November 10: The moon enters its second quarter at 12:57 a.m. November 17: The moon is full at 10:16 a.m. November 25: The moon enters its last phase at 2:28 p.m.

The Sun

Daylight Savings Time ends as November begins. Set clocks back one hour at 2:00 a.m. Sunday, November 3. Also on November 3, a total eclipse of the sun will be visible in the eastern United States just a little after dawn.

On November 22, the sun enters the sign of Sagittarius and reaches within two degrees of solstice at the same time.

The Planets

Saturn is not visible until the middle of the month, reappearing in the morning sky in Libra. Jupiter lies in Gemini overhead in the morning, shifting to the west as the sky lightens in the east. Mars starts the month in Leo, then enters Virgo at December's approach. Venus in Sagittarius is still the evening star.

The Stars

The Milky Way runs from east to west, cutting the sky in half at bed time. The Big Dipper hugs the northern horizon then, and Orion has risen over the Atlantic Ocean and the Allegheny Mountains, visible now in your own yard. Deep in the west, summer's Cygnus goes down just as Sirius, the Dog Star, becomes visible deep in the east.

The Shooting Stars

As you check your livestock after dark, look for the South Taurids on night of November 4-5, the north Taurids on November 11–12 and the Leonids on November 16–17.

Meteorology and Peak Activity Times For Livestock, Fish, Game & Dieters

If strong storms occur this month, weather patterns suggest that they will happen during the following periods: November 2–5, 14–16 and November 21–27. New moon on November 3 and full moon on November 17 are likely to intensify the weather systems due around those dates. By the end of November, a killing frost can be expected. Fish, game, livestock and people tend to feed more and are more active as the barometer is falling one to three days before the weather systems that arrive near the following dates, dates on which cold fronts normally reach Vermont: November 2, 6, 11, 16, 20, 24 & 28.

Natural Calendar: Sagittarius Inventory

The sun enters Sagittarius on November 22, having travelled three-fourths of its way from autumn equinox to winter solstice. Two hours before midnight, the sky carries the forms of early winter: the Pleiades, Taurus and Orion are rising, the Milky Way cuts across the sky from east to west, Andromeda lies directly overhead, and the Summer Triangle isfollowing the sunset.

autumn ends. Sometimes oaks are the holdouts, sometimes forsythia or a hardy honeysuckle. Sometimes sweet gums and poplars keep a few leaves this late in the year; sometimes protected oak-leaf hydrangeas, Osage, mock orange or lilacs outlast all the other trees and shrubs.

The fruit of the bittersweet continues to fall to the undergrowth. Pale witch hazel flowers are shrivelling. Privets are bare, their blue berries revealed. Euonymus fruits are losing their white outer shells, orange cores unveiled by the cold.

New England aster and stonecrop foliage turned yellow in early November; now the plants are shedding. Late garden lettuce and the autumn growth of rhubarb have withered. Hosta leaves have collapsed into the remnants of maples, ginkgoes and white mulberries. The gooseneck turns chocolate brown. Most all the seeds are gone from milkweed pods; just a few wisps of down cling to their shells. Fragile pokeweed stems have exploded in the frost. The last roses have been frozen by nights in the teens.

I am up at six-thirty sitting in the greenhouse. Middle November, at the end of leaf drop. The sky half dawn, light and dark equal through the fast gray nimbostratus clouds and the storm. The wind is hard from the southeast. The pattern of the gusts and rain creates a shape of its own, harsh like pebbles or blending, retreating.

becomes too fervent, and I am growing restless kept at this high climactic plateau.

Then the pressure suddenly eases, the cloudburst ends. I can see the tall locusts swaying a block away, and instead of the wind given voice and revealed by the rain, instead of its insistent drumming and clattering, I hear it rushing in the bare branches and singing in the crevices and corners of the buildings and the fences around me. A few feet from where I sit, chickadees dive and hang at the feeders, glide with the rhythm of the air, at ease in the swells of the wind.

A small leak in the roof lets hail, then soft, sweeping and an intermittent drip of water fall on the indoor plants. ### Sam Purdy's Huskin' Bee

Late years most all huskin' is done in the field, Or by huskin' machines, when markets and yield Will warrant expense. It ain't often that we Are asked to a reg'lar old sort huskin' bee; And a tickelder man I don't think could be found, Than I was last week, when Sam Purdy come round And invited us down; for he'd made up his mind That he'd have a bee of the old-fashioned kind, On next We'n'sday night. Of course we all went. Old-fashioneder evening I never have spent.

The corn was all picked and piled on the barn floor, From the lean-to on back to the big rollin' door; And a seat had been fixed out of beehives and planks At the edge of the pile; while beyond the big bank Of corn had been rigged out of boards a long bin, That after we stripped 'em the ears were thrown in. Some forks, handle first, had been thrust in the hay That walled up the barn at the side of the bay, And the pumpkins that stuck on the fork tines so bright, Each held up a candle to furnish us light.

It was eight when the seat was well loaded with men, But they kept droppin' in till between nine and ten; So the husks piled behind us, and O, what a din The naked ears made as they fell in the bin! While we talked as we worked, of the weather and crops, Of the price of potatoes and apples and hops, Of politics, too, of free silver and gold; And Sam passed some "hardware" to keep out the cold Which practice, at bees, some condemn as not right; But most took a little and no one got tight.

At 'leven, we finished and argered a while
The number of bushels of ears in the pile;
"Three hundred and fifty!" "four hundred!" said some.
It wasn't decided when Purdy said, "Come,
The women are waiting to give us a bite."
Then we all followed him to the house where a light
Was placed in the woodshed, nearby to a tub
Of lukewarm soft water. A wash, and a rub
On a towel, and we marched with the willingest feet
To the long kitchen table, where all found a seat,
And made, like an army, a valiant attack
Upon the good victuals piled up like a stack.

There was apple pie, pumpkin pie, cookies and cake, Cream cheese and corn bread of Mis' Purdy's rare make, Baked beans, mashed potatoes and juicy boiled ham, Hot biscuit and coffee and raspberry jam. Did we make out a meal? Well, we did, as we ought, Then adjourned to the woodshed, where Sam come and brought New pipes and tobacker for such as would smoke. There, many a story and many a joke Were told 'ere we bid ev'rybody good-night, And started away from the circle of light Toward our homes. I'll allow it's not much of a yarn, But years were lived over in Sam Purdy's barn.

_Chambers Farm, a Long-Time Family Enterprise 此

by Charles Sutton

Vermont dairy farms continue to go out of business, but not the Chambers Farm in North Clarendon, thanks to a dedicated hard-working family headed by a determined octogenarian!

To add income to the "milk check" the farm is now selling grass-fed beef, pastured poultry, and farm fresh eggs.

Farm owner Phyllis Chambers turned 80 this summer which brought a large number of family and friends to the farmstead for her birthday party and cook-out under a big canopy. Presents included an eye-catching sign promoting farm products. Also, her "dream of a lifetime' came true with a trip to the Grand Canyon!

Then it was back-on-the-farm for the daily routine of milking, doing the record-keeping, and managing it all.

The family was soon busy readying the huge hay barn into a site for her granddaughter Andrea's wedding this fall. An antique barn may seem an unlikely place for a wedding, but Phyllis said the young people did an amazing job putting up lighted chandeliers made out of farm wagon wheels and covering up bales of hay for seating. Son Andrew's other daughter, singer-songwriter Michele, came home from Nashville to do the music. Someone suggested famed designer Martha Stewart should have been there to admire such handiwork!

The next large family gathering will be Thanksgiving when Phyllis cooks the largest turkey available from Stonewood Farm in Orwell, VT, famous for its naturally-raised Vermont turkeys. Last year's turkey weighed 42 pounds which she butter-balled herself (3 lbs. of butter) before it went in the oven.

Phyllis has been doing the Thanksgiving and Easter meals for the family for many years. Presently her family includes seven sons, 19 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. She says she is fortunate as almost all of them live in the area and are available to help on the farm as needed.

Young couples today rarely consider becoming dairy but Phyllis and her husband Richard Chambers, who were sweethearts while at Springfield, VT, High School, decided they wanted to farm after they got married. He had been working as a machinist. "Neither of us knew anything about farming," Phyllis recalled, when they purchased their first farm in Cavendish, VT, in 1959.

That's when they started making their own dairy products and raising beef, pork and poultry and realized how much better the quality and taste of their-owned farm-raised food was. By then they also had three children to feed.

In 1971, they bought the larger 178-acre dairy farm on Middle Road in North Clarendon, VT. The family then had eight children, and for several years also looked after two very young foster-care brothers. When Richard died in 1995, son Andrew and his son David took over operating the farm, with Phyllis still at the helm. Phyllis and Andrew do the early-morning milking. Tragedy struck the farm in 2000, when during a severe morning storm lightning struck a silo, and somehow traveling quickly underground, set their beautiful 13-room farmhouse

It was a total loss, but fortunately no lives were lost nor was anyone injured. Furniture and possessions could be replaced, but not the journals Phyllis kept for years about the daily events on the farms. She still misses the side porch which the family enjoyed in their off-hours. Some day they hopes to rebuild on the old foundation, but in the meantime, Phyllis manages the farm from her mobile home on the property. Andrew is in the process of converting their beef raising from conventional and crossbreeds to all purebred Piedmontese beef. The bred is known for its higher lean-to-fat ratio as well as less marbling and only 31.5 calories per ounce compared to 85.2 for conventional beef and 88.7 for chicken. The bred started in the Piedmont region of northwest Italy, and its milk also is used there for several traditional cheeses.

We joined Andrew while he was moving the herd of farmers (for a variety of good reasons—mainly economics), Holsteins and Jersey dairy cows and beef cattle to pasture as they are rotated to different fields. In their midst was his prize year-old Piedmontese all black bull called Heff (after Hugh Heffner). Andrew said their current herd also includes about two dozen crossbreed Pieds.

Chickens are pastured from spring to fall in a field on the far west side of the farm. About 200 layers will be brought in for the winter, and the rest processed for sale. Dressedout chickens sell for $3.65 a pound, but for the month of November they will be on sale for $2.65 a pound. Ground beef is $3 a pound and eggs $3 a dozen.

Andrew asked, "if we had ever heard the coyotes?" (Yes, we have.) He added they have been lucky they haven't lost any chickens to them nor to the hawks.

Chambers Farm is located at 3257 Middle Rd. in North Clarendon, VT. It is open Monday-Saturday 11 a.m. - 6 p.m. For more information call (802) 775-5110 or visit

Legacy in the Land

by Judith Irven

Dick and I are by no means the first people to enjoy this piece of land we call 'our garden', and I am sure we will not be the last.

We know nothing about the tenacious souls who, over 150 years ago now, ventured up into the hills of Goshen to build this house and clear the land to create charcoal for the Brandon iron industry. But we do know quite a bit about the Hayes family who lived and farmed here for the first half of the twentieth century. Some of their descendents still live in Goshen and many others have visited; all have stories to share.

In 1896 Edward Hayes and his wife Jenny (Leahy) moved from Vergennes to Goshen to raise their nine sons and farm the land. Back then hill farming was an extraordinarily hard way of life and surely these nine boys were indispensable to their parent's endeavors

But, in addition to their farm work, in 1909 they found time to form the Hayes Brothers Baseball Team, and for many years this team of brothers was quite famous around here, often prevailing over teams that represented entire towns.

Another fifty years past, and the third generation of Goshen Hayes sold the homestead, along with 30 acres of land, to Cecil and Helen Romilly and their son Chris.

At the same time the remaining farmland was sold to the National Forest Service, and soon their fields, so painstakingly cleared and farmed for over a century, reverted to forestland, which is of course the true 'natural landscape' of New England.

Legacy of the farm

Although their fields have reverted to forest, closer to the house the Hayes farm legacy is still much in evidence.

And according to family members, it was those nine boys, working together, who built the impressive stone retaining wall you see in the picture. Some six-foot high and forty feet long, it was the foundation for the rear wall of the milking barn. A century later, while the milking barn is no longer standing, that wall remains as a marvelous testament of their skill and ingenuity.

A later barn, built in the 1930s, still stands tall on the hill above the house, next to the old potato field that is now my

The Hayes family also planted a row of sugar maples, twenty foot on center, and 25 feet to the west of the house. Even now these ancient maples shade the house from the afternoon sun and each fall my heart glows at the sight of their brilliant gold against the clear blue autumn sky.

And, while hidden from sight, I am especially thankful for the beautiful dark rich soil that I have inherited with the land, the gift of many cows over many years. Good soil is a blessing for every gardener.

Blueberries and Christmas Trees

After acquiring the house from Cecil Romilly back in 1978, I was perplexed by the random scattering of highbush blueberry bushes throughout the meadow behind the house, as well as by a huge stand of tightly-planted, scruffy Norway spruce that stretched up the hill, spilling over into the National Forest land behind.

Another twenty years passed before Dick and I moved here permanently. Except for regular lawn mowing, at this point the land had lain essentially untouched for almost forty years.

Now I set out to create my 'garden of a lifetime.' My first project was to create a central garden bed behind the house, starting with the largest group of blueberry bushes. I then relocated the remaining blueberry bushes into my new bed, dug in plenty of compost and carefully pruned each bush.

Since then every summer we have been rewarded with an amazing crop of fresh fruit over two whole months, with plenty more to put aside in the freezer for the winter.

But it took a chance visit from Chris Romilly about 15 years ago to throw light on the twin mysteries that we had inherited from the Romilly family: the reasons behind the random scattering of blueberry bushes in the lawn and the scruffy spruce forest on the hill.

Chris told us that in 1958 his mother planted dozens of blueberry bushes to make a huge 'S' shape in the meadow. While only a small number survived the following forty years of neglect, those that did were certainly the strongest. Hence, some sixty years on, our wonderfully prolific blueberries!

The story of the Norway spruce comes with a cautionary tale for everyone who plants a garden today, and is concerned about how it will be a half century from now.

Chris also said that his father wanted to farm Christmas trees. So he planted out a large field above the house with rows of tiny Norway spruce all set out in straight lines about 15 feet apart. Alas, not long afterwards, their plans changed and the family returned to Long Island.

Left to their own devices, Norway spruce (Picea abies) quickly grow into huge 80 foot high trees with graceful drooping branches creating a circle some 50 feet across.

But Cecil Romilly's trees were planted so close together died from lack of light. Now all that remains of his Christmas trees are tall spindly trunks with green tops.

My dream is to have his spruce forest cut for timber and to replace it with a mix of our native white spruce and balsam fir. But the job is dauntingly huge so, for the time being, the remnants of his Christmas tree farm remain up on the hill.

And looking forward

Like the Hayes and the Romillys before us, Dick and I are also stewards of this land, and we often ponder the legacy of our garden.

Surely I aim to be a responsible gardener, mindful of what I plant in the context of the wider environment and building the soil without resorting to chemicals.

While my garden perennials are unlikely to survive without a regular gardener, there is a good chance that the bones of the garden, the hardscape and woody plants, will still be here fifty years hence.

Here are some of the things that we have done over the past two decades that I hope will be enjoyed by generations

Trees and shrubs: By removing a few trees we have preserved the view that the Hayes knew and loved.

We have also planted smaller trees—including crab apples, serviceberries and river birch—to grace the property and define the garden. And finally we added long-lasting shrubs—such as lilacs, roses, azaleas, summersweet, witch-hazel and nine bark—chosen especially for their delightful color and fragrance.

Stone work: Over the years our friend and stonemason, Tammy Walsh, has built us many beautiful stonewalls. She is currently at work repairing the Hayes brothers' stone wall so that it will last for another century.

A lovely hedgerow: Along the roadside I selectively cleared the smaller trees that grew in a dense thicket, while deliberately retaining a large stand of white birch together with several young sugar maples that over time will grow large. Then I pruned the lower branches from the birch, both to show off their slender white trunks and to allow additional light to reach the native wild roses (Rosa blanca) that grow below. In June when the roses bloom it is a sight to behold.

Each year I move in more daffodils to create a special springtime treat for all who travel this quiet country road, whether on foot, by bicycle or by car.

The land, like a bond, connects us with generations gone by and those who follow.

- Remembering President John F. Kennedy

As we approach this, assassination, those of us reflect back on that tragic day. While we were aware of other Presidents being assassinated long ago starting with believed this couldn't happen in these then modern times of the 1960s.

On that November day here in Pawlet, Vermont brother Jack and I were pouring concrete for his new bulk milk truck garage. It was about 2:30 p.m. November 22 and we had a radio on suddenly, a special news report broke in!! President still there. Son Joe, who now John F. Kennedy killed by an assassin's bullet as he traveled in a motorcade in Dallas, Texas. The whole country went into shock!

In the days and years that the Fiftieth Anniversary of followed there have been President John F. Kennedy's hundreds of monuments and entities renamed as a memothat were around back then rial in his honor from Cape Kennedy to Kennedy International Airport in New York and the list goes on.

By 3:30 that afternoon, President Lincoln, I guess we the cement we were pouring was beginning to set up. At that time, I took a chisel and carved in the cement these words, PRES. J.F.K. KILLED TODAY NOV. 22, 1963. Yes, there have been many memorials to J.F.K. However, I've always wondered if this wasn't the very first one ever.

Now, 50 years later, it's operates the J&J Trucking business, says you are welcome to come and look at it if you wish here on RT 133, near Pawlet village.

Annie Gregory wrote, in 1902: "Our grandmothers used a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit—but then they used, too, the old-fashioned stone crock or open jar in which to store the fruit. Now, most preserves are put in sealed cans and only three-fourths of a pound of sugar is required to preserve fruit perfectly. Keep in a dark dry closet. If the closet is cool so much the better but always have it dry.'

MOTHER'S PICKLES

Cook in proportion one-quarter of beets to three-quarters of cabbage. Cook beets until done and chop them, but chop the cabbage raw and bring it to a good scald. Use pepper, salt and sugar, about one-half cupful of the latter. Scald vinegar and cover the pickles with this. Pack tightly in jars, and cover. If spices are used put them in a bag and scald in the vinegar.

SLICED GREEN TOMATO PICKLES

(Sour)

Take large, smooth, green tomatoes. Cut off small slice at stem and blossom end, cut the remainder in slices. To every six tomatoes allow one onion, sliced, a little grated horseradish and one-fourth of a pepper, chopped fine. Put layers in a jar with a very slight sprinkling of salt between each layer, let stand over night. In the morning remove, drain, and pack in jars. Cover with vinegar poured over boiling hot. This is a choice recipe.

—Cynthia Lester

CRAB APPLES PRESERVED

Select good sound ones and take the blows off the ends but leave on the stems. Then wash them and put into preserving kettle with plenty of water to cover. When boiling push them gently down so that they may be under the water all the time. When skin begins to crack, skim them out on a dish. Allow one and one-half pounds of sugar to each pint of juice letting boil fifteen to twenty minutes, skimming till clear. Then return the fruit to the juice, part at a time, and boil fifteen minutes. Then lift out the apples again on a dish and add the rest of the fruit to the juice, boiling them the same length of time. Fill cans with apples to the top. Boil down the juice that is left in the kettle about ten minutes and pour it over the fruit in the jars. Fasten up tight and set away.

If some of the fruit be grubby, cut out the grubs taking off stems and cook them in water enough to boil like apple sauce. Strain through a colander: and put all back with juice in the kettle, adding sugar, pound for pound, cooking fifteen minutes and skimming constantly. Put the fruit in a jar and it makes a nice marmalade.

Home Camping 🥍

by Pamela Hayes Rehlen

Camping-wise, this year summer got away from me. My husband and I didn't really get going until the middle of July. That meant that a number of places that we usually visit in our twenty-foot, Bambi model, Airstream trailer went unvisited.

I thought we might get up to West Castleton for an overnight, but things were too busy in town, and the West Castleton State Park campground closed Labor Day. Then I thought we might have an overnight foliage trip, but we missed that too.

When it's time to winterize Bambi, my husband has to drain the water, put non-toxic antifreeze into the system, disconnect the battery, and, of course, hitch Bambi up and drive it into town and store it in the bay of a one-time Texaco gas station. All that work marks the end of the 'road trip season.' This year, I realized that I couldn't face the end quite yet.

I've been noticing that a lot of Castleton people have trailers. Driving along Route 4 from Bomoseen to Hydeville to Castleton Corners and into Castleton proper, all I have to do is crane my neck and look behind the houses I'm passing. Everyone's RV seems to be white, some big, some middlesized, some tiny, and all are in different states of repair.

A homebound trailer can serve as a back yard pied-a-terre. Bev Fedolfi on summer's nights uses hers as an exotic adventure bedroom for her and her granddaughter.

As well as the homebound, there are the trailers temporarily parked, but at any moment ready to roll. Jerry and Davene Brown—who live across from Lake Bomoseen's Trak Inn Restaurant—built their house above a RV-size garage, the residence of a luxurious motor home which, when the weather gets cold, they drive around the country.

Marie Shearer maintains a 'family party' trailer that can sleep twelve. She went on ten trips this summer, but now her trailer is closed up and parked in her driveway. Mary Diefendorf says her little pop-up camper is clean and put away, ready for another year.

Last month, I was walking around the Middlebury College campus, and not far from Le Chateau I came upon two school maintenance men heaving pine boughs onto the roof of a just-constructed Sukkah.

I thought this was pretty un-kosher, but maybe college union rules don't allow students to build anything, even their own post-Rosh Hashanah symbolic-wilderness shelters.

Anyway, the idea of a harvest-time retreat sounded pretty appealing to me. It made me think of my own little retreat back in Castleton.

When I got home it came to me, looking out at Bambi, still sitting at the end of our driveway, that my husband and I could take our last summer camping trip without going anywhere. We could just go home camping.

For several years, we'd left this trailer under the pine trees in the back of our property. Surrounded by deep drifts of snow, Bambi always looked inviting, even beckoning. One spring, we had a birthday party dinner in Bambi, and one year we hitched it up and drove it down to Middletown Springs for a Father's Day meal after the town's Strawberry Festival. So we have a history of being moderately creative in our use of this little RV.

We decided our home camping trip would be Friday to Saturday. We carried out the usual things, bedding and our pillows and the books we were reading (mine was Erik Larson's In the Garden of the Beasts) and Willie Nelson CDs.

We stocked the refrigerator and decided that we'd just pretend that our close-by home was a campground bathhouse—although Bambi has a very workable, if minute, bathroom and shower.

It turned cold, and it rained all day. But that was no problem. Terrible weather translates to the utmost Bambi-interior

We arranged to have our Birdseye Diner dinner delivered later in the evening. Wine man Rob Staudter down at the Village Store found us a nice bottle of red. We rounded up cheeses and snacks.

Later, I found myself munching on a Whitney Lamy cracker as I looked out through my rain-spattered, submarinelike window at the back of Whitney Lamy's barn.

It was a wonderful night. The wind blew. Rain thrummed on the aluminum roof. We turned on our little furnace. It was not hard to imagine that we were far, far away from Castleton.

The next day it was still gray out, and cold, and pretty dreary. It was the kind of nice-weather-is-all-over morning that would have gotten me down in some circumstances—like if we were far from home facing a long dismal drive back.

But we weren't. We headed up to the pretend-bathhouse, ready for a hot shower and then a hearty breakfast.

We turned to each other and said, "Home camping is the

Pied Beauty

Glory be to God for dappled things-

Praise Him.

For skies of couple-color as a brindled cow;

For rose-moles all in stipple upon trout that swim; Fresh-firecoal chestnut-falls; finches' wings;

Landscapes plotted and pieced—fold, fallow, and plow; And all trades, their gear and tackle and trim. All things counter, original, spare, strange;

Whatever is fickle, freckled (who knows how?) With swift, slow; sweet, sour; adazzle, dim; He fathers-forth whose beauty is past change;

Holiday Fairs of Vermont Coming to Rutland!

Vermont Farmers Market to bring you their outstanding unique events. The Holiday Fairs are coming to the Holiday Inn on Rt. 7 in Rutland, VT on Saturday, November 16 and Saturday, December 14 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

These are the largest Holiday shows of their kind in Southern Vermont. Here you will find over sixty vendors presenting you with every kind of Vermont-made craft that you can imagine. Also, a wide range of Thanksgiving and Christmas décor.

Our Country Bakers bring you that exquisite taste of Vermont for your holiday meals and parties. Home baked breads, many varieties of pies, fudge and so much more.

Our Gourmet Specialty Food folks have the flavor of Vermont in maple syrup, maple sugar and maple-flavored products such as maple dressings, maple mustard and maple-coated nuts. Have you ever tried maple pepper or cinnamon flavored maple

And then there are jams and jellies, the most varieties (over 100) that you can find anywhere. Have you ever tried cranberry/raspberry jam, horseradish jam, garlic jam, ginger marmalade or pear almond jam?

There are prepared foods, fall veggies, apples and freshpressed cider!

If you wish to pick up visit vtfarmersmarket.org.

Once again it's time for the bakery items just before the holidays, talk to our vendors. Many will take orders, or make it special for you.

Likewise, if you would like a specific, custom-made craft designed to your wishes some of our crafters will do that. Talk to them, have it created!

You may wish to ship specialty foods, certain craft items and even foods to friends and relatives across the country.

Small items travel best by the U.S. Postal Service in low-fee, flat rate boxes, usually in three days or less in the 48 states. It's time to make these plans now! Folks everywhere love receiving "Vermont Brand" gifts, something that is really grown or made in America, and in this special place in America, "Vermont."

Unlike many high profile craft fairs that charge admission, our Holiday Fairs are always admission free. If you have ever traveled around Vermont, we think that you will come to realize we have pretty appealing prices on many items as well. So, come join thousands of others for this unique Vermont holiday shopping experience.

The Holiday Inn is on Rt. 7 south in Rutland, VT. For more information about the Vermont Farmers Market Holiday Fairs call Sherry Smith at (518) 796-2609 or

Small Happenings

There isn't much to write about.
The day is almost through.
Nothing at all has happened—
At least, there's nothing new.
I washed the dishes, made the beds,
And finished the new dress,
The green and black, and though old stuff,
It's got to do, I guess.

I've swept the floor and fed the cat—Oh, yes, I made some hash,
And tried to cook some turnips that
Were bound they would not mash.
I wrote two letters, knit some lace,
And read a page or two
In my new book, and now again,
At night, I write to you!

Do Not Go Gentle Into That Good Night

Do not go gentle into that good night, Old age should burn and rave at close of day; Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

Though wise men at their end know dark is right, Because their words had forked no lightning they Do not go gentle into that good night.

Good men, the last wave by, crying how bright Their frail deeds might have danced in a green bay, Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

Wild men who caught and sang the sun in flight, And learn, too late, they grieved it on its way, Do not go gentle into that good night.

Grave men, near death, who see with blinding sight Blind eyes could blaze like meteors and be gay, Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

And you, my father, there on the sad height, Curse, bless, me now with your fierce tears, I pray. Do not go gentle into that good night. Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

Aviary A New Exhibition Celebrating Birds

BigTown Gallery in Rochester, VT is presenting an exhi-teacher and best-selling aubition celebrating birds entitled Aviary, on display through November 30. It is free and open o the public.

The exhibition salutes our bird friends as they undertake their winter journeys, with photography by Virginia Beahan, Kirsten Hoving, Tad Merrick and Rosamond Purcell; collage by Varujan Boghosian, Jessica Ferguson, Marcy Hermansader, and Erika Lawlor Schmidt; painting by Gail Boyajian, Anda Dubinskis, Nancy Taplin, and 19th century British Field Book watercolors; textiles by Pat dipaula Klein and Bhakti Ziek; sculpture by David Bumbeck and Hugh Townley; woodblock print by Anthony Lapaglia; and featuring birdcarving by local artists Remy Lary and Floyd Scholz and guest artist Tom Head.

BigTown Conversations presents a lecture by Floyd Scholz, Master Birdcarver, entitled "A Love of Birds, A Passion for Art" on Saturday, November 2nd at BigTown Gallery at 3 p.m. VINS will have live raptors present.

Floyd Scholz, long-time Hancock, VT resident and founder of the Vermont Raptor Academy, is recognized as one of Projects. Seating for the lecture is limited, please RSVP to the preeminent Birdcarvers in the world today. Mastercarver, reserve your place.

thor, Scholz's portrayal of eagles, hawks, owls and other species have won him a following among museums and collectors worldwide.

Mr. Scholz will talk about his 43 years of birdcarving. Floyd will take us through his process of transforming an ordinary block of Tupelo wood into a majestic bird.

Audience members will have the first opportunity to enter a raffle for a chance to win a Redtailed Hawk feather, carved and painted by Floyd Scholz, which he has donated to benefit BigTown

Tad Merrick—Northern Goshawk, 1993, cibachrome photographic print.

Where Natural History Meets Art

The Birds of Vermont Mu-self-guided walks through seum—where natural history meets art—is a destination tourists. Since 1987, the Museum has offered a blend of natural history, traditional art, and contemporary art providing a one-of-a kind informal science educational experience.

The Birds of Vermont Museum gift shop is a great place for holiday shopping for family and friends, or for that special treat for you.

The museum is open by appointment from November 1 through April 30, but staff is there in the off-season and you need only call to visit the museum or gift shop. The shop will also be open November 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to accommodate Thanksgiving weekend holiday shoppers. And they will also have a table at the Richmond Holiday Fair on December 7.

ated objects to puzzles, Tshirts, and toys you can find The Museum has a wide selection of natural history books, children's stories, and information about birds, gardens, woodcarving and nature journaling.

Located on a dirt road in Huntington, VT, the museum native flora and fauna.

Inside, there are over 500 for children, neighbors, and life-size, biologically accurate wood carvings of birds in natural habitat settings, and changing exhibit spaces showcasing current art and science projects of the region. Most carvings are Vermont birds, with several carvings of tropical, and extinct or endangered North American birds.

> Bob Spear, our master wood carver, has carved over 95% of the pieces. His goal, which became the Museum's mission, is 'to provide education, to nurture an appreciation of the environment, and to study birds and their habitats using woodcarvings and other museum resources.' To do this the Museum delivers environmental education for elementary, high school, college, and adult learners.

The Birds of Vermont Mu-From one-of-a kind cre- seum is located at 900 Sherman Hollow Rd. in Huntington, VT. The Museum is open that unusual and perfect gift. seven days a week from May 1 – Oct 31 and by appointment at all other times.

No Strings Marionette Co. Premiers "The Three Pigs"

No Strings Marionette Company premiers a brand-new show for family entertainment on Thanksgiving weekend in their presentation of "The Three Pigs" at Chandler Music Hall in Randolph, VT on Saturday November 30 at 11 a.m.

Dan Baginski and Barbara Paulson, co-founders of the company, bring their creativity and sense of humor to this new look at an old tale. Their new production offers audiences a hilarious romp through an opera stage, an artist's studio, and the problem-solving mind of an innovative designer of buildings. An original script, handmade puppets, and fanciful scenery bring this imaginative tale to life.

Baginski and Paulson have toured New England for more than fifteen years, performing at hundreds of schools, libraries, festivals and community events. They have dazzled tens of thousands of children and adults with their marionette magic.

Although many puppet shows curtain off the puppeteers from the audience, Baginski and Paulson perform in full view of their audience. "We find that children are interested in seeing how the puppets work and how we do things," says Baginski. After the performance, children and their parents are invited to inspect the marionettes and the other tools of the puppeteers' trade.

Given these miniature actors' proven hold on audience attention, Dan and Barbara avail themselves of this golden opportunity to impart themes of sharing and giving which are artfully presented in their production.

Paulson and Baginski leave their audiences with something to think about, "entertainment with a twist", says Baginski. In their newest production, audience members discover how a sensational singer, a prolific painter, and an industrious architect deal with the non-stop taunting of a puffed-up bully. Patrons are invited to visit Chandler's annual Holiday bazaar before and after the show. Shoppers will find an array of handmade gifts and delicious treats from more than fifty artisans and specialty food producers. All seats for this premier performance are $6. General admission tickets may be ordered online at www.chandlerarts.org by calling Kathy at (802) 728-6464 between 3-6 p.m. weekdays. They can also be purchased at the Chandler Box Office before the performance. Chandler Music Hall is wheelchair accessible.

- Enjoy a Native Vermont Turkey This Holiday Season -

There's nothing like a Vermont fresh turkey for your holiday table! Our cold autumns make for extra-tender, juicy meat, and the flavor is really better. Call ahead and place your order with a farmer who raises them, or check your local country store to see if they're taking orders.

Find out why the fancy New York restaurants (and fancy Vermont restaurants, too, for that matter) insist on Vermont birds for their tables. Of course, you can expect to pay more than you will for a cheap loss-leader turkey at the supermarket, but you won't even notice the price when you taste your Vermont turkey. You can skimp somewhere else, but this year, do something spectacular for your family and buy your holiday turkey from a local farmer!

Singer/Songwriter Peter Mulvey at Chandler

Singer/songwriter Peter Mulvey brings his eclectic music and unique style to Chandler Music Hall in Randolph, VT on Saturday November 9 at 7:30 p.m.

Over the past 20 years, Peter Mulvey has pursued a restless, diverse path as a writer and musician immersing himself in Tin Pan Alley jazz, modern acoustic music, poetry, narrative, and Americana stylings.

He tours continually, feeling that "when you love what you do, you can work all the time." In addition to his own performances as a headliner, he has shared the stage with such notable musicians as Emmylou Harris, Richard Thompson, Ani DiFranco, The Indigo Girls, and Greg Brown, and has attracted audiences that stretch from Anchorage to Amsterdam.

In every aspect of his career, Mulvey draws on a wide range of influence. He is always reading, listening, and eager to hear new poetry, modern minimalist composers, old-time fiddle tunes, Argentinean trip-hop, or top-shelf bar bands. Said The Irish Times, "Peter Mulvey is consistently the most original and dynamic of the US singer-songwriters to tour these shores. A phenomenal performer with huge energy, a quick fire, quirky take on life, and an extraordinary guitar style. A joy to see."

Mulvey is convinced of the value of live performances for both the musician and the audience and strives to make a fresh, vital moment out of everything he and the audience bring to the table on a particular night. "People need this. I need this. To come together in a room, to try to make music come alive, for real, for right now, and then to let it go and that is the whole deal for me."

Mulvey's fifteenth record, The Good Stuff, was released in March 2012. His twenty years on the road, performing songs from his own catalog and from a vast and varied collection of classic and obscure covers, provide the foundation for this recording.

Recorded in just three days, the performances feature upright bassist Paul Kochanski, violinist Randy Sabien, guitarist David Goodrich, and drummer Jason Smith, Many of the songs on Mulvey's list were unfamiliar to some or all of the musicians in the room and they created an arrangement on the fly and recorded it immediately. "When everything isn't planned head of time, it can be magical how each musician finds a way into the song," says Mulvey.

The point of departure is always a great song, a great classic, whether enshrined in the canon or not. Mulvey's latest record is an argument for the Great American Songbook not as a musty tome, but as a living, breathing document, always open to renewal and revision.

Reserved tickets to Peter Mulvey's performance at Chandler can be ordered online at www.chandler-arts.org or by calling the Chandler Box Office 3-6 p.m. weekdays. Chandler Music Hall is handicap accessible and an assisted listening system is available.

Chandler Music Hall is located at 71-73 Main St., Randolph, VT. For more information call (802) 728-9878. www.chandler-arts.org

My Heart's In the Highlands

My heart's in the Highlands, my heart is not here: My heart's in the Highlands a-chasing the deer; Chasing the wild deer, and following the roe, My heart's in the Highlands wherever I go. Farewell to the Highlands, farewell to the North, The birthplace of valour, the country of worth; Wherever I wander, wherever I rove, The Hills of the Highlands for ever I love.

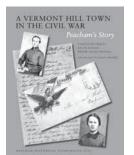

Farewell to the mountains high covered with snow; Farewell to the straths and green valleys below; Farewell to the forests and wild-hanging woods; Farewell to the torrents and loud-pouring floods; My heart's in the Highlands, my heart is not here, My heart's in the Highlands a-chasing the deer; Chasing the wild deer, and following the roe, My heart's in the Highlands wherever I go.

NEWS FROM VERMONT -

Language of the Day

by Burr Morse

I got a distinct message on October 12 in another language, the universal language of "changing seasons". It came with our first snowflakes and was instantly translated in vastly different ways; to our Hawaiian guests, it brought appropriate awe but to me, Vermonter of many winters, it brought a stern "Oh c'mon, not this early!". It was, however, real, unavoidable, and most especially, nature. Nature...I wonder if she'll simply "photocopy" last winter's lethargy or "sock it to us"? If it's the latter, my thoughts go to the wild animals who will have four months of struggle ahead.

My son Tommy recently brought in a "Field and Stream" caliber photo of a six-point buck he'd captured on his digital camera. The buck stood majestically under an apple tree just a stone's throw from his house. With both hunting season and winter coming right up I wonder, will this guy's future include "frigid Vermont" or "Frigidaire"? One of our employees, Sheryl Larkin brought in a whole portfolio of Vermont wildlife taken by her husband's webcam down in their apple orchard—bear, deer, raccoons, turkeys, coyotes—yikes, I thought, Orwell's "Animal Farm" and "1984" come alive right there in Northfield, Vermont!

"I'll light a fire tonight and sleep peacefully, knowing there's a roof over my head and a total absence of wild camels'

Folks always get a kick out of the Vermont maple process, including my suggestion, after removing my cap, that drinking maple sap causes baldness. I then go on to the subject of local varmints that shatter our maple sugar world. Deer, moose and squirrels pose a three-pronged attack these days on our plastic tubing systems. Of the three, squirrels with their incessant gnawing, are by far the worst.

Recently a southern lady spoke up after I had showed the picture of a sap line severed by one of the varmints, "c'n ah assume from yah remahks that y'all have an abundance o' squirrels?" Our sugarhouse presentation here at Morse Farm reveals some humorous "peculiarities" of the dance o' baldheaded squirrels. That not only "brought the house down" but activated my creative bent toward a future Seussianesque children's book...how 'bout "Bald Heads and Scram"?

On the same day, another of our sugarhouse guests, a guy from Down Under, wanted to tell me about a certain pest they have these days in Australia's outback. "Thought y'd loike t'heah abaaat one of ahh pists back howhm, myte-kimmels!" Being still in the "squirrel" mode, I stupidly said, "you mean camel squirrels—do they have humped backs?" He shot back quicker'n a Darwin dust storm, "no, no myte—oiye mean kimmels—bloody stinkin' kimmels!" He went on to say that it's not only kangaroos posing pest problems back home but feral camels (someone once brought them in from

"bloody Ayrebia"). "Th'buggahs'll crash down ahh finces an at 'noite whinn we're aslipe in ahh ricks, they'll crush us t'dith!" Being rather influent in this "second language." I questioned him about "ricks" and learned they sleep under the stars over there in mattresses made of hay (ricks). Stupidly I asked about the rain—"Good hiivens myte, we havve no ryne in th'outbahck!"

There's certainly no lack of variety in our foliage season sugarhouse. We see folks from all over the world but most especially, we hear about their customs, hear how they talk, and learn new things from them. We also learn to "dream" of things like bald-headed squirrels in VERmont maple trees-what a "hoot"!

As I close this writing, I think again of Northfield and East Montpelier wildlife: bear, raccoons, coyotes, turkeys, prizewinning bucks, and, worst of all, squirrels. Yup, they're all part of life around here just like the guarantee that winter's Brrrrrr...think I'll light a fire tonight and sleep peacefully, knowing there's a roof over my head and a total absence of wild camels.

→ Plants For Wildlife **→

by Dr. Leonard Perry,

Extension Professor, University of Vermont

With fall clean-up well underway, most gardeners, myself included, are clearing out undergrowth and unwanted vegetation from around their garden and homes. However, what we may not want may be wanted, and even needed, during the winter months by wildlife.

For instance, cherries, whether wild or planted, provide food for about 70 different species of song and game birds. Crabapples supply food for birds, particularly the purple finch, blue jay, northern oriole, cedar waxwing, and robin.

White cedars, so prevalent in Vermont, are an excellent source of food and shelter for many birds. They eat the seeds, and in winter, the evergreen branches provide cover, a place to escape the fierce winter winds.

Brambles, especially blackberries and raspberries that are a good food source for birds and small animals in summer, also provide a protective haven for wildlife in the winter. Alders, one of the first trees to reappear on land that has been cleared and allowed to regrow, offer twigs and buds for munching by beavers and rabbits, and a protective cover.

Most people are familiar with the red-osier dogwood. This native twiggy shrub is found growing along streams and in abandoned fields and has brilliant scarlet stems in mid-winter. It provides browsing for deer, bear, beaver, and rabbit. Many species of birds enjoy its bluish-black fruit, found in clusters on the ends of the stems. Ruffed grouse, pheasant, and wild turkeys especially like it. Its low growing branches provide good cover for many of these birds.

The hophornbeam, another native tree, has fruits in the fall that are a secondary food for grouse. In winter, the tree buds are this bird's primary food.

So, this fall as you clean up some of the brush around your yard, why not leave some for the wildlife this winter. They'll be glad you did.

author Megan Price.

Price's three-volume Vermont Wild, Adventures of Fish & Game Wardens book series has been a best seller at many independent Vermont bookstores and gift shops for several years, selling more than 23,000 copies.

Now, Price has reached into Maine, to chronicle the often dangerous, frequently wacky adventures of retired warden Parker Tripp, who earned the coveted title of Chief Warden before his retirement in 1998. Bob Lutz, a retired Vermont warden and talented caricaturist, provides the illustrations for each story in the new Maine Wild.

"From being bitten by bear cubs, to having a pickaxe swung at his head, to being shot at, Warden Tripp's 23-year career was action packed," Price said. "Parker's stories will have readers on the edge of their seat and laughing at the same time."

Tripp said, "Megan has done a tremendous job of writing my stories. A former award-winning reporter, she really has noted. "There's no bad language or excessive violence. Children and adults enjoy the stories of true warden encounters with wild moose, bears and wacky poachers. Anyone of any age who loves outdoor adventures will enjoy these stories. I really admire these wardens.'

Published in paperback by Pine Marten Press, Maine Wild, Adventures of Fish & Game Wardens contains 280 pages and features a cover illustration of a black bear cub falling from a tree with Parker making a desperate grab for it. The book is designed to be stuffed into a backpack, taken into the woods and read. All four of the books feature water-resistant covers and large, eye-friendly type. Each book sells for $19.95.

The Maine Wild and Vermont Wild books are available at all independent bookstores, Kinney Drugs and many other locations throughout Vermont. They can also be ordered online using Paypal or by mailing a check. For a sneak preview of the Maine Wild stories, visit ParkerTripp.com or go to the publisher's website, www. Each year in November, ter Miller presents his most Chester's Misty Valley Books invites Vermont writers who have written admirable books to come to the First Universalist Church in the Stone Village, on Sundays at 2 p.m., to share their work.

As has been the case since the beginning of Vermont Voices twelve years ago, Archer Mayor, Vermont's favorite mystery writer and raconteur, returns this year on Sunday, November 3, with his new-and 24th-Joe Gunther tale, Three Can Keep a Secret, which unfolds this time with Hurricane Irene as a backdrop. Amidst the turmoil and disaster relief, it's up to Gunther and his team to learn what really happened with two corpses one missing—and what secret "The Governor" might still have locked in her brain.

On Sunday, November 10, photographer and writer Perecent book, A Lifetime of Vermont People.

The following Sunday, November 17, historian Howard Coffin will present his book Something Abides, Discovering the Civil War in Today's Vermont, a fascinating tour, town by town, with stories, anecdotes, and information about Vermonters and their role in the Civil War.

Honorary Vermonter Jon Katz (he lives just over the border in New York) will talk about his new book, Second Chance Dog, on Sunday, November 24.

A book signing and reception will follow the events, all of which are free.

I Left My Sole in Vermont

A Walker's Journey and Guide Through Central Vermont Back Roads

by Nicole Grubman

(Published by Red Barn Books of Vermont)

One thinks of the month of November as a time to move inside, put gardens finally to bed, and get tuned for winter. Think again, says Nicole Grubman, who has written an enticing guide to walking around the back roads of central Vermont, especially during this month.

And she writes:

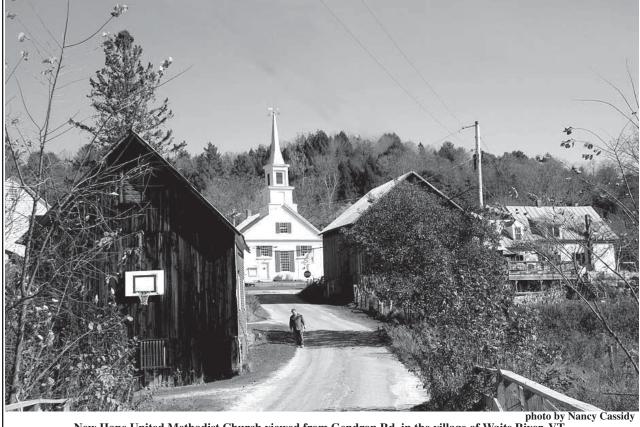

"Times of transition (November and March) are great for wandering and wondering. Seasons of expectancy and yearning, they are periods when being and doing are more balanced...the unobscured landscape encourages us to become more transparent. There is space to pause, circle ourselves, and explore what lies along the perimeter."

Book Review by Charles Sutton

And that she does, in a sensitive and ever-observant way on 23 hidden loops for walking, covering these areas: Mad River Valley, the backsides of Montpelier, Calais, Middlesex, Northfield, Plainfield Village and beyond, Marshfield, Cabot, Berlin Pond, and Waterbury Center.

On each of her walks she notes "how treasures emerge such as old cellar holes next to overgrown lilac trees, timid black bears lumbering along the backs of fallow field, orchards heavy with ripe fruits, family graveyards tucked in odd corners, abandoned houses filled with photographs of

Reasons cited for walking this time of year are: seethrough landscapes; crisp, fresh air; no road dust; the smell of woodsmoke; silence; and even the "dark silhouettes of wild turkeys gliding across barren fields."

New Hope United Methodist Church viewed from Gendron Rd. in the village of Waits River, VT.

On her own hikes she dresses carefully for weather conditions, has a camera and notebook, and takes water and small snacks like trail mix, an apple or energy bar. Her book gives safety tips and advice on proper walking forms, and tips for hill walking.

Maps for all the loops are included as well as detailed instructions like where to start and finish, what turns to make, and distances. A bonus is historical write-ups on many of the locations.

Nicole urges would-be walkers to explore those dirt back roads, many which often turn into snowmobile trails or logging roads. And she writes: "These are roads whose origins are forgotten footfalls of people, for whom it made more sense to meander around rather than break through."

In one of her more unusual walks she tells about going to Dumpling Hill off Rt. 12 north of Montpelier. "It is a friendly walk with dogs that will follow you down the road, bright colored houses, and of course, the Dumpling Hill mailbox. When you visit don't forget to stop and leave a note.

She says this light blue mailbox is different. "It begged to be reopened like it belonged to the road itself. I peeked inside and found a little notebook with a woodcut print that read "sugaring," a red ribbon, and a pen. A message in the notebook invited one to stop and listen to things we don't hear anywhere else. Have picnic, walk a bit, and leave it clean for others. Leave us a note." Messages left by others went back two years. On another visit the box contained a message for a 'Welcome Potluck' for new families. Just go to the "house with the three chimneys."

Nicole is using her walking as a meditative aid to her work in human services. She is currently working towards a graduate degree in psychology and mental health counseling. In this work she will be sharing the messages she has learned about life while on the back roads:

Walking on roads taught me that evolving and growing are more about reclaiming and remembering than anything new. Finding the hidden treasures along those dusty roads, I uncovered the beautiful, forgotten parts of myself. Loop walks guided me, after years of running away, back to the place where I started. In this continual act of returning, I led myself home."

Walk #6—Horn of the Moon, East Montpelier

by Nicole Grubman

How to get there:

From Montpelier: Head up Main Street through town and stay straight through the roundabout. Make a quick left on North Street and continue uphill to the junction with Sparrow Farm Road.

Horn of the Moon is a hilly road that begins by crossing over the Wrightsville Reservoir and weaves through a network of delightful East Montpelier roads. It connects the section of Route 14 heading toward Worcester with the County Road in East Montpelier. I asked the head of the East Montpelier Historical Society where Horn of the Moon got its name. This was his response:

As the story goes, when the first white settlers came to what

There's a happy ending next spring when the squash sends up a new plant with two tiny squashes. "Wow!" Sophie tells them. You look just like your mom!" Guess where they end up? She names them Bonnie and Baxter.

Sophie's Squash by Pat Zeitlow Miller and illustrated by Anne Wilsdorf is published by Random House. You can find it at your bookseller for $16.99.

A Practical Journal for Friends of the Environment was then the Town of Montpelier around 1789, there was an old Indian living in the northwest corner of the town. He told someone that when his cow wandered away he found it under the shadow of Long Meadow Hill but told the listener that he found it on the Horn of the Moon.

This response seems like complete nonsense. Maybe the shadow of Long Meadow Hill looks like the Horn of the Moon. I tried to find both myself, but the shadow remained elusive, and I have yet to spot the horn of the moon. But persisting with my search gives me an excuse to return to this loop again and again.

This walk begins less than a ten-minute drive from Montpelier at the corner of North Street and Sparrow Farm Road. Ideally, it should be finished at sunset. The views at this road junction look west toward the Worcester range and make for a gorgeous end to the day. There's also nothing better than completing a walk, watching the sun retreat behind the mountains, and heading into Montpelier for a microbrew and a chat with the locals at Three Penny Taproom. Check out their website at www.threepennytaproom.com.

The walk itself is perfectly balanced, starting out with a wooded, modest ascent up North Street. Notice the whitewashed farmhouses, gnarled maple trees, and dry stack walls that line the road. Throughout the walk old and new are seamlessly woven. The silence of the old walls grounds the rhythmic sounds of rural life still active even in the "month of waiting" (March)...The Casella trash truck grinding through gears to get up the icy roads, the scraping of the plow making better access for the Montpelier commuters, the soft bubbling sound of the road breathing as the ice thaws, and the bark of golden retrievers dutifully announcing a stranger's passing.

Take North Street until it ends and turn left on Horn of the Moon Road. After climbing up a steep, short hill, the road dramatically curves, exposing expansive and sweeping views of the valley and the looming Worcester range. The rest of the walk, including the Sanders Circle Extension (taking you back farther into the bowl of the valley), is a feast for both the eyes and the soul. Complete with open views, fields mixed with woods, and a hilly but not too steep terrain, this loop has it all. The walk ends in a charming fashion as you turn left off Jacobs Road onto Sparrow Farm Road. The final leg climbs back up to North Street, passing by Sparrow Farm and continuing along a row of large sugar maples.

Christmas in Vermont at Three Stallion Inn

by Charles Sutton

Families-large or small-who have ever dreamed of spending the Christmas holiday season in a country setting should consider The Three Stallion Inn located in central Vermont in the midst of a large variety of holiday musical events, outdoors sports, and winter festivities.

For outdoors enthusiasts, the Inn has its own 35 kilometers of trails for hiking, mountain biking and cross-country skiing with rental skis and snowshoes available.

Its Fitness Center, good any time of the year, includes a treadmill and other exercise and rowing machines, hand weights, a whirlpool, hot tub and a sauna. Mosr rooms at the Inn feature bathrooms with heated, marble floors and steam showers.

Holiday rates are $387 per night for two including a hearty Vermont breakfast, three-course dinner, taxes and gratuities plus free use of the XC trails, sauna and hot tub.

Dining at the Inn

An added incentive to stay at Three Stallion Inn is the restaurant, run by the well-known caterers, Travelin' Willy B's, who have leased the restaurant, tavern, and its catering & conference facilities from owners Sam and Jinny Sammis.

Willy Walker and his wife Beth met and worked together at the Three Stallion Inn. They started their own catering business and developed a reputation for delicious continentalstyle food featuring local and regional ingredients.

In preparation for the newly opened restaurant, the tavern area, previously known as Morgan's Pub, has been renovated with walls featuring rich colors, cocktail tables with swivel stools, and a reconfigured bar—all adding to the room's comfortable feeling.

The menu features eight appetizers that can substitute as ing. Adm. There will be eight taps of local and continental beers and wines by the glass or bottle.

Willy and Beth invite you to step in and enjoy a fresh- uvm.edu/laneseries. made meal at an Inn that welcomes both locals and visitors.

An historic property

Mountain Stock Farm in 1971 with its historic farm buildings that housed a major breeding center for Morgan horses from 1927 to 1962.

Its horse fame was later transferred to skiing when, by chance, Sammis was put in contact with Olympic skiers Kim Mumford and Bob Gray who were looking for a site to run an informal ski touring center. The couple was offered the use of the farm on a sweat-equity basis. They patched up the old buildings, heated by wood, cooked on a wood stove, and skied through the surrounding woods. They were there for five years and established the place as a cross country ski center. It went on to become The Three Stallion Inn offering all-season recreation at their front door.

Holiday Festivities in the Area

Vermont communities and organizations are offering a wide variety of events throughout the holiday season including music, dance, winter festivals, and fun for children. All major ski slopes will be operating and the Inn is an easy drive to Killington, Suicide Six, Stowe, Mad River Glen, and Bolton Valley. The following are some of the holiday and seasonal events offered in central Vermont.
